HOW'S YOUR HEALTH

Symptoms May Indicate When to Call a Doctor

When should you call a doctor? There are times when home treatment or even "TLC" is all that is necessary to treat a minor ailment, scrape, or bruise. However, there may be ocassions when the doctor should be called without delay. Symptoms may range from appetite changes or weight loss, to numbness, swelling or lumps to bleeding or a fever.

Knowing the importance of symptoms or any combinations of symptoms can prove helpful in avoiding unnecessary phone calls or visits to the doctor's office. When a decision has been made to call the doctor about a symptom, it is important to keep in mind that he is not likely to prescribe immediately for a complaint which is often only a symptom. He will first want to determine what is causing the symptom before prescribing medications or treatment because a given symptom may have many causes.

The Minnesota Medical Association (MMA) lists the following circumstances as a general guide to help determine whether medical aid should be sought:

+ When the patient's complaint or symptoms are too severe to be endured, such as abdominal pain of a gall bladder or appendicitis attack, kidney colic, or sudden severe chest pains, immediate relief is then the purpose of calling the doctor without delay.

+ When the symptom or symptoms persit for more than a few days or a week, and do not appear to be due to some easily identified cause. A bleeding nose from being struck is one thing; a nose that bleeds constantly or frequently in the absence of injury is quite a different matter, and demands medical attention.

+ When the symptom or symptoms return repeatedly for no readily recognizable cause. Digestive disturbances due to repeated overindulgence are one thing; constant digestive distress despite great care and moderation in eating requires medical investigation without too much delay.

+ When in doubt, it is safer to call the doctor than to take a chance.

MMA Stresses Importance of Recognizing Heart Attack Symptoms

Knowing the warning signs of a heart attack, advises the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA).

A heart attack occurs when blood is withheld from an area of the heart.

The responsible villian is a slowly developing coronary heart disease called atherosclerosis. In atherosclerosis, fatty deposits which harden into patches and become covered with scar-like tissues roughen and narrow arteries along the inner lining much as lime deposits affect the inside of a water pipe. As the arteries narrow, there is little or no room for blood to pass. If a blood clot forms in the narrow artery, the supply of blood to the heart is stopped. The result is a heart attack.

Sometimes the resulting heart attack is referred to as coronary thrombosis, coronary occlusion or myocardia infarction. Regardless of the terminology, when the early warning signs of a heart attack seem apparent, it's important to seek medical help immediately to reduce the risk of a fatal heart attack.

The early warning signs of a heart attack may vary somewhat for each heart attack, but the basic symptoms are usually the same — uncomfortable pressure or pain in the center of the chest for more than five minutes is only one sign of a heart attack, but it is the most common. Unfortunately, some heart attack victims disregard the symptoms of heart attack for a case of simple indigestion because the symptoms are similar. Others ignore the warning signs because they deny that they could possibly be suffering from a heart attack.

According to the MMA, the usual heart attack signals are: fullness, a sense of pressure or pain in the center of the chest. The pain may spread to the shoulders, neck or arms. The heart attack victim may also experience dizziness, fainting, sweating, nausea or shortness of breath.

Remember, a heart attack can strike anyone. When it does occur, there's no time for delay. Whether it's happening to you or someone in your company, get emergency medical care without delay.

MMA Warns Against Hot Weather Heath Risks

Suddenly it's summer and the risk of heat illness is with us. Today we may feel that cold, wintry blasts will never leave us but we will soon find ourselves sweltering in hot summer weather with pleanty of sunshine and high humidity thrown in for good measure. It's also the season for sunstroke and heat exhaustion, warns the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA).

Sunstroke or heatstroke can be a life threatening emergency. It is a disturbance in the body's heat regulating, system caused by extremely high body temperature due to exposure to the heat. It is possible for the body heat to be 106 degrees or higher. The skin is hot, red, and dry and there is no sweating. The pulse rate is rapid and strong. The victim may be confused or even lose consciousness.

The MMA suggests the following treatment measures for sunstroke or heatstroke: If the body temperature is 105 degrees or higher, remove clothing and place the victim into a tub of cold (not iced) water. If a tub is not available, spray the victim with a hose or sponge the bare skin with cold water or rubbing alcohol or, apply cold packs. Continue the procedure until the victim's temperature drops to 101 or 102 degrees.

Check the victim's body temperature constantly to prevent over chilling. Get medical hep promptly. Don't give the victim alcoholic beverages or stimulants such as coffee or tea.

Heat exhaustion is another form of heat illness which can occur after prolonged exposure to high temperature and high humidity. It can occur indoors as well as out.

The victim's body temperature may be normal or only slightly elevated. The appearance of the skin become pale and clammy and there is profuse sweating.

The victim may complain of being tired, weak, dizzy or have a headache. Nausea, cramps, or fainting are other sysmptoms which the heat exhaustion victim may experience. To treat heat exhaustion, move the victim into a shady or cooler area. Have the victim lie down and raise the feet eight to twelve inches. Loosen clothing; place a cool, wet cloth on the victim's forehead and body. Use an electric fan, or if possible, get the victim into an air conditioned room. If the victim is not vomiting, give sips of fruit junice or cool salt water (one teaspoon of salt per glass). Give the victim one half of a glass of liquid every fifteen minutes for one hour. Don't attempt to force fluids if the victim starts vomiting.

A Consumer Service from the Office of the Minnesota Attorney General

INVOLUNTARY COMMITMENT AND STATE LAW

The decision to have a friend or relative committed for mental illness or chemical dependency is always an agonizing one. But sometimes when all efforts to get the person to seek the help he or she needs have failed, involuntary commitment to a facility specializing in diagnosis and treatment of such problems may be the only answer.

Minnesota law, which is designed to protect all who are involved, contains detailed procedures for such a move. These procedures may be used by any "interested person." An "interested person" includes a friend, legal guardian, spouse, parent, adult child or next of kin.

Under Minnesota law, voluntary treatment is preferable to involuntary commitment which generally means confinement to an in-patient treatment facility. If a person refuses voluntary admission, commitment procedures can be initiated by the "interested person." A request to conduct a preliminary investigation should be sent to the county Social Service Department in the county where the proposed patient lives or stays. A team of mental health professionals will then interview the proposed patient and others who have knowledge of the person's condition and review relevant medical records. They will also explore alternatives to institutionalized treatment. If the team recommends commitment, they will notify the county attorney. The county attorney may then file a petition for commitment. If the county attorney declines to file, any interested person may still file such a petition.

Once a commitment petition has been filed, the probate court will appoint an attorney to represent the proposed patient and an examiner to evaluate the patient's mental condition. An examiner may be any licensed physician or licensed consulting psychologist with knowledge, training and experience in the diagnosis and treatment of the alleged problem. The patient may also request the appointment of a second examiner of his or her choice. Both examiners must prepare written evaluations of the proposed patient which are submitted to the court not less than 48 hours prior to the commitment hearing.

A commitment hearing is generally held within 14 days from the date the commitment petition is filed. The presiding judge may exclude any person from the hearing whose presence, the judge decides, is unnecessary. However, the court must allow any person requested by the proposed patient to attend and testify. The patient and the petitioner may present both oral testimony and written evidence. The judge will evaluate all the relevant evidence before making a decision.

If the court concludes that the evidence clearly and convincingly demonstrates that the proposed patient is mentally ill or chemically dependent, it will evaluate and consider all reasonable alternatives to involuntary commitment. Alternatives to commitment may include voluntary out-patient treatment, voluntary admission to an in-patient treatment facility or appointment of a conservator or guardian for the patient. If none of these alternatives seem suitable, the court will then order the patient committed to the least restrictive in-patient treatment facility which can meet the patient's needs.

The initial period of commitment for any patient committed as mentally ill or chemically dependent is six months. Any patient has a right to a second hearing at the end of six months to determine if commitment should be continued. Any patient may be discharged at any time if the head of the treatment facility certifies he or she no longer needs institutionalized care and treatment. Any patient committed as mentally ill or chemically dependent may petition the comiting court at any time for an order that he or she no longer needs continued institutionalization or for an order that the individual is no longer mentally ill or chemically dependent. A hearing will then be held on this petition and the court will again appoint an examiner (or a second examiner at the patient's request) to evaluate the patient.

The cost of hospitalization is the responsibility of the patient, or in some cases, the patient's family. If neither the patient's family nor the patient has enough money to pay for hospitalization, public assistance may be available. A person involuntarily committed to in-patient treatment does not surrender other legal rights such as the right to vote, hold a driver's license or enter into a contract. However, a court may choose to appoint a guardian or conservator to manage the patient's property while he or she is hospitalized.

If you have any questions about these matters, contact your local county attorney or social service agency.

How safe are your outdoor power tool habits? Power saws, lawn edgers, hedge trimmers, drills and lawn mowers now make it possible to do the job with a flick of the switch or a push of the button.

Minnesota Medical association (MMA) points out that although these modern power tools are generally designed with a great deal of care to ensure safe operation and to do a better job in less time, careless use of them can often result in needless and often serious injury.

The MMA offers the following suggestions for sharpening up on your outdoor power tool working habits:

+ Think through the project or the task at hand. If additional help is needed don't proceed without it.

+ Study and familiarize yourself with the instructions and use manuals for the power tools you are planning to use. Make certain that you have the proper understanding of their use and maintenance.

+ Carefully check power tool and extension cords for frays or breaks. Use the proper extension cords including those that are designated for outdoor use.

+ Regularly inspect and replace damaged or questionable electric outlets used to connect outdoor power tools.

+ Connect all electric power tools with three pronged plugs to matching grounded electric outlets or use a properly attached ground adapter for outlets that only accept two pronged plugs. Never alter a power tool with a grounded three wire system by cutting the third prong off.

+ Use outdoor electric tools in dry areas only. Wet grass, concrete patios, floors or driveways can prove to be hazardous settings for electric outdoor power tool users.

+ Never operate power tools when the protective power guard has been removed or is not in place. Protect the eyes by using safety goggles or safety glasses with side shields. Wear dust masks when necessary.

+ Operate electric power tools only in well lighted areas. Don't attempt to finish the job after evening darkness has set in. Don't attempt to operate power tools when crowded, cluttered conditions exist. Clear the deck to avoid dropping, tripping or falling with the tool in operation.

+ Check ladders and step stools to make certain that they are in good working condition before attempting to use them while operating a power tool. Avoid the danger of overreaching a safe working distance.

+ Always remain alert to the potential hazards of highly combustible material in the working area.

+ Store power tools in a safe place out of the reach of children. Never permit others to use your power tools unless you know that they are capable of using them.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Every two years the American people go to the polls and elect 435 congressmen and one third of the Senate. These men and women head off to Washington promising to represent the wishes of those who elected them. And every April 15, we show our appreciation by paying their $61,000-a-year salaries and the salaries of their staffs.

Once they arrive in Washington, the congressmen and senators turn around and pass laws and regulations telling us how to live our lives. They relieve us of difficult decisions concerning how we should best spend the family budget by taking from us — and spending for us — much of our paychecks.

And when the task of running our lives and spending our money becomes too much for 535 politicians and their immediate staffs, they hire bureaucrats (some two million plus) and create new federal agencies (Lord knows how many) to handle the job.

Recently, however, the politicians and their helpers have moved beyond telling us what to do. They now presume to tell us what we think.

For two years now they have been telling us that middle America believes the Reagan tax cuts of 1981 are unfair. That is to say that the 25 per cent across-the-board cut in marginal tax rates and the indexing of tax brackets benefit the very rich and hurt lower and middle-income Americans.

They have filled hundreds of pages of the Congressional Register, costing taxpayers over $1,000 per page, with pronouncements about how unfair we think it is to have our taxes cut. They have been joined in this chorus by television anchormen and newspaper reporters.

Convinced by their own rhetoric that the American people share their desire to return to the tax and spend policies of the last decade, the liberal politicians in Washington have announced their intention to repeal the third year of the tax cut — the 10 per cent cut in marginal tax rates scheduled to take effect July 1. They would also like to repeal the indexing provision that will prevent inflation from moving taxpayers into even higher tax brackets.

But before we allow Congress to do us any such favors, perhaps we should ask the American people to speak for themselves. To this end the U.S. Chamber of Commerce commissioned a national poll by George Gallup and asked Americans what they thought, not what Tip O'Neill says they think.

I think Tip would be surprised to learn the following: Only five per cent of the American people want Congress to repeal the third year of the tax cut. Only 28 per cent would be willing to postpone July's tax cut. An overwhelming majority — 55 per cent — want the 10 per cent tax cut to go into effect as scheduled.

The tax and spenders in Washington are in for more bad news on the indexing question. By a 55 per cent to 28 per cent majority, people want to keep the indexing provision intact. The hidden tax of bracket creep — which hikes taxes 1.6 per cent for every one percentage point of inflation — is less popular with the people than Tip O'Neill and company thought.

OK. So people don't like taxes, the pseudo-populists respond. What about "fairness"? Tax cuts are bad for the lower and middle-income American. Well, a recent Sidlinger poll exposed this cant for the self-serving rhetoric it is. Dividing respondents by income range, the poll showed that while only 32.8 per cent of those "fat cats" making over $50,000 a year wanted to keep the third year of the tax cut, over 64 per cent of the "skinny cats," those earning below $15,000 a year, supported the July tax cut, and 64.8 per cent wanted to retain indexing.

Surprised, Tip? Lower-income Americans are more, not less, supportive of President Reagan's commitment to the third year of the tax cut and the indexing.

So, please, stop pretending that you speak for the working men and women of America when you call for higher taxes.

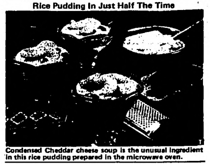
The Confident Cook

Step-by-Step Cooking Instructions

Rice Pudding In Just Half The Time



Condensed Cheddar cheese soup is the unusual ingredient in this rice pudding prepared in the microwave oven.

Is there anyone who can dip a spoon into a bowl of rice pudding without being reminded of childhood?

Unfortunately, the seemingly endless days of childhood are no more—and few cooks want to devote an hour or so in preparing this dessert. Microwave oven owners have a time-saving advantage.

The required cooking time in this converted classic is only 27 minutes and the method of preparation is much simplified, using Campbell's Condensed Cheddar Cheese Soup.

The soup base carries the spices well and gives the pudding perfect consistency.

RICE PUDDING

1 can (11 ounces) Campbell's Condensed Cheddar Cheese Soup
3 cups milk
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 cup raisins
1/3 cup raw regular rice
Mandarin-orange sections

1. In 3-quart round microwave-safe casserole, combine soup and milk; blend well. Stir in remaining ingredients except oranges. Cover.

2 Microwave on HIGH 25 to 27 minutes, stirring frequently. Let stand, covered, 20 minutes. Refrigerate.

3. To serve: Garnish with mandarin-orange sections or other fruit. Makes about 3 cups or 6 servings.

STRAIGHT TALK

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

Americans usually are in the corner of the underdog in most contests. If you have a competition where 90 per cent fail, wouldn't you think that most of us would have to salute those willing to try, particularly if their success is significant to all of us?

Well, about 3,000 new businesses start each working day and 2,700 close or fail each working day, so that every new businessman who tires is not only an underdog but a hero in my book.

Since most new jobs needed for a growing population come from small and medium sized businesses, particularly the newer and more innovative firms, we need to encourage new and small business. A look at the census data shows clearly a slow down in growth and one of the reasons for the unemployment we are experiencing today.

Using 1960 as a base, there was a 45 per cent increase in the number of businesses in 1970 over 1960. Using 1970 as a base, there was only a two to three per cent increase in the number of businesses in 1980 over 1970.

For a business to prosper and survive, there is a need for a healthy economic environment, encouragement from government, and good management, able to plan, control, react, do a good customer relations job, negotiate effectively with vendors, and properly understand and use credit as well as extend credit. Today, most business failures are the result of poor management, primarily a lack of effective planning and control.

Most businesses start with an optimist who has big hopes and little more. Investing savings and using a home as collateral, this optimist sees an opportunity for the big win and all of the perks that come to the successful businessman. Many of these optimists do not realize that there is much more to business success than optimism and a willingness to work hard.

Having regular discussions with many small and medium sized business people, I belive I have a good handle on what is and is not being done, and why some businesses succeed and others fail, and here are some examples illustrating the problem:

(1) Two partners decided to open a new store selling appliances. With all of the local appliance dealers doing badly, this seemed stupid. Yet these two partners, with lots of experience in the business and the area, felt the competition was overconfident, provided poor followup and service, and had big killing overhead "nuts" to crack.

The partners studied the market, their personal financial situation (developing a sound financial plan starting with sales, working up a cost of sales, establishing a low overhead, seeing in advance whether they could make it), and whether the profit potential was worth the risk. They got advice from the Small Business administration before and after they started up. They are doing very well.

(2) Two partners decided to open up a floral shop with additional gift items. Neither had any experience in business or this business. There was no real planning, so that the business started with their savings, consuming everything and more. Their losses increased every year. They got no advice, free or otherwise, from the Small Business administration or their banker, and wouldn't listen to any that might have been offered. The hole they are digging gets deeper each day, and now includes money borrowed from friends and relatives, too.

If you are thinking about starting a business, don't just jump in. Contact the Small Business administration and get the kind of advice they have available, some from full-time counsellors, some from local colleges and universities, and some from SCORE (retired executives who donate their time to help small business succeed).

As a nation, we need a continuing flow of new small businesses. To improve the chances for success, we also need new businessmen who know how to plan, control, react quickly and do all of the essentials that constitute management. It is a shame that fewer Americans are going into business and surviving and succeeding. A 90 per cent failure rate, and all that really means in pain, isn't necessary!

That's Straight Talk!

UNSUNG HEROES OF AMERICA

Little Known Facts About People Who Help Us

Our Physicians

According to the Bureau of the Census, there are about 438,000 physicians in the United States. That's about one doctor for every 500 Americans.

Many of these physicians live and work in the sunbelt states where they help treat and protect people from a number of ailments. One disease that many sunbelt physicians see is called solar keratosis. It's a skin condition caused by too much sunshine over a long period of time. In some cases, it can become malignant if untreated.

Symptoms of this skin condition include red, scaly patches, usually on the back of the hands or on the neck or face. Anyone with such symptoms should see a doctor.

To treat this skin condition, doctors sometimes use a prescription cream or solution made by Hoffmann-La Roche Inc. that is often applied to the skin with good results for people with solar keratosis.

Only a doctor can diagnose and treat you properly. If you suspect that you may be developing this or any other skin condition, it's a good idea to see your doctor.

If you suspect you are developing any type of skin condition, it's a good idea to see your doctor.

cancer answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Q: My father-in-law has terminal cancer. We've heard about hospices, and we're wondering if there's one nearby. How can we find out about hospices in our area? What kind of services will a hospice provide?

A: There are several sources you can check to find out about hospices near you. You can ask the social service department or social worker at the nearest hospital. The county public health department and public health nurses have information on hospices.

You also can call the cancer information service which has a list of resources for cancer patients in each county. The toll-free number in Minnesota is 1-800-582-5262. In North Dakota and South Dakota the number is 1-800-328-5188. The national hospice organization also has a directory of hospices throughout the country. The national phone number for the N.H.O. is (703) 938-5588.

Specific services provided vary considerably from one hospice program to another. Some can give hospital-like patient care. Others assist with at-home patient care, and some offer a combination of options. All hospice programs are designed to serve both the patient and the family during the last weeks of life and the bereavement period. Hospices concentrate on quality of life for the dying patient and his or her family.

Q: I read in one of your columns that having genital herpes may increase a woman's risk for getting cancer of the vagina and cervix. What are the chances a woman who has herpes will develop cancer?

A: According to a new study just completed by the Mayo clinic, the chances probably are minimal. This study followed medical records from 1963 to 1979 for 392 women who were diagnosed with genital herpes. During that time, none of the women developed cancer of the cevix or vagina.

Although no final conclusions can be made on the basis of one study, this information certainly questions the association reported earlier suggesting an increased risk of cancer with genital herpes.

Q: Is it necessary to go to a comprehensive cancer center or a cancer detection clinic to get a good check up for cancer?

A: No. A thorough physical examination by a physician whose speciality is family practice or internal medicine is a good cancer check up. If you have symptoms that may indicate cancer, the doctor may refer you to other specialists as well.

In general, people are referred to a comprehensive cancer center for treatment after cancer has been diagnosed.

The examination methods used at a cancer detection clinic are no different than those available at other clinics and medical centers.

Q: My six-year-old son's best friend has a younger sister who is being treated for cancer. Lately my son says his friend has been behaving badly in school and picking fights. Could this behavior change have something to do with his sister's illness?

A: It certainly could. As you can imagine, a long-term serious illness causes great stress for all the family members. Young children often are confused and angry over the sudden changes an illness can cause in the family's normal life. The child resents these disruptions, and at the same time feels guilty for being angry.

When a brother or sister is ill, the child may also feel jealous of the extra time and attention parents are spending with the sick child.

All of these conflicting emotions are difficult for the child to express. Often he doesn't feel he can let his parents know he's feeling angry and jealous, so these feelings come out in his behavior in school and with his friends.

You and your son can help his friend through this difficult time by trying to keep their friendship as normal as possible. See to it they continue to do the things together they did before the sister's illness.

Don't let him get by with bad behavior. Even unusual leniency and tolerance is a sign to the child that things have changed making him feel less secure.

Q: I saw a medical reporter on television a couple of weeks ago talking about an at-home test for colon cancer. What was it, and how often should a person test themselves to be safe?

A: The test you've heard about is a fecal occult blood test — sometimes also called Hemmoccult or Gualac test. It's simple and inexpensive, but as yet unproven as a cancer screen. A person follows the diet instructions included in the kit, places small samples of two bowel movements in containers provided, and sends them to a medical laboratory where they are examined.

The fecal occult blood test is designed to detect traces of blood in the bowel movement, which can be a sign of cancer of the colon or rectum. But blood in the feces is not the only symptom of colon cancer. And fecal blood can be caused by conditions other than cancer.

For these reasons, many doctors are cautious about recommending the fecal occult blood test alone. The best protection against cancer of the colon and rectum is a complete periodic examination by a physician. Ask your doctor to recommend an examination schedule for you.

Q: My father has cancer. He had surgery and they found a tumor in his colon. Now the doctors are doing a lot of tests before they decide what kind of treatment he should have. Why do they have to do all these tests?

A: Cancer is a very complex disease. There are many different types of cancer, and each type behaves in a different way. There are also many different ways of treating cancer.

Docotors need to know certain things about a patient's cancer before they can determine the most effective way to treat it. They need to know exactly where in the body the cancer started and the type of cells in the tumor. They also need to know how rapidly the tumor has grown and whether or not it has spread to other parts of the body. The patient's general state of health also is an important consideration in planning treatment.

You can ask your father's doctors to explain the tests he's having and what the results tell them about his condition.

Q: I've read about people having bone marrow transplants for leukemia. How is a bone marrow transplant done? Is it being used a lot?

A: Transplanting bone marrow is a relatively new method of treatment still being studied carefully. The procedure is complex and involves considerable risk for the patient. Consequently, bone marrow transplants are not commonly done.

Only people with specific types of leukemia or severe aplastic anemia are considered for bone marrow transplant. These diseases attack the blood-forming bone marrow causing it to produce abnormal blood. Children with severe forms of leukemia, who are likely to relapse even after successful treatment with chemotherapy, and adults with myelogenous leukemia can be helped with bone marrow transplant.

In order for a transplant to work, a donor must be found who has exactly the same blood type as the patient. Matching blood types for bone marrow transplant is much more complicated than for blood transfusion. The ideal donor is a patient's identical twin. Most donors are brothers or sisters of patients.

Before a transplant can be done, all of the patient's own diseased bone marrow must be destroyed. The patient receives high doses of chemotherapy and radiation to the entire body. Healthy bone marrow from the donor is then transfused into the patient.

For the first few weeks following the transplant, the patient is given blood transfusions until the new bone marrow can begin to produce its own blood. The patient is isolated in a special room where the circulating air is purified. He is fed intravenously and given antibiotics to avoid any chance of infection.

It usually is necessary for a patient to stay in the hospital at least three months following a bone marrow transplant until the new bone marrow is functioning adequately and complications are no longer likely to occur.

Q: My son has cancer and seems to be responding well to his treatment. When I ask the doctor about my son's chances for cure or ask to see printed statistics, he never gives me a firm answer. He says the statistics are not really applicable to an individual's case. Why is he so hesitant to give me this information?

A Father

A: Statistics that you see in articles and pamphlets describing cancer survivals are averages based on hundreds or even thousands of cases. Furthermore, survival statistics are constantly changing as methods for treating cancer improve. An individual's chances for cure depend upon many variables including the type of cancer, location of the tumor, the extent of the disease at the time of diagnosis, and the age and general health of the patient.

Each person's prognosis is dependent upon all the variables. Since your son is still receiving treatment, his doctor may think it is too early to discuss the future. Cancer often has an unpredictable course, so progress may be different for each patient.

Also, statistics on survival and recurrence can be misinterpreted. For example, physicians specializing in cancer treatment often speak of "five-year survival" rather than "cure." This does not mean that a patient can expect to live for only five years after treatment, or that there are no cancer cures. The five-year disease-free time period after treatment is simply an index used by medical scientists to measure the relative success of a treatment. Many people who have cancer are cured immediately after the tumor is surgically removed. Many others are cured following radiation therapy and chemotherapy. It is estimated that there are a million and a half Americans living today who are considered cured of cancer.

When your son has finished his course of treatment, ask the doctor to sit down with you and discuss the follow-up care your son should have and his prospects for the future.

Q: I'd like to have a complete physical exam including a cancer check up. What kinds of tests would an exam like that involve?

M.I.

A: It's impossible to say exactly which tests your physician or clinic would include in a complete physical examination. Choices, Realistic Alternatives in the Treatment of Cancer, a book by Marion Morra and Eva Potts, provides a general list of tests that often are used to check for early signs of cancer.

" Complete medical and family history

- Complete blood count
- Complete urinalysis
- Digital rectal exam
- Proctosigmoidoscopy for people over 40
- Pelvic exam and Pap test for women
- Chest x-ray
- Manual examination of the abdomen and thyroid gland
- Examination of the prostate gland in men and breasts in women
- Check of all skin areas
- Mouth exam using a mirror to see into the throat and larynx
- Eye exam with a lighted instrument
- Test for blood in the bowel movement."

Your doctor will determine which tests are necessary for you based on your age, your family history and any symptoms you may have.

Q: I had a hysterectomy a year ago because I had cysts in my uterus. Should I continue to have Pap tests even though my uterus and cervix have been removed?

J.L.

A: Gynecologists recommend a Pap test every three to five years after a hysterectomy. A woman whose cervix and uterus have been removed for a noncancerous condition cannot develop cancer of the cervix. However the doctor can use the Pap test to check for abnormalities in the cells of the vagina.

Ask your doctor to recommend a Pap test schedule for you.

Cash Flow Is A Problem In Small Business

Whether a business dredges up oysters from the bottom of the bay, serves up pasta at a neighborhood restaurant or thinks up software programs for industry, there's a strong probability they all share a common problem; a shortage of cash on hand. Those who advise these businesses regard cash flow as a serious problem small companies face in today's economy.

Many of 1982's record breaking business failures can be attributed to cash flow problems, according to the Minnesota society of certified public accountants (CPAs).

Rebecca Lee, who observes business trends as chairperson of a small business consulting committee of the American Institute of CPAs, has this to say: "High interest rates, the difficulty in securing new financing, even the new tax laws are not as troublesome to entrepreneurs as the daily struggles with cash flow."

Five years ago AICPA conducted a survey of the CPA services most in demand by owners of small companies. With the economy in double digit inflation, the survey showed they were looking for ways to spur growth rates to keep up with inflation. Consequently, clients asked CPAs for advice in securing new capital, establishing corporate strategies and pricing policies and for financial forecasts.

Economy's downward plunge has changed all that, according to the CPAs. Today, business owners are more interested in dealing with the immediate problems of cutting operating losses and recovering money spent on production as quickly as possible.

They can attack these cash flow problems on a long-term or short-term basis, depending on how acute the cash need becomes.

Long-term attack involves planning a tax strategy that reduces as far as possible the taxes you must pay, and increases and accelerates the amount you either shelter or get back after paying the taxes. This was made considerably easier since the accelerated cost recovery system was put into effect recently.

Short-term attack, on the other hand, can be used immediately. Here are some of the critical questions CPAs ask business owners to want to improve their cash flow situation:

Are you making full use of cash on hand? Are you using one principal centralized bank account? Do you take advantage of same-day deposits? Do you use a bank that grants instant credit on deposited checks and bank charge cards?

Do you put excess cash to work in money market accounts, repurchase agreements or weekend rollover loans?

Have you stopped prepaying bills?

Are you overlooking sources of new cash, such as cash surrender value from life insurance policies, turning obsolete inventory into cash or hiring outside sales personnel?

Is your accounting system adequate for reporting the current status of accounts receivable?

Have you established clear, documented credit management policies? Do you ask for cash before considering granting credit? Do you establish and enforce credit limits?

Do your sales contracts entitle you to recover collection fees?

Have you thought about sending out bills weekly instead of monthly?

Could you close outstanding accounts receivable by offering a one-time cash discount?

Are you spending your efforts on collecting the biggest outstanding receivables, or are you wasting time and effort dunning for pennies?

Questions such as these are part of the diagnostic procedures developed by CPAs to help their business clients identify operating problems. More than ever before, these procedures are now augmented by the use of electronic data processing in financial planning and taxation areas. There are an estimated 100,000 CPAs in public practice, the majority of whom are associated with the local firms helping small business owners get back and stay on their financial feet.

Traveling Healthy

PRE-TRIP PREPARATION

Before you travel, ask your doctor for an anti-diarrheal medication like IMODIUM.

Nobody looks forward to having a well-planned vacation ruined by illness. The best way to avoid most costly medical treatments abroad is to anticipate your health needs in advance.

If you travel with medications, pack double the amount you normally use. Carry copies of your prescriptions, preferably in Latin, so that they will be understood where no English is spoken. And ask your doctor about necessary immunizations, such as typhoid and malaria vaccinations. You may also want to talk to your doctor about another more common vacation-spoiler, traveler's diarrhea.

If left untreated, traveler's diarrhea will average four days. Some intrepid travelers simply let it run its course, but when vacation time is short, you'll want to be prepared in advance. Your physician can prescribe a fast-acting anti-diarrheal medicine, such as IMODIUM (loperamide HCl) capsules, which provide fast relief within one hour after the initial dose. IMODIUM reduces cramps and also prevents loss of water and electrolytes, which are important for maintaining the body's delicate chemical balance. And you only take it when needed. Traveler's diarrhea is seldom a serious condition. However, if symptoms persist or if you develop a fever over 101 or notice blood or mucous in your stool, consult a doctor.

The best vacation plans frequently result from taking an active part in setting your own travel arrangements and priorities. Keeping traveler's diarrhea in mind—and planning your health care needs in advance—can help make the difference in your vacation.

Tips Offered To Prevent Home Burglary

Home burglaries can occur anytime and are likely to happen when the occupants are away on vacation, according to Minnesota public safety commissioner Paul Tschida.

Tschida reminds Minnesotans that the upcoming 1983 vacation season could bring more home burglaries. He advises residents to make their homes appear occupied while they are gone by following these tips from public safety's crime watch office:

— Close and lock all doors and windows, including porch, basement and garage.

— Connect lights and a radio to an automatic timer to turn them on and off in the home each night.

— Protect doors and windows with a burglar alarm.

— Light up your porch and yard with outdoor lights to deter burglars and to increase the likelihood that a would-be burglar will be seen.

— Never leave valuables lying around. Keep them in a safety deposit box.

— Tell your police or sheriff department when you'll be leaving and how long you'll be gone. Ask them to check your home during your absence.

— Cancel all deliveries, such as milk, laundry and cleaning.

— Have trusted neighbors watch your home for suspicious activity in and around it. Ask them to hold your mail, regularly check inside the home and reposition the drapes.

— Arrange to have your lawn mowed and sidewalk swept once a week. Also have newspapers and circulars picked up from the porch or mailbox.

— Never advertise your departure in the newspaper before you leave on a trip. If you want the story told, tell it after you return.

Tschida also suggests that homeowners join operation identification, a free property marking program that has been proven to reduce burglaries. Join operation identification by contacting the local police or sheriff department.

Formaldehyde Levels In New Homes Limited

Minnesota health department has adopted new rules limiting permissible levels of formaldehyde inside newly constructed housing. Minnesota law had already required that consumers be warned about the possible health effects of formaldehyde in new homes and building materials.

Chief Judge Harold Kalina, of the Hennepin county district court, recently held that the department's rule limiting formaldehyde levels is legally valid. Since August, 1982, department rules have limited concentrations of formaldehyde in the air inside new housing units to 0.5 parts per million (ppm), at the time the unit is sold.

Since January, 1981, state law has required that buyers of building materials containing urea formaldehyde, or new homes constructed with such materials, be given a written warning about the potential health hazards of formaldehyde exposure.

Urea formaldehyde is used in a variety of building materials, including particleboard, hardwood plywood, veneer paneling, and some types of foam insulation. These materials can sometimes give off formaldehyde vapor, contributing to a buildup of the chemical inside the home. Warning requirement does not apply to products which are not a permanent part of the home, like carpeting, furniture, or draperies, or to other types of insulation.

Required warning statement reads "Warning, this product-housing unit contains the chemical formaldehyde. For some people formaldehyde may cause health problems, such as irritation of the eyes, nose and throat, sneezing, coughing, headaches, shortness of breath, or chest or stomach pains. Children under the age of two, elderly people, people with breathing problems or people with allergies may have more serious difficulties. If you have questions about problems you may have with formaldehyde, consult a doctor."

Warning must be given "clearly and conspicuously" on product labeling or in a written warranty. If a product has no label or warranty, the warning must be provided separately.

Limit on formaldehyde levels applies to all "previously unoccupied" housing units completed after the rule went into effect. Housing unit is defined as "one or more rooms which are intended for long term human habitation."

Making sure a new home complies with the rule is the responsibility of the seller, department authorities said. Only methods approved by the department can be used to measure formaldehyde levels. Certain environmental conditions, like temperature and ventilation, must be controlled, so test results from different housing units will be comparable.

Not every new housing unit must actually be tested for formaldehyde, according to the department. The builder can also make sure a new home complies with the standard through quality control techniques, including the use of building products which emit only small amounts of formaldehyde.

Failure to comply with the formaldehydes rules would be a misdemeanor under Minnesota law, department authorities noted, and could also be raised as an issue in a civil suit over injuries resulting from formaldehyde exposure. If the warning has not been given, the attorney general could take action under the state's consumer fraud law, seeking an injunction against further violations, or civil penalties of up to $25,000.

Further information about the formaldehyde rules is available from the department by calling (612) 623-5219.

Heidi Neumann Returns Dairy Industry Favors

LUNCH TIME at the Howard Neumann farm northeast of Ada always includes the availability of a pitcher of cold milk. Heidi Neumann, 1982 Northwest Dairy Princess, often is heavily involved in the family's meal preparations as other family members assume other duties on the 320-acre dairy farm. Here she serves refreshing glasses of milk to her mom and dad, Janice and Howard. Heidi has made a number of appearances in behalf of the dairy industry during her past year's reign and will crown her successor at the 34th annual Northwest Dairy Day in Thief River Falls on Tuesday, June 14.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

"I think it's an honor to be able to help promote an industry that I grew up with. There is a challenge and a certain sense of satisfaction in being able to return something to a way of life that has given so much to me."

Heidi Neumann, reigning Northwest Dairy Princess, was talking about her past year as a good will representative for dairymen in northwest Minnesota. The 19-year-old from rural Ada will crown her successor on Tuesday, June 14, at the 34th annual Northwest Dairy Day in Thief River Falls after a reign which she feels has been both full and fulfilling.

"I appreciated having the chance to meet so many different people and gain the experience of making public appearances from a personal development standpoint. And I really do feel an obligation to support dairy products because I believe in their wholesomeness and nutrition. I also know that dairying is important from an economic viewpoint; it has certainly been the lifeblood of our family."

Heidi's parents, Howard and Janice Neumann, operate one of the better dairy herds in Minnesota. In 1982 the Neumann herd placed 52nd among more than 7,000 herds on test with dairy herd improvement associations in Minnesota. It had 47 cows averaging 16,639 pounds of milk and 746 pounds of butterfat on test with the Clay-Wilkin DHIA and included six individuals with 1,000 pounds of butterfat or more in 305-day lactations.

From the Neumann herd, which normally has 44 head milking throughout the year, came 13 of the top 50 cows in the Clay-Wilkin association for 1982. There are 75 herds on test in the association. The Neumanns had the only first calf heifer in the top 50 producers — an exceptional animal which produced 907 pounds of butterfat in its first 305-day lactation.

Pride of the herd is an aged cow with the plain name of Jane. At eight years and two months of age she had compiled a 361-day production record of 23,174 pounds of milk, an amazingly high Holstein butterfat percentage of 5.8 per cent, and 1,344 pounds of butterfat. Her complete lactation went on to 403 days and totaled 24,104 pounds of milk and 1,388 pounds of butterfat.

The Neumann farm is located three miles east and one mile north of Ada and the geographical center of Norman county is located within the farm boundaries. From the 320 acres — small by most standards in the heavy grain and row crop production area — the Neumanns are able to almost totally support their dairy herd in feed and forage.

"There have been dairy cattle on this farm since my Dad (Clarence) started with them in 1924 and the herd has never been dispersed," Howard Neumann explained. "It has always 6been a strictly family farm operation. Janice (the former Janice Melby of Greenbush) has been helping in the barn since 1975 and lately Heidi's boyfriend has been helping with haying. All four kids have pitched in and helped whenever and wherever they were needed."

Heidi is the oldest Neumann offspring and just completed a year of college at North Dakota state university in Fargo. Next fall she will transfer to Moorhead state university to major in speech pathology and elementary education. The other children are Debbie, 18, a 1983 graduate of Ada high school bound for NDSU next fall; Peter, 16, who will be a junior at Ada high school; and Paul, 13, who will be in the eighth grade.

Despite her activity on the farm where cooking and work around the house were her major roles, Heidi found time for a great deal of outside activities and interests. She was a member of the Green Meadow Go-Getters 4-H club for 10 years, holding every office from song leader to president. She was secretary of the county 4-H federation and on June 10 will have her winning records submitted to state competition for achievement judging.

She has won a number of state fair trips through grandchampionships at the Norman county fair. She has earned a state fair grand championship in vegetable gardening, earned the title of Norman county style revue queen and been selected to the exclusive court of honor at the state fair 4-H style revue. She also has competed at the District I make-it-yourself-with-wool contest in Thief River Falls and is a past junior division winner at district and state (Minnesota-North Dakota) levels, earning a trip to compete in the nationals at San Diego, CA.

She has been selected as one of 10 counselors for the Minnesota rural youth institute, this month at the University of Minnesota at DAIRY PRODUCTION has been on the increase in Minnesota and across the nation as dairymen have been doing better jobs in keeping records and culling lower producing cows from their herds. Heidi Neumann, 1982 Northwest Dairy Princess, illustrates the production volume in this photo. The butter cartons pictured represent the equivalent of a little over one month's production of butterfat by the top individual cow in the Neumann's dairy herd last year. That eight-year-old cow produced 1,344 pounds of butterfat and 24,104 pounds of milk in 403 days. Last year the herd of 47 cows averaged 16,639 pounds of milk, 746 pounds of butterfat, and was 52nd in production among more than 7,000 DHIA-tested herds in Minnesota. Dairy cattle have been a part of the Neumann farm operation continuously since 1924.

City Council, County Board Meet Tuesday

Thief River Falls city council will be holding a joint meeting with members of the Pennington county board of commissioners on Tuesday evening, for the primary purpose of discussing a request from Minstar Inc. to have the property taxes due and payable in 1984 on the former Arctic Enterprises factory, reduced to approximately $25,000. Minstar representatives have reportedly threatened not to pay approximately $104,000 in taxes due this year unless the reduction is made.

City council is scheduled to meet at 7:30 p.m., with the county board joining them at 8 p.m. Other topics which may be acted upon by council include the status of the city's purchase of the Toreq Inc. property, which has reportedly been negotiated by Mayor Bob Carlson; status of the lease sale agreement between Northern Outerwear and the city on the present municipal service building; possible appeal of the civil aeronautics board decision naming Bemidji Airlines to replace Republic Airlines as carrier at the local airport; and a proposal from Jobs, Inc.

Sparby Comments About Hazardous Waste Site

(Editor's Note: Following article was written by State Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls following adjournment of the 1983 legislative session. It provides background and update information on hazardous waste disposal — an area of high interest in this part of the state.)

The 55 gallon drum is becoming the new symbol of waste in high technology society. All over the country, including Minnesota, drums full of highly dangerous substances have been dumped or buried in makeshift hazardous waste sites in fertile farmlands and populated suburbs. Now, sometimes years after the dumping, the results appear in contaminated soil and water supplies, causing sickness and forcing people from their homes.

Minnesota's waste management act of 1980 is an attempt to deal comprehensively with the problem of hazardous waste. The law created the state waste management board to draft a plan for the handling of hazardous waste in the state. One element of this is the search for a hazardous waste disposal site. The legislature set up a rigorous process for the board to follow in the selection of a safe hazardous waste site.

There are nine permanent members of the waste management board, one from each of the state's eight congressional districts and one member at large. The governor appoints all the members with the approval of the senate. In addition, one member representing each of the final candidate sites is added to the board to assist in the selection of a final disposal site.

At this writing there are four remaining sites under consideration, including a state wildlife management area in East Park township, Marshall county (the site is approximately 1.5 square miles), Helena township in Scott county; Hill Lake township in Aitkin county; and Benton and Hancock townships in Carver county.

However, the number of candidate sites may increase. Due to the high degree of public participation, we raised

Weed Control Topic Of Demo This Tuesday

Weed control time in spring planted crops is approaching its peak, according to Pennington county extension director Terry Courneya, who notes that farmers are making important decisions on weed identification, choice of chemical or cultured control and which herbicides to use from a cost and effectiveness standpoint. Courneya stated that chemical or cultural costs can vary from $5 to $50 per acre.

A field demonstration on weed identification and discussion on choice of control has been set for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 7, one mile south of St. Hilaire on Highway 32. Courneya will identify common weed species in field crops and discuss chemical and cultural control alternatives.

Block Presents Five Food Stamp Awards

Secretary of agriculture John R. Block recently presented awards to five state officials for innovative and cost effective projects that have reduced fraud, waste and abuse in the food stamp program in their states.

Block announced the awards during his keynote speech before the national state welfare commissioners meeting on food stamp management. The meeting is part of a U.S. department of agriculture initiative titled "Operation Awareness," a coordinated effort of federal, state and local governments and cooperating organizations to improve the quality of the program through detection and reduction of misexpenditures attributed to fraud, waste and abuse.

Awardees are:

— New Jersey commissioner George Albanese for that state's exceptionally successful wage match operation and strong fraud learning system.

— Michigan director Agnes Mary Mansour for Michigan's innovative "on-line" issuance system which accurately delivers program benefits in urban areas where benefits are often reported lost or stolen.

— Texas commissioner Marlin Johnston for Texas' outstanding efforts in maintaining and stregthening food stamp program integrity through the use of enhanced funding for fruad investigation and prosecution activities.

— Acting South Carolina commissioner John Crosscope for South Carolina's superior contribution and initiative in increasing recoupment of food stamp overissuances and aggressively pursuing investigations and prosecutions of food stamp fraud by the implementation of Project FAIR (fighting abuse through investigations and recoupment).

— Director of the Nevada state department of human resources, Barton Jacka, for implementing a system of supervisory review in the food stamp program that has contributed to a consistently low error rate over the past three years.

As part of the operation awareness initiative, USDA has held regional anti-fraud meetings around the country during the past two months.

"This national meeting will provide an opportunity for discussion of the federal-state partnership and will facilitate the exchange of ideas between states of different regions to improve the program," Block said.

Block noted that the federal-state effort to combat fraud in the food stamp program is showing significant results. In 1982, state reported prosecutions increased by 47 per cent over 1981; total fraud hearings increased in 1982 by 28 per cent; and grocer compliance investigations increased by 5.8 per cent. In addition, recipient claims collected for 1982 increased by 18 per cent.

To help states aggressively combat fraud and abuse, USDA issued a regulation recently that requires states to perform computer matches to verify the income of applicants and participants with social security and unemployment records. In addition, states may now establish their own standards to validate the information provided by the applicant or participant.

Individuals who intentionally make false or misleading statements, or conceal or withhold facts may now be disqualified for longer periods from the program. The penalty for the first offense is six months off the program, 12 months for the second offense, and permanent disqualification for the third offense.

Sparby Gives Hazardous Waste Update

enough questions about the safety of the four remaining sites to cause the waste management board to look further into disposal in deep granite bedrock. An entirely new technology may allow the storage of hazardous waste in granite up to 1,000 feet deep. Because of this, the legislature adopted an amendement this past session instructing the waste management board to study the feasibility of bedrock disposal and identify sites in the state where this type of disposal would be possible. A decision on possible bedrock sites must be made this summer.

So what is left in the selection of a waste disposal site? This fall, the waste management board will present its plan on hazardous waste management to the legislature. The plan will look at all aspects of hazardous waste management: Can hazardous waste be neutralized? processed? solidified: incinerated? If any or all these things can be done, will there even be enough remaining waste to justify a site?

There is the possibility the report may conclude that a hazardous waste site is prohibitively expensive for the state or a private developer. Whatever the final plan, it will be geared toward reducing the amount of hazardous waste for final disposal. The plan will contain a number of policy recommendations, some of which would require legislative approval.

After the legislature acts on the plan in the 1984 session, the waste management board will prepare environmental impact statements on the final candidate sites and then choose a final site. The state pollution control agency must then prepare an environmental impact statement on the final site.

Once a site has been selected, the state will lease it to a private operator. This will allow the state to regulate but not operate the hazardous waste facility.

At any rate, the waste management board says there will not be any thorough analysis of the four remaining sites until June of 1984. The earliest possible selection of a hazardous waste site would not be until the summer of 1985.

When and if Minnesota does get a hazardous waste disposal site, it will be the safest and best run site of its kind in the country. We will also have one of the most comprehensive hazardous waste management policies in the country.

Those wishing to have further information may contact the Waste Management Board, 7323 58th Avenue North, Crystal, Mn. 55428.

Dear Readers,

If the family of the deceased discovers that the only copy of a will, burial instructions, cemetery deed and life insurance are stored in a Safe Deposit Box, it could take several weeks before a family could obtain a court order to retrieve those documents. Consequently, these types of documents should not be kept in a safe deposit box.

Young Men May Register Early To Receive Aid

Effective immediately, young men in Minnesota who are required to register with the selective service system may now do so up to 120 days before their 18th birthday.

According to Minnesota state director of selective service, Robert P. Knight, the decision to accept registrations up to four months before their 18th birthday was made for added convenience to registrants and to allow time for young men to receive proof of registration earlier.

Need for proof of registration came to the forefront recently when congress passed the "Solomon Amendment" which requires proof of registration from men required to register with selective service to be eligible for Title IV student financial aid.

Due to pending legal action no statement of compliance with the selective service registration requirement is required from applicants for federal financial and until further notice. Depending on the outcome of the court case, however, men may be required to provide information concerning registration status at a later date. Should such a requirement take effect, receipt of federal financial aid could be delayed if the student has not, by that time, provided information as to his registration status. For this reason, Knight is encouraging students to provide the information voluntarily now.

Men required to register with selective service may do so at any U.S. Post Office.

Banvel® herbicide is your best choice to stamp out wild buckwheat on Set-Aside/PIK acres.

Maintain weed control now for better cropland next season.

Banvel® herbicide gives you more control of wild buckwheat on your Set-Aside/PIK acres than any other mechanical or chemical choice you can make. And that means better cropland when you put those acres back into production.

Banvel eliminates annual broadleaf weeds like sunflower or kochia that could leave more seeds in your fields to germinate next season. And an early application of Banvel suppresses stubborn perennials like Canada thistle or bindweed.

Banvel gives you maximum control because it penetrates weed leaves. Is absorbed by the roots. Moves throughout the entire plant for a complete weed kill ...leaf-tip to root-tip.

See your ag-chem supplier for the full Banvel Set-Aside/PIK story.

FACTUAL NEWS REPORTING EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

Selling Job Needed

A number of senior citizens of the Thief River Falls community and at least some of the community's public officials have hopes for constructing a new building to house a senior citizens center. Cost of such a venture has been placed in the neighborhood of half a million dollars. That's a pretty exclusive neighborhood.

We are acquainted with at least several of the more vocal proponents of the center and they are good people with full backgrounds in this and other communities. They are retired from their life's gainful employment but they are not ready to retire from life. And they believe that a senior citizen's center would be beneficial for a goodly number of people of similar station in life.

They have a monumental selling job on their hands to convince the public that it is necessary to bond for the bulk of half a million dollars to build a new senior citizen center. And it might as well be known that this editor is one of the public who is yet to be convinced.

That should not be interpreted as closed mind opposition. There may well be enough sound reasons why such a center should be built and why it should be located in a downtown location (a site on Main avenue just south of the Northwest regional library is being proposed). If so, we would like to hear them, and we are sure the rest of the public would be interested as well.

Here are some of the questions which need to be addressed: For what purposes would such a center be used that existing facilities do not already provide? How many people could logically be expected to use such a center regularly? Why is a new building necessary? Why should it be located downtown? Have other alternatives been fully investigated? Do the majority of senior citizens want such a facility and the added public cost it would entail? Would the center, if built, be self-sustaining in future operating costs? If not, what would the costs be and who would pay them?

These are a few of the questions that immediately come to mind. Along with them we have some other thoughts. The community now has senior citizen groups in a number of churches, a gathering center at 415 South Arnold and another at Riverside Terrace, access to the city auditorium and other sites including schools and private facilities for large gatherings, a craft shop and card room in the city auditorium. There is the Tri-Valley bus service and taxi discounts to help senior citizens go virtually anywhere in the community if they are unable to drive.

It seems on the surface that the diversity of these facilities and services might be desirable from a social and psychological standpoint to consolidating everything in one place and herding the seniors into it. It compels retirees and others to move about and mingle. That may be a mistaken assumption, however, and we would be interested in other viewpoints.

Many of the senior citizens in the Thief River Falls community have given much during their lifetime to the building of the community and making facilities and services available for others. Maybe those of use who have had the way smoothed for us because of their efforts "owe" them something in return. Maybe it is a new center. We don't think a lengthy and involved study is needed, but we would like to see more open and candid discussion.

We offer senior citizen groups of the community our assistance and the use of our news columns in telling their story and expressing their opinion. And we are willing to listen to their rationale and pass it along to our readers. But we want them to be aware of some of the questions which will be asked and to advice them that to achieve the center they want that a selling job will be needed.

Another Raid

It seems like the willingness of politicians to ignore dedicated purposes for funds and raid them for other purposes is a never ending malady. Another attempt at such a raid is in the news again.

Rep. Martin Russo of Illinois has introduced (again) a bill which would divert the 10 per cent manufacturers' excise tax on handguns from the Pittman-Robertson program to create a fund that would compensate victims of crime. The amount of money involved is no small sum — about $30 million annually.

Internal revenue service currently collects the excise tax on shotguns, rifles, handguns, ammunition and archery equipment and it is apportioned to state agencies for wildlife restoration, hunter education and shooting range programs by the U.S. fish and wildlife service. That was the purpose of the law which established the excise taxes and we see no reason to permit diversion of any of the funds.

Rep. John B. Breaux of Louisiana, who chairs the subcommittee on fisheries and wildlife conservation and the environment, has said the bill "...would be a betrayal of America's sportsmen to divert the funds they raise from wildlife to other purposes."

We agree with that assessment. Let Congressman Russo sell his proposal to compensate victims of crime on its own merits and gain its own funding support if it is considered a worthwhile proposal. Raiding the dedicated funds would be a crime against the nation's sportsmen.

Right To Work Essay

Heather Scott, a sophomore journalism student at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks, recently won the 10th annual scholarship competition sponsored by the national right to work committee. The winning essay is as follows:

A union card...do you dare leave home without one? Although it is a card that doesn't pay gas bills or bar tabs it is found in close proximity to those that can. Is this an employee's choice or something that has become a mandatory condition of employment? Whether one belongs to a union or not should be a free choice and not a condition of employment. Right to Work laws make this choice possible.

The relationship between most employers, unions and employees is regulated by the Taft-Hartley Act or the Labor-Management Act. Under this act employers are prohibited from discriminating against employees on the basis of union membership, and unions are prohibited against attempting to cause an employer to discriminate on this basis.

Section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act allows the states to prohibit all kinds of union security agreements, even those that would otherwise be legal under the Taft-Hartley Act. These state laws are known as Right to Work laws.

The issue of union security versus the Right to Work laws is an important one. It affects millions of U.S. workers and involves the payment of millions of dollars into labor union treasuries.

Excess union dollars (which are collected in order to finance negotiation and administration of collective bargaining agreements) are used to finance organizational campaigns at plants whose employees have shown no interest in the union, to support political candidates and programs specifically advantageous to the parochial interests of organized labor and to prolong strikes for unrealistically high wages.

The copper mine my father worked for staged a six-month-long strike when I was eleven. Our family had no immediate assets so we ended up going on welfare just to eat.

During the strike I consumed "record" amounts of oatmeal, peanut butter and poached eggs. These commodities were considered cheap, "strike" food — high in nutrition and low in price.

I could not fathom why my father went to the mine only to walk up and down aimlessly in a picket line, wearing an "on strike" sign when it was forty below zero outside. I heard him tell my mother many times that he'd like to be back at work but he flared at my suggestion of crossing the picket line. I remember he told me that if he crossed the picket line he would be considered a "scab."

To be labelled a "scab" in a mining town is an open invitation to violence. Car tires are slashed mysteriously, property damaged and anonymous phone calls abound, some calls even threatening death. The harrassment ends when one starts supporting their union.

It is good to believe strongly in something, but if a union or its members begin to infringe on an individual's free choice through implied or direct threats of violence then a reevaluation of their power is necessary.

Today, I still eat peanut butter, poached eggs and oatmeal, but by choice. It is both good and necessary to have the freedom to choose.

Borrowed Nonsense:

One thing inventors can't seem to get the buts out of is fresh paint.

After the last race of the afternoon, the disgruntled bettor called his friend from a phone booth at the track. "You told me you had a great horse for me," he said. "Thanks for the tip. It took nine horses to beat him."

DAIRY PRODUCTS are always prominently featured on the family table of Heidi Neumann, 1982 Northwest Dairy Princess. Here she cuts cheese slices in preparation for a graduation party for her sister Debbie. Heidi says she has enjoyed her year as dairy princess because it gave her an opportunity to give something back to the industry which has been her family's livelihood and a big part of her life.

HOWARD NEUMANN FARM northeast of Ada is a family farm operation all the way and its 320 acres would be considered small by Norman county standards. But the 320 acres provide nearly all of the feed needed for the herd of about 44 Holstein dairy cattle — the size of the herd for about the past 10 years. Heidi Neumann, 1982 Northwest Dairy Princess, enjoys riding bicycle or the family's three-wheeler in the area of the farm whenever she can find the time. Heidi, 19, is one of four Neumann children and will be a sophomore in speech pathology and elementary education at Moorhead state university next fall.

Heidi Neumann Returns Dairy Industry Favor

Crookston. Her high school activities included speech competition, primarily intrepretive poetry, and participation in plays, choir and band, where she played the French horn. She was also a member of the NDSU glee club and took part in college speech competition.

With her sister Debbie she sings gospel sings and the duo performed at the Red River Valley Dairymen's association banquet during the winter shows in Crookston this spring. Heidi also took part in a number of dairy day events at the shows, including trophy presentations and a special banquet appearance. She is a member of the "Gospel Lights," a group of 10 to 12 girls from St. John Lutheran church of Green Meadow, a rural congregation with a well-kept church and parsonage about three miles from the Neumann farm.

During the past year of her reign, Heidi has appeared in a number of parades, spoken at banquets and large gatherings including the Cass-Clay creameries annual meeting, distributed cheese samples, ice cream and "Real Seal" buttons at supermarkets and banks, and made every effort to comply with appearance requests whenever her busy school schedule would permit.

"I wanted to be an active Northwest Dairy Princess," Heidi said. "I had hoped there would be opportunities for me represent the industry and I wasn't disappointed, except that there were some invitations I couldn't accept because of school or other conflicts. The state fair experience was probably the most memorable but I have many lasting memories from other events as well."

Will she be ready to give up her crown on June 14. "Well," she says hesitantly, "not exactly." True royalty never wants to abdicate.

Legion Baseball Format Altered

A new format will be followed this year in Ninth District American Legion baseball. An experimental two-class system will be utilized this summer in the Ninth District as a kind of role-model for the rest of the state, which is exploring the possibility of establishing a state-wide two-class system in the near future.

Under the Ninth District two-class system, Fergus Falls, East Grand Forks, Detroit Lakes, Moorhead, Crookston and Thief River Falls will be Class AA teams this summer. All the rest are designated as Class A clubs, including any second team fielded from a Class AA program, providing members of that second team were born on or after August 1, 1966.

In post-season play, there will be separate Class AA and Class A tournaments in the Ninth District.

Class AA Ninth District tournament will be played at Moorhead. Pairings for the six-team, double-elimination event will be based upon the won-lost records against each of the other Class AA teams throughout the regular season.

Class A Ninth District tournament will be played at Battle Lake, following the old format featuring the champion and runner-up teams from each of the four sub-district tournaments in the eight-team, double-elimination district event.

To cap it off, the Class AA and Class A Ninth District winners will meet in a home-and-home, two-out-of-three-game playoff series that will qualify a team for the one-class 1983 American Legion state tournament at New Ulm.

Last year there were 27 American Legion baseball teams who were vying for the eight positions in the 1982 Ninth District tournament played in Thief River Falls. If the line-up stays intact in 1983, the six Class AA teams will be complemented by 21 Ninth District Class A clubs.

Last year's line-up had Battle Lake, Breckenridge, Frazee, Fergus Falls, New York Mills and Pelican Rapids in Sub-District 1; Ada, Audubon, Barnesville, Dilworth, Hawley, Moorhead Golds, Moorhead Blues, Sabin and Detroit Lakes in Sub-District 2; Bagley, Gonvick, Fertile, Fosston, Red Lake Falls and Twin Valley in Sub-District 3; and Crookston, East Grand Forks, Karlstad, Thief River Falls, Roseau and Warroad in Sub-District 4.

Thief River Falls will still be involved in regular season Sub-District 4 Northwest Legion scheduling. Thief River Falls has either won or shared the Northwest League pennant six times over the last eight years. They won it last year, along with a second straight Sub-District 4 tournament title.

Northwest League play starts Tuesday when Thief River Falls hosts Crookston in a 7 p.m. game on the fairgrounds diamond here. Ironically, those two rivals just met a week ago when Crookston eliminated Thief River Falls 4-0 in the opening round quarterfinals of the 1983 North Half Region 8AA high school baseball tournament as the host Crookston club erupted for four runs in the top of the seventh inning to break up a scoreless duel.

Thief River Falls continues its American Legion schedule Wednesday with a 6 p.m. doubleheader at Grafton and will be back home Thursday for a 7 p.m. Northwest League game vs. Roseau.

Nick Drees is starting his fourth year as Thief River Falls American Legion baseball coach. His teams have been 27-14, 24-14-1 and 36-10 over the last three years for an 87-38-1 won-lost-tied record and a .694 winning percentage. But it's a younger, less experienced team he'll be directing in 1983. The schedule has been cut back to 26 or 27 games and with a 15-player roster there will not be a Thief River Falls B team fielded this summer.

Football Meeting Is Held

First meeting of the newly created Section 8A Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) football group was held recently at Detroit Lakes.

Primary purpose of the session was to form a sectional committee and an advisory committee while discussing tentative plans for the recently-adopted changes in the MSHSL football playoffs, which go into effect for the 1984 season.

Nine schools assigned to Section 8A include four from the Mid-State Conference, four independents and one from the Heart O' Lakes Conference: Detroit Lakes, Park Rapids, Staples, Wadena, Crookston, East Grand Forks, Fergus Falls, Thief River Falls and Perham.

Lincoln high school principal Frank Hamerlinck will be the Thief River Falls representative on the Section 8A committee.

Officials, who could have elected to go with either an eight or four-team Section 8A playoff format, have said they will have an eight-team playoff field to qualify a representative in the MSHSL Class A state playoffs.

A Section 8A playoff format will have to be developed that would seed the teams (eliminating one for post-season play automatically) on either a north-south basis or on a 1-through-8 system.

Prowlers Compete At 8AA Meet

Little Falls won the boys title and Alexandria won the girls crown Saturday at the 1983 Region 8AA high school track and field meet at Alexandria.

In the boys' division, Little Falls finished with 76 points, St. Cloud Tech 72½, Park Rapids 70, Moorhead 62, Bemidji 52, St. Cloud Apollo 36¾, Rocori 28, Detroit Lakes 26½, East Grand Forks 18, Crookston 16, Albany 15¾, Alexandria 13, Fergus Falls 12, Wadena 9½, Thief River Falls, Brainerd and Sauk Rapids 6 each and Melrose 1.

For the girls, Alexandria finished with 69 points, followed by St. Cloud Tech with 66, Moorhead 49, Fergus Falls 40, Brainerd 34, Detroit Lakes 31, Wadena 30, Crookston 28, St. Cloud Apollo 26, Bemidji 24, Rocori 18, Melrose 18, Little Falls 11½, Park Rapids 8, East Grand Forks 6½, Albany 4, Sauk Rapids 2 and Thief River Falls 0.

Top two finishers in each event, plus the first place relay teams, earned spots in the 1983 Minnesota Class AA state track meet Friday and Saturday at Bloomington Lincoln high school.

Thief River Falls girls, despite turning in their best performances of the season, were shut out of the scoring column, while the Thief River Falls boys had a pair of fifth and two sixth places for their points.

"It was a frustrating day," reported Tom Schafer, coach of the Thief River Falls girls. "Most of the kids ran their personal bests and didn't have anything to show for it. That's what's really frustrating. I feel sorry for the girls. The competition was just so tough it was unbelievable. It was a tough way to end the season. We're very satisfied with what we did this year, but it was disappointing not to score any points here."

On the other hand, Thief River Falls boys' coach Tim Olson was more than pleased with the showing by the five Prowlers competing at the Region 8AA meet. "Everybody bettered their existing times," he reported. "I think we did a great job. I think we have a lot to look forward to."

Lon Aune had a pair of fifth place finishes for the Thief River Falls boys with a 4:30 in the 1600-meter run and a 9:55.1 in the 3200-meter run. The Prowlers added sixth places from Randy Swenson with a 42.2 in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles and from the sprint medley relay team of Tim Kruse, Scott Fowler, Swenson and Kevin Kezar in 3:50.5

Kezar also ran the 800 meters, but didn't place with a 2:04.

Thief River Falls girls entered in the meet included Stacie Kruta with a 16.84 in the 100-meter hurdles and 31.89 in the 200-meter hurdles; Sherry Sabo, 32.04 in the 200-meter hurdles; Paula Wilkens, 5:37 in the 1600-meter run; Jackie Smith, 12:18 in the 3200-meter run; Cindy Kruta, 1:03.45 in the 400-meter run; Lynn Culkins, 14-11 in the long jump; and the 1600-meter relay team of Cindy Kruta, Georgia Howard, Wilkens and Stacie Kruta in 4:19. Cindy Solem had also qualified for the Region 8AA meet in the shot put, but did not compete at Alexandria.

Doubles Team Competes In Section 8 Tournament

Thief River Falls doubles entry of Chad Broadwell and Steve Bendickson played well, according to coach Whitey Olson, but lost a 6-1, 6-1 first round decision to St. Cloud Tech's Dave Nelson and Shawn Bresnahan during the individual portion of the 1983 Section 8 high school tennis tournament played Wednesday at Brainerd.

Nelson and Bresnahan went on to win championship honors with a 6-3, 6-1 title match decision over Brainerd's Russ Hampson and Bruce Weiss.

Top three finishers earned state tournament berths, with Wadena's Scott Anderson and Brian Paulson joining the Tech and Brainerd twosomes as Section 8 state tournament representatives in doubles.

"Our kids played just great," reported Olson. "They played better than they have ever played, but they just couldn't handle them (Nelson-Bresnahan). St. Cloud has an outstanding doubles team."

Broadwell and Bendickson, a pair of seniors, continued play in the consolation bracket, beating Fergus Falls' Chad Johnson and Tom Hatchner 7-6, 4-6, 6-3 before losing in the finals to Crookston's Jay Claassen and Jeff Claassen 6-0, 6-4. It was the Claassens who beat Broadwell and Bendickson in the finals of the Sub-Section 4 tournament a week earlier.

Meanwhile, East Grand Forks' Phil Burke emerged as a Section 8 champion in singles by upsetting favored John Lauermann of St. Cloud Tech 6-3, 6-0 in the finals Wednesday.

That made Burke 29-0 for the year and 52-1 over the last two years — his only loss being to Lauermann last spring to keep him out of the state tournament.

Wadena's Chris Grabrian finished third to join Burke and Lauermann in the state tournament field, scheduled to be played this week in Bloomington. Team matches will be played Wednesday and Thursday, with individual singles and doubles matches scheduled Friday and Saturday.

St. Cloud Tech won the Section 8 team title Tuesday at Brainerd.

LHS Weight Room Is Open In Summer

Thief River Falls athletic director Russ Smith reminds athletes that the Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club, School District 564, Sons of the American Legion and the area vocational-technical institute (AVTI) have cooperated in providing an excellent weight-training facility located in the football lockerroom complex behind the Lincoln school building.

The facility is open and supervised both mornings and evenings Monday through Friday all summer long from 7 to 8:30 a.m. and from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

"After much research with other schools in our northern area, our coaches have found that the "Bigger-Faster-Stronger" weight training program had proven to be a most successful program for them, so this program has been installed in Thief River Falls," reported Smith.

"It is strongly suggested that all Thief River Falls athletes take advantage of this facility if they wish to compete successfully against the athletes from all of the Region 8AA schools that are already on this proven training program," added Smith.

Basketball Is Being Planned In Goodridge

Program officials will select teams and explain rules for the scheduled four-week program on Thursday.

Legion Squad Wins Opener

A mostly young, inexperienced Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team that is expected to have trouble scoring runs this summer found out in a hurry how to win games Friday in an impromtu season-opening 2-0 win over Fertile on the windswept fairgrounds diamond here: play good defense; get good pitching; and hit the ball someplace.

Thief River Falls did those things and won the game that was a last-minute addition to the schedule that was supposed to start tomorrow (Tuesday) with a 7 p.m. Northwest League game against Crookston here.

Good pitching came from righthander Kerry Wollin, one of a small group of high school seniors on the team. Wollin tossed a one-hit shutout. Only hit he gave up was a solid two-out single into left-center field by No. 3 batter Brent Simmons in the sixth. Fittingly, Wollin promptly picked Simmons off first base to end the inning.

He was backed by errorless defensive play despite a line-up that featured four sophomores — Dean Brandon in right field, Ryan Drees in left, Tim Nyland at shortstop and Joe Blankenfeld at third.

Wollin also helped out on offense, getting a pair of extra base hits to account for half of Thief River Falls' meager four-hit effort by Fertile righthander Darrel Arlien. But they constantly made contact and forced a number of Fertile mistakes by simply hitting the ball at the visitors.

Both runs crossed the plate in the fourth when Wollin got a triple out of a fly ball to right field when Fertile's Kevin Nephew fell in the outfield. Jim Hallamek then put a double inside the left field line for a run and scored himself as Kirk Jenson dropped a base hit into right field that wasn't particularly well-played, either.

Thief River Falls will follow its Tuesday games. Crookston with a Wednesday doubleheader at Grafton and a single Thursday encounter here vs. Roseau, another 7 p.m. start.

Golf courses in St. Cloud and Ham Lake will be utilized to conduct the Class A and Class AA events.

Play started at 12 noon today at the St. Cloud Country Club for the Class A tournament, with 18 holes being played and another 18 holes will be played beginning at 8 a.m. on Tuesday. Class AA event at the Majestic Oaks Golf Course in Ham Lake starts at 12 noon on Wednesday and 8 a.m. on Thursday. Like in Class A, team qualifiers and individual qualifiers will play 36 holes.

Class A

A total of 117 players earned the right to play in the Class A golf tournament at the St. Cloud Country Club, site of the event for a second successive year.

Among the 40 boys who qualified for the individual competition (top five from each of eight regions), nine players are back from last year's field, but none from among last year's top 19 finishers. The 1982 medalist John Breilinthin, Blake, graduated, and two other underclassmen who finished high in 1982 — Tim Smith, Redwood Falls, third, and Tim Hegna, Bird Island-Lake Lillian, fifth, failed to qualify.

Finishers a year ago who should make a strong bid for medalist laurels in 1983 include a pair of golfers from Sauk Centre — junior Gregg Peters and senior Rob Polipnick — who finished 11th and 22nd, respectively, in 1982. Another player certain to be a contender is senior Kurt Vegdahl, New London-Spicer, who finished 13th last year.

Polipnick, senior Tom Blank, Montevideo, and senior Vance Klingman, Pipestone, who finished 22nd as a sophomore but failed to qualify last year, were the low score qualifiers with 71's. Trip Johnson, St. Paul Academy, was close behind with a 72.

Among the eight region team champions entered, defending titlist Blake is not among them, assuring a new team victor. Region 6A champion Sauk Centre appears to be the team to beat. Other region team champions entered include Stewartville, Jackson, Montevideo, St. Paul Academy, Waconia, Eveleth and Fosston. Fosston and Stewartville are the only repeaters from last year's field.

From among the 40 girls who will vie for the gold medal in the individual competition, defending champion Julie Hennessay, a senior from Lewiston, is the player to beat. She comes in with the best qualifying score (74). Last year's runner-up, Jody Wilson, now a senior at Staples, hopes to reverse places with Hennessy this year. Wilson lost by two strokes a year ago. Junior Anne Swain, Caledonia, fourth a year ago some seven strokes behind, is another contender, as is senior Dana Ross, LeSueur, who was 10th in 1982 and had the second lowest qualifying score (80) this season.

In team competition, defending champion LeSueur and runner-up Waconia, who were only two strokes apart last year, are back in the field of eight teams. Other repeaters returning include Long Prairie and Pipestone. New to this year's team field are schools from Harmony, Redwood Falls, Nashwauk-Keewatin and Roseau. LeSueur with three players returning from its title team hopes to repeat and is considered the favorite, but Waconia has a strong nucleus returning also and should give the Giants a run for top honors.

Class AA

Golf tournament scene will switch to Majestic Oaks Golf Course in Ham Lake on Wednesday and Thursday, site of the Class AA event for boys and girls.

In the boys tournament defending individual champion Kyle Anderson, a senior from Duluth East, has won his way back to the state tournament and will try and become only the seventh boy to win back-to-back titles since the first tournament was conducted in 1928.

Anderson, who carded rounds of 74 and 72 over the challenging par-72, 6,337-yard layout a year ago, qualified for the state with a round of 76 this season. If Anderson is to repeat again this year, it will take another strong effort as two players from Mankato West and another from Albert Lea, based on qualifying scores, will give him a stern test.

Mankato West standouts include a pair of juniors, J. B. Lloyd and Bill Blethen, who had scores of 71 and 73, respectively, at the region tournament. Albert Lea's Jon Christian, meanwhile posted the state's low qualifying score with a scintillating 67. Christian, a member of last year's state championship team from Albert Lea, finished ninth in the state tourney as a freshman, but failed to qualify as an individual the past two seasons.

One individual expected to qualify for the event this year after finishing second in last year's Class A event was Albany senior Steve Schiffler. Schiffler, however, failed to be among the top five individuals at the Region 8AA tournament and will not compete this year.

In Class AA boys team competition defending champion Albert Lea was supplanted as region champion by Rochester Mayo, making certain that in 1983 a new champion will be crowned. Quartet to beat appears to be Hopkins, the Region 6AA kingpin, who will try and bring home to their school a first boys championship trophy. Mankato West is considered a darkhorse among other region team entrants. Remaining field includes teams from Hastings, Mahtomedi, Benilde-St. Margaret's, Duluth East, Melrose and Rochester Mayo.

A new team and individual winner is certain in the Class AA girls tournament as Milaca failed to qualify this year and 1982 medalist Sheila Peterson, Milaca, has graduated.

Among the top individuals entered are seniors Ann Wellenstein, Albany, and Shannon Sweeney, Elk River. Wellenstein, who finished sixth in last year's tournament was this year's low qualifier in Class AA with a 74. Sweeney, meanwhile will be appearing in her fifth consecutive state tournament and hopes to improve on her best finish, fifth, which occurred last year. She qualified with the second best score this year, a 77.

Last year's low non-graduate figured to be in the running for the gold medal is senior Lisa Peterson, Virginia.

Among the eight teams that will be on hand, last year's state runner-up, Willmar, is figured to be the team to beat. The Cardinals may get a challenge from Elk River, who has qualified in all six previous state tournaments, but has finished no higher than third. Another darkhorse is Albany. Others who hope to contend include Apply Valley, Hastings, Osseo, Edina and Hibbing.

Wildlife Group Poster Contest Is Announced

A poster will be worth a $1,000 U.S. Savings Bond to the student who wins the grand prize in the 1983 National Hunting and Fishing Day poster contest. Fifty-one other students, in grades 5 through 12, will win national prizes ranging from $50 savings bonds to $500 savings bonds. Altogether, $5,200 in savings bonds will be awarded as national prizes.

Fifty-two national prizes will be awarded to the students who best illustrate the theme of the 1983 NHF Day poster contest, "Sportsmen and Conservation — Building a Future for Wildlife."

Contest is open to all students in grades 5-12. There is a Junior Division for grades 5-8 and a Senior Division for grades 9-12.

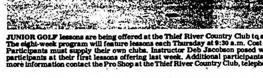
In addition to the grand prize, national prizes include $500 savings bonds for first place, $250 in bonds for second place and $100 bonds for third. First, second and third prizes will be awarded in both the Junior and Senior Divisions. There will also be 10 honorable mention prizes of $75 savings bonds and 35 merit awards of $50 savings bonds.

To be eligible for a national award, posters must have been chosen as winners in a locally sponsored National Hunting and Fishing Day poster contest. Local NHF Day poster contests may be sponsored by schools, sportsmen's clubs, conservation or civic groups and newspapers. Local contests should be organized as soon as possible to give students the opportunity to research and prepare their posters.

Where possible, it is suggested that local NHF Day poster contests be displayed and judged at NHF Day programs held on September 25. Prizes for local winners may be awarded by the sponsoring organization. Winning posters should then be sent to NHF Day headquarters for national judging. The deadline for submission of local prize-winning posters for the national contest is November 1, 1983.

For information on how to sponsor or participate in a local National Hunting and Fishing Day poster contest, write: NHF Day Poster Contest, P.O. Box 1075, Riverside, CT 06878.

JUNIOR GOLF lessons are being offered at the Thief River Country Club to all youths ages 9-16. The eight-week program will feature lessons each Thursday at 9:30 a.m. Cost of the lessons is $5. Participants must supply their own clubs. Instructor Deb Jacobson posed with a few program participants at their first lessons offering last week. Additional participants are welcome. For more information contact the Pro Shop at the Thief River Country Club, telephone 681-2955.



DNR NEWS

Programs Aided

Department of Natural Resources Commissioner Joseph N. Alexander announced that a review of records from 1978 to date has disclosed that Minnesota citizens have contributed millions of dollars and countless hours of voluntary assistance to his department.

As "inspiring examples of private sector commitment to conservation causes," Alexander cited:

+Gifts of $5.6 million to the DNR over the past four years in the form of land, leases and easements.

+An annual average of $538,000 in contributions via the so-called "chickadee tax checkoff" for the department's non-game species program.

+Fund raising programs of the private sector TIP, Inc. (Turn In Poachers) organization that grossed $220,000 during the past two years for support of the DNR's fish and wildlife enforcement activities.

+Public contributions to ensure publication of the DNR's Minnesota Volunteer magazine total over $310,000 for the past 2.5 years.

+Numerous examples of the purchase and donation by private organizations of equipment for department field operations.

+Thousands of citizen-volunteers who contribute their time and labor for state parks, forestry, fish and wildlife projects, as well as serving as volunteer instructors for the DNR's youth firearms safety training and advanced hunter education programs.

"Despite the fact that many of these good citizens have experienced personal financial problems, they have rallied to our support," Alexander said.

"It is obvious that there is widespread public awareness of the fact that we have been operating under a severe austerity program.

"Minnesota citizens have demonstrated time and again that care and concern for our natural resources is alive and well," Alexander said. "We are very grateful for that."

Canoe Association

Members of the Minnesota Canoe Association and other interested persons are reporting on river conditions in a cooperative project with the Department of Natural Resources.

Canoeists and other river users are asked to record the readings on river gauges and to note conditions that affect safety and enjoyment as they canoe rivers across the state. The brief reporting form records information ranging from low water and sandbars to rapids and other hazards, and how these conditions are affected by seasonal changes in water levels.

Reports will be used to provide more detailed information by the state's River Level Reporting Service. DNR currently maintains the service during the peak canoeing months — May through October — for the convenience and safety of persons using state streams and rivers.

Don Carlson, special assistant to the commissioner for trails and waterways unit, applauded the volunteer efforts of the Minnesota Canoe Association.

"This kind of detailed reporting based on actual experiences will enable us to provide better information to the public on what the river conditions are like at various water levels," he explained. "A stream that is placid during late summer low water levels can be quite a different story during spring runoff or when swollen with rain."

Those interested in participating in the cooperative project should phone the DNR trails and waterways unit at 612-296-6699. "The degree or canoeing experience is not a factor in this project," said Carlson. "In fact, it is necessary that all skill levels are involved."

Maps of the canoe and boating streams and information on the river level reporting project can also be obtained by contacting the above phone number.

DNR hotline

1. Do all persons in a boat have to wear a life preserver-are there some life preservers which are better than others?

All persons in a recreational watercraft must wear or have readily accessible a coast guard approved personal flotation device. Ski belts and inflatable devices will not meet such standards. There are four types of personal flotation devices approved for use.

Type I-a vest or yoke and Tye II-a vest which looks like a horse collar and is worn like a bib. Both will turn an unconscious person face up in the water. Type III will not turn persons face up, but comes in a variety of styles including vests and full sleeved jackets which provide the best protection against hypothermia. Type IV-a buoyant cushion or ring which can be thrown to victim in the water-this type needs to be checked especially carefully to be sure they are in serviceable condition. Byron Dyrland, Regional Enforcement Supervisor.

2. Can I make reservations to camp at a state park? Are there any additional charges for this service?

Eleven state parks have a reservation system for up to half of their available campsites. Reservations at these parks may be made through Labor Day be telephoning the park a minimum of 24 hours up to a maximum of 15 days in advance of the camper's arrival. Campsites will be held until 8 p.m. on the day of arrival unless an extension (by phone) is requested 24 hours before arrival. There is a $3 charge for reservation services which is not refundable and must be paid in addition to all other camping charges. Parks in Region I who are participating in the reservation system are Itasca State Park (218-266-3655); Lake Bemidji State Park (218-751-1472); and Lake Carlos State Park (612-852-7200). To receive a brochure on the reservation system, contact a state park near you or call the Regional Parks Office (218-755-3976). Mary Cleary, Region Parks Office.

3. Do I need lights on my boat to use it for night fishing?

Navigation lights must be on from sunset to sunrise. Non-motorized watercraft, whether underway or at anchor, must carry a white lantern or flashlight. The light must be visible from around the horizon at a distance of two or more miles.

Motorized watercraft, kayaks and sailboats must have white lights displayed which are visible for two miles on a dark, clear night. Combination or side lights must be visible for one mile. When underway, motorboats less than 26 feet long must display a 20-point combination red and green bow (front) light and a 32-point (360 degree) white stern (rear) light. When at anchor, only one 32-point white light is necessary. Byron Dyrland, Regional Enforcement Supervisor.

4. Got a question, a complaint, or a suggestion regarding how your natural resources are managed?

DNR Hotline is your direct channel to a representative who will answer you, whether it concerns parks, fish, wildlife, forests, waters or minerals. Write: DNR Hotline, 2115 Bichmont Beach Road NE, Bemidji, MN 56601; telephone 755-3976.

FOR SALE ON BIDS

The ten acre Alfred Hermanson berry farm is being offered for sale on bids. This river property is located on the airport road, just outside the city limits. It is fully irrigated and ready to be operated as a truck farm if someone wishes to again develop it. The location of this property makes it, also, ideal for development. A large area of the property is covered with beautiful spruce trees and could easily be developed into one of the most beautiful residential areas in the community.

Bids will be accepted up to and opened at 10:00 A.M. on June 24, 1983, at the McEwen Law Office, Northern State Bank Building, Thief River Falls, Minnesota. The top five bidders will have an opportunity to orally raise their bid at that time. No bids will be accepted for less than One Thousand Two Hundred ($1,200.00) Dollars per acre. A deposit of five per cent (5%) must accompany each bid. Seller reserves the right to reject any and all bids and shall have 24 hours after the bids close to make his decision. The successful bidder shall have the first opportunity to purchase any or all equipment used in the truck farm operation.

Install Hotline On Foreclosure Of Mortgages

Installation of a state-wide, toll-free home preservation hotline is intended to assist people with mortgage foreclosure problems and advise them of recent changes in foreclosure law.

Effective June 3, people can call the home preservation hotline at 1-800-652-9747, for information and assistance regarding mortgage problems, and for advice on the effect of recent changes in foreclosure law that were passed during the 1983 legislative session.

The hotline service will be housed with the state division of consumer services and will provide information and referral services to the appropriate legal, family and social service agencies. The phone counselor will provide information on recent changes in the foreclosure law, loan servicing options, mediation between borrowers and lenders, coordination between self-help groups and consumer advocacy in mortgage loan matters."

New state law changes foreclosure law to allow the courts to postpone a foreclosure sale for up to six months for homeowners and up to 12 months for farms. During this time, borrowers can reinstate their mortgages by paying only what they owe in delinquent payments, rather than the full price of the mortgage. The legislation also extends the notification periods for intent to foreclose, and adds a 30 day redemption period when a sale has occurred.

GTA Merges, Adopts Harvest States Name

Members of the Grain Terminal association (GTA) have given almost unanimous support — 98 per cent — to change the co-op's articles and bylaws and name to Harvest States cooperatives.

North Pacific Grain Growers, Inc., members were 96 per cent in favor of exchanging their equity in NPGG for stock in Harvest States cooperatives. Results of the two elections were announced June 1.

"The existence of Harvest States means farmers in this area now have their own port elevator on the west coast to add to facilities they own on the Gulf of Mexico and Great Lakes," said Donald F. Giffey of Roseglen, N.D., chairman of the cooperative's board of directors.

"A west coast terminal is something we've wanted for a long time, particularly in recent years when Pacific rim nations have increased their demand for American grains."

Anticipated annual grain handle of Harvest States will be in the neighborhood of 500 million bushels and annual sales in the neighborhood of $3 billion. Harvest States operates in a 16-state area.

The cooperative will be serving nearly 800 local cooperatives in the Upper Midwest and Pacific Northwest and is the fourth largest cooperative in the United States. Headquarters are in St. Paul.

BILLOWING CLOUDS of black powder smoke during a rapid fire pistol event held last weekend during the tenth annual muzzle loaders' "Rondyvoo," offered a distinct advantage to the shooter on the upwind side of the firing line. Using revolvers which were either replicas or originals from approximately the Civil War period of American history, the shooters could sympathize with difficulties faced by veterans of ancient battles, the least of which was the smoke, with an odor resembling rotten eggs. All in all, participants in the two-day event reported that they had a good time and planned to return next year. The "Rondyvoo" was sponsored by the River Junction Ramrodders, a subdivision of the Pennington county sportsmen club.

Council Votes To Appeal CAB's Airline Decision

At a special meeting held last night in city auditorium, Thief River Falls city council approved the final agreement for purchase of the Toreq, Inc. property, voted to appeal the Civil aeronautics board (CAB) decision selecting Bemidji Airlines as replacement carrier for Republic at the regional airport, discussed a request from Minstar Inc. for a reduction in taxes, and heard a request for funding from representatives of Jobs Inc., among other business.

Final agreement for purchase of the Toreq property was negotiated by Mayor Bob Carlson after an original agreement approved by council fell through due to Toreq's inability to pay penalties on delinquent taxes. Total original purchase price of $256,800 was increased by an additional city commitment of $2,628.15. Under that agreement, direct payments were made of $202,657.21 to First Federal Savings and Loan, which agreed to take $2,000 less than was owed on the mortgage on the property, and $29,600.55 to the county for delinquent taxes. $27,170 is still being withheld by the city pending final settlement of some issues with Toreq stockholders. A second mortgage payment of $3,200 will be deducted from that amount, as will $2,720.06, which Toreq's board of directors agreed to reimburse the city for their share of the taxes, leaving an anticipated surplus of $21,250.33 for Toreq.

As a matter of record, City Attorney Robert Wurst noted that all papers had already been filed granting title of the property to the city, and council unanimously voted to approve the agreement. Aldermen William Penning and Ambrose Wysoski were absent.

Council's decision to appeal the CAB order came about following a long discussion which included participation by representatives of Bemidji Airlines. Mayor Carlson and Alderman Don Goodrich reported that the airport committee had recommended the appeal following a noon meeting on Monday, which was closed to the public and representatives of Republic Airlines and Bemidji Airlines. He noted that the meeting was closed on the recommendation of city attorney Wurst, since they were discussing "pending litigation."

In discussing the recommendation to appeal, Goodrich emphasized that the decision was "not made because we don't like Bemidji Airlines or can't get alone with them." Mayor Bob Carlson commented that he thought there had been a misunderstanding due to statements made by individual council members, including himself, following announcement of the CAB decision, adding that he hoped they could "clear the air."

In justifying the recommendation to appeal the decision, emphasis was placed on the CAB's failure to follow their own guidelines" in selecting a proposal which did not give the city the essential air service (EAS) determination which they had been promised.

Since the CAB decision to lower the city's EAS determination was made in-part on the basis of current low traffic figures at the airport, Goodrich called attention to

Annual Dairy Day Has 167 Entries

Thirty-fourth annual Northwest Dairy Day in Thief River Falls June 14 will attract 167 entries in the dairy cattle show and 24 girls from 10 counties to the Region One dairy princess contest, according to information contained in the dairy day program booklet now being printed at the Times.

As usual, the Holstein calf class is the largest of all classes at the show and the Holsteins far out-number other dairy breeds. But there are entries from all six primary dairy breeds in the show again this year. There are 124 entries in the five Holstein classes, nine in Brown Swiss, eight in Guernsey, six in Jersey, eight in Ayrshire and two in Milking Shorthorn.

The cattle show will again be conducted on the parking lot at Floyd B. Olson park on Knight avenue between Second and Third streets in downtown Thief River Falls. Showmanship demonstration will open the show about 9:30 a.m. and princess coronation will conclude the day's events at 3:15 p.m. Inclement weather would force a move of the show to the curling club building at the Pennington county fairgrounds.

There will be no pancake feed in connection with the dairy day program this year. The 4-H club food concession will be expanded in size and variety of offerings and contestants in the dairy show will be provided with bag lunches. Princess candidates are provided with a luncheon at the Elks club rooms where judging is conducted throughout the day. Guests at the luncheon will be Princess Kay of the Milky Way and Northwest Dairy Princess of 1982 Heidi Neumann of Ada.

Judges for the dairy show this year will be Jonathon Ydstie of Milnor, ND, and Curtis Krause of Eagle Bend. To speed up the judging process, dairy day officials have authorized the large Holstein calf class to be judged in two groups with top entries to be selected for final consideration.

"We are pleased again this year that Northwest Dairy Day seems to be a highlight for dairy families throughout northwestern Minnesota," stated Klem Gigstad, chairman of the sponsoring Northwest Dairy Improvement association. "Support by sponsors and the many others who contribute their time and-or materials to making the day a success continues to be enthusiastic and has been a key to allowing the association to continue Northwest Dairy Day for these 34 years."

"Yvonne Can Have The Kidney!"

Transplant Changes Life For Mrs. Yvonne Welk

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

"Yvonne can have the kidney!"

That elated shout from the person answering the phone in the dialysis unit of Metropolitan Medical center in Minneapolis set off a celebration among staff members who had been attending Yvonne Welk of Thief River Falls. It signaled that computer matching and other test results had indicated the donated kidney she needed was compatible for transplant and surgery could be performed.

For Mrs. Welk — who has been a diabetic for 27 years and had functioned with peritoneal dialysis to cleanse her blood three times a week since October of 1978 — the long awaited news was both welcome and frightening.

"There is always a risk," she said about the decision to seek a kidney transplant. "It is a decision you have to make yourself. People down there (at the medical center) can explain the procedure and answer questions, but they leave the choice up to you.

"As far as I was concerned, I had no alternative. My kids are grown, my husband had died a few years ago, I had no excuse not to settle for the best."

It was early in 1982 when Yvonne first spoke with the transplant crew and clinic specialists at Hennepin County General hospital in Minneapolis about the possibility for a kidney transplant. For some time prior to that she had been thinking about the procedure and trying to make up her own mind about having such an operation.

Hospitalization and surgeries are nothing new to Mrs. Welk. She has spent many months in hospitals and undergone a number of procedures related to her kidney dysfunction. Prior to going on home dialysis in October of 1978, she spent several months in Metropolitan Medical center for treatment of septicemia — a systemic disease caused by pathogenic microorganisms and their toxic products in the blood.

"I had surgery in the first part of June last year to have my spleen and kidneys removed in preparation for transplant surgery," Mrs. Welk said. "I was in the hospital for three weeks then, still having blood pressure problems and other complications related to diabetes. I went on the donor list the first part of August."

The period of waiting then began. Back at home she continued on her three-times-per-week dialysis program, spending 12 hours connected to the machine dubbed "Homer" every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The metal box equipped with tubes, dials, gauges and alarm systems was connected to a catheter in her side, utilizing water and other solutions to cleanse her blood.

On Oct. 24, 1982, at 6:45 a.m., a telephone call came from Minneapolis that a donor kidney was available for her. Hurried preparations were made and with her daughter Linda driving they left for Minneapolis, arriving at about 3:30 p.m.

"They put me on dialysis immediately and began a series of tests to find out if I was the most likely candidate to receive the transplant. It was about 9:30 that evening when the call came to the dialysis unit that I could have the transplant."

"Yvonne can have the kidney!" The excited shout is still vivid in Yvonne's mind.

In a surgical process which involved six to seven hours and a team of doctors and technicians headed by Dr. O'Brien, Yvonne received the kidney of a traffic accident victim at Fargo, ND. She knows no more than that about the donor.

She spent the next two days in the intensive care unit and the kidney began to function immediately. The next five weeks were still spent in the hospital as diabetic complications were controlled. For seven weeks more she stayed at the Metropolitan Medical center dormitory and received daily treatment as an outpatient. It was the end of January when she came back to her farm about nine miles northwest of Thief River Falls.

After years of strict restrictions on liquid intake, the word from her doctor that he was removing all restrictions on liquids was a cause for celebration. "I had only been able to have four ounces of milk a day," Mrs. Welk said. "That day I drank a quart and a half! It's quite a change to go from a total of two cups of liquids a day, including cooking, to all the liquids you want!"

After three months at home, the weekly tests that she undergoes at Northwestern hospital here indicated that her body was beginning to reject the transplanted kidney. She returned to Minneapolis for high dosage treatment with prednesone, an anti-rejection drug. After two weeks of treatment she was again able to return home, and presently she takes only small doses of the drug through a single tablet three times a day.

"I never realized what bad shape I was in until I got well," Mrs. Welk says. "I couldn't walk to the mailbox (a distance of about 200 yards) without stopping to rest a couple of times each way. Now it's no trick at all to walk out there and back. I can go anywhere I want and just about any hospital can conduct the tests I need done." The home dialysis unit was picked up at the Welk home last month.

For a year and one-half she is to return to the medical center for a physical examination every three months. After nine months she can reduce the hospital tests to every other week, and after a year the tests can be conducted only monthly. Rejection can occur at any time, however, as the body's immune system attempts to fight off the foreign organ. The rejection is controllable through intravenous dosage of the anti-rejection drug.

Mrs. Welk says that medicaid and Blue Cross-Blue Shield have covered most of the costs of her hospitalization, surgeries and dialysis. The transplant surgery alone, she believes, cost about $47,000. Dialysis costs about $2,500 a month. But transportation and living expenses are not covered and can become a burden.

That is one reason the Thief River Falls area people who have conducted kidney foundation fund campaigns for a number of years have organized and registered a Kidney Foundation of Thief River Falls. Previously all of the funds raised locally have gone to the Kidney Foundation of the Upper Midwest — well over $30,000 in the past few years. When approached by

FREE AGAIN after a kidney transplant has permitted her to return a home dialysis machine that previously sustained her life, Yvonne Welk of rural Newfolden enjoys the company of one of her farm's feline family. She is an avid supporter of organ donor programs and says she will help the local kidney foundation in any way she can. The foundation is sponsoring its annual auction on Saturday and Sunday, June 18 and 19, in the Thief River Falls sports arena.

MORE THAN LIKELY Linda Welk is planting a bigger garden than her mother can hoe, but Yvonne Welk is looking forward to this summer gardening season with renewed enthusiasm. Recipient of a kidney transplant in October of last year, Mrs. Welk says she didn't know what tough shape she was in until she started feeling good again. The walk to the mailbox a couple hundred yards from the Welk house no longer requires two rest stops each way. "If people only knew how they could help others through transplant donor programs, there wouldn't be the shortage of organs that exists today," Mrs. Welk said.

Council Votes Appeal On CAB Airline Action

statements made by Diane Morales, a dissenting member of the board which voted three-to-two in selecting the Bemidji airlines proposal. In Morales's statement of dissent, she noted, "A majority of this board strongly believes that the current low traffic figures at Thief River Falls result from the poor quality of air service to which it has been subjected." Goodrich noted that the other dissenting board member, Gloria Schaffer, commented, "this community has seen the level of Republic's service spiral downward. The predictable result of a diminution in service is lower traffic levels. In view of this lower traffic, the board reduced the community's essential air service level. Now it is proposing to effectively further reduce the community's service guarantee by selecting Bemidji's proposal."

Schaffer further noted that the strong support which the community had shown for the Mesaba Airlines proposal justified, in her view, an investment in the community's potential ability to generate the increased enplanements which it believes will result from a strong service pattern offered by a highly regarded carrier.

Morales also commeted that "Bemidji's proposal may just accomodate current traffic, but the community will have little opportunity to improve its enplanements or to move towards subsidy-free, self-sufficient air service."

Barbara Berggren, general manager of Bemidji Airlines, took exception to the suggestion, noting that every effort would be made by them to promote increased use of the airline's service. Noting that the CAB had eliminated all of the non-stop proposals prior to narrowing its decision down to the one stop proposals made themselves and Mesaba, she questioned whether the city would really prefer three flights per day to the five flights proposed by Bemidji. She also noted that two of those five flights would be non-stop between here and Minneapolis.

On questioning about whether Bemidji Airlines would consider making the other three flights non-stop, she stated that it was presently not economically feasible, but allowed that if the boardings were here to fill the plane over 50 per cent of capacity, they would make the flights non-stop. She qualified the statement by noting that additional passengers boarding in Bemidji would have to exceed the nine passenger capacity of the plane, before they would put them on one of their additional aircraft.

She also noted that the differences between their nine passenger aircraft and the 14 passenger Beech 99 aircraft proposed by Mesaba were minimal, with the passenger capacity of the Beech 99 reduced to as low as nine passengers in bad weather. She suggested that Bemidji Airlines did have a Beech 99 available on lease, if the city would really rather have only three flights per day.

Wurst noted that the pitch for non stop service was an emotional thing, with passengers finding it most appealing. He added that it would be difficult to sell people on the smaller plane without it.

Questioned regarding the cost of filing the appeal, Wurst noted that it would be difficult to estimate, depending on how far it went, but estimated that filing the petition would cost "under a thousand." After considerable discussion, the matter was called to a vote, with the council members present voting unanimously to file the appeal.

Mayor Carlson noted that they couldn't do less than ask the CAB to give them the service level which had been promised. He noted that should that appeal fail, the city would do everything possible to assist Bemidji Airlines in promoting its business.

Berggren noted that Bemidji was working toward a start up date of June 26, and would continue to offer service to the community regardless of the outcome of the CAB decision, so long as it remained profitable.

Discussion on a request from Minstar Inc. for reduction of taxes due in 1984 on the former Arctic Enterprises property was conducted with members of the Pennington county board of commissioners who were present. Although action on the request was delayed until the next meeting of council on Monday, June 13, discussion was held to feel out members of the county board and the public. Decision to be made on Monday will be in the form of a recommendation to the county board whether to reduce the valuation on the property, resulting in a reduction in the real estate taxes.

Request made by Minstar at the Board of Review was for a reduction in taxes from $104,297.86 to about $25,000. Council faces a dilemma on the reduction since Minstar representatives reportedly threatened not to pay taxes due this year of $104,297.86, unless they received the reduction. Carlson noted that reports in the media following the board of review had not mentioned that Minstar had requested smaller reductions in taxes for the next two years, of approximately 60,000 annually.

ONE GALLON bottle of "After Bath Splash" was presented to Peggy Solem, Thief River Falls (right) after her name was drawn in a contest sponsored by Thomas Drug. Julie Peterson, cosmetics salesman at the store, awarded the bottle, a value of $37.50, to Solem.

County Auditor Gerard DeHaan suggested that the property which has an estimated market value of $2,283,200, be assessed on a valuation of $1,500,000 to $1,600,000, which would generate approximately $70,000 in taxes in 1984. Of that amount, approximately half would go to the school district, with the city and county each getting about a fourth.

Mayor Carlson noted that they had no way of predicting how Minstar would react to the offer, but noted that since Arctco was leasing a portion of the buildings, they had to consider what would happen to those jobs if Minstar reacted unfavorably. Arctco's lease is only good until December. Carlson suggested that the city might give consideration to issuing bonds for purchase of the property to protect the infant industry. Minstar has claimed that the property costs them approximately $300,000 per year to keep up, with heat, maintenance, security and taxes.

County board members noted that setting a precedent in granting a large reduction in taxes could have serious consequences, with several other businesses waiting to see the outcome. They noted that economic conditions could not be used as a basis for reductions, adding that many farmers had not had a crop in three years, with no reduction in taxes.

DeHaan noted that each case had to be evaluated on an individual basis, adding that they could consider the fact that the property had been vacant for a year in making a recommendation. County Board member Glenn Tasa noted that although the board could overrule the council decision when they meet on July 11, they "traditionally" take their recommendation.

Council also heard a proposal from Roger Tunberg and David Strong, representing Jobs Inc., which requested $15,000 in funding for a position to seek industry for Thief River Falls. Council voted to grant $7,500 immediately from federal revenue sharing funds, with the remainder to follow based on acceptance of the project by the county board and the school district which are also being approached for funding. More complete information will be released following presentations before those boards.

In other business the council discussed the status of the lease-sale agreement on the former Dow-Key building by Northern Outerwear, which is near a final settlement; and granted a request from the slow pitch softball association to consume alcoholic beverages while playing on the public diamonds near the area vocational technical institute.

Correction

In the death notice of Fritz Hartmann, 81 of Karlsruhe, West Germany, father of Mrs. Glenn N. Carlson of rural Thief River Falls, published in Monday's Times, an error was made in listing the survivors. His wife's name is Emmy, not Barbara.—Barbara—is—a daughter-in-law, the wife of his son, Hans-Peter. The Times regrets the error.

Honor Citizens For Crime Prevention

Luncheon honoring 16 citizens whose efforts have helped law enforcement agencies in crime prevention will be held Friday, June 10 at the Old Log theater in Excelsior, according to the Minnesota department of public safety.

Citizens to be honored come from outstate Minnesota as well as the Twin Cities. Their contributions range from forming a network of neighbors who watch for suspicious activity in the neighborhoods, to establishing crime prevention funds to help pay for prevention activities. One of the honored citizens is credited with being instrumental in assisting the Robbinsdale police department in apprehending four suspects who were charged and convicted of burglary.

Guest speaker at the luncheon will be Minnesota department of public safety commissioner Paul Tschida. His comments will focus on the benefits of citizen involvement in community crime prevention.

Commissioner Tschida was the superintendent of the state bureau of criminal apprehension from 1975 to 1979. He was an FBI agent for nine years and an assistant attorney general for eight years. Prior to being appointed commissioner in January 1983, Tschida was director of a corporate security.

Certificates of appreciation will be presented to each honored citizen by the Minnesota crime prevention officers association (MCPOA), sponsor of the luncheon. "Citizen involvement in crime prevention is important," said Lucy Gerold, MCPOA president. "So the association is pleased to recognize these people for their participation."

MCPOA is a nine year old, 150 member association which provides law enforcement officers with information they can use to help citizens avoid becoming crime victims.

Congressman Asks Action On Withholding

Congressman Arlan Stangeland has called on Senate majority leader Howard Baker of Tennessee for fast Senate action on repeal of the 10 per cent withholding tax on interest earned by savings accounts and investments.

"Unless the Senate takes action, this controversial tax will go into effect on July 1," Congressman Stangeland said in a letter to the top-ranking senate Republican.

"Even though the House of Representatives voted to repeal this tax three weeks ago, it will go into effect in 24 days if you fail to act," he said. No date has been set for floor debate on the "repeal" bill in the Senate.

"To delay repealing this tax will not just cost the banks money," Congressman Stangeland said. "It will hurt depositors who will have to pay for this paperwork, it will add to the burden of U.S. taxpayers and it will slow our national economic recovery."

Rep. Stangeland pointed out that many rural banks are already gearing up for the July 1 start of the tax. "They can't be certain that you will take action in time," Congressman Stangeland said. "These costs will be passed along to the customers."

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf

State Senator — District 1

Full-scale legislative activity has drawn to a close for the time being — the 1983 session ended in a flurry two weeks ago. Now those of us who wrote and passed the laws, as well as our friends and neighbors who we passed them for, will begin to see the impacts of the actions the Legislature took this year.

Over the next few months, I plan to write a column frequently to help residents of our district evaluate the impacts of the new laws we passed. In each column, I'll tell you what I know about changes we made in such areas as education, the business climate, workers' compensation, taxes and state government spending policies. I'll try, also, to give you an idea of what the changes we made statewide will mean to our part of the state specifically.

This week I'd like to talk about a few of the new tax measures the 1983 Legislature passed.

The tax package is intended to raise $198 million in new revenues, it will put the state budget back in the black with a $320 million fund balance at the beginning of the 1983-85 biennium.

In order to accomplish that goal, it was necessary to extend until 1985 the temporary 10 per cent income tax surcharge and the additional one per cent sales tax set to expire this year, to raise the motor vehicle excise tax from five to six per cent and to somewhat redistribute the state's property tax load. But, at the same time, we were able to retain the current system of income tax indexing and, in our part of the state, ease farmers' property tax burden and increase local government aids to many of our cities.

Preliminary figures from the state revenue department show that farmers in Kittson, Marshall, Roseau, Beltrami and Red Lake counties will pay less in ag homestead property taxes in 1984 than they would have under the old property tax formula. And most of the cities in Kittson, Lake of the Woods and Marshall counties will see local government aid increases in 1984 of between five and six per cent over 1983 figures. I believe that our corner of the state fared well under the new property tax and local government aid formulas.

I am pleased as well that we were able to put together a budget plan that erases the deficits the state has been plagued with for the past several years, and yet leaves income tax indexing intact. Indexing is a moderating factor in our income tax formula — it adjusts tax brackets to inflation in order to keep a lid on the amount of people's incomes the state can claim in income taxes. Under the new law, indexing remains, and can be suspended in the future only if a budget deficit appears again. I am confident that the budget we passed is responsible and far-sighted enough to prevent that from happening.

As local and state officials work with the new tax formulas in the coming weeks, it will become more apparent exactly what the changes mean in terms of dollars in taxpayers' pockets. I will report those figures to you as they become available to me.

I belive the overall picture for our state and our region for the next two years is a positive one; I look forward to putting the plans the Legislature made this year to work to help make it that way.

If you have specific areas of legislation that you would like to hear about or questions about any of the legislation I wrote about this week, please feel free to contact me at my home at Route 1, Box 47, Plummer, MN 56748.

Expect 400 At Engelstad Family Reunion

Approximately 400 descendants and spouses of the Peder Engelstad family will observe the 100th anniversary of Peder and Mathilde's arrival in this area by horse and wagon with a family reunion July 2 and 3 in Thief River Falls.

The family, which descended from Peter and Mathilde's 13 children, now includes three of that second generation, 42 of the third, 125 of the fourth, 105 of the fifth and a one-year-old girl as the first of the sixth generation.

Members of the Engelstad clan from 20 states coast to coast will attend, and an international flavor will be provided by the visit of a second cousin from Norway.

Public participation is invited by the family so that old acquaintances and friendships can be renewed, according to Melvin Engelstad, youngest of the second generation and organizer of the reunion. Public visitors will be welcome at Valhall near the Engelstad family homestead July 2 throughout the day and July 3 at the sports arena after 2 p.m.

Registration, softball and horseshoe contests and refreshments will be part of the activity at Valhall July 2. At the sports arena July 3 there will be a church service at 11 a.m., followed by a dinner and family program, as well as outdoor activities.

Of the 13 second generation children, three are still living — Melvin, Ole and Mrs. Valborg Hanson, all of Thief River Falls. Each generation will be represented in the speaking program July 3 in the sports arena. Centennial reunion T-shirts are being printed for the event. Last reunion of the family was held here in 1977.

Highway 32 Project Open House Slated

Informal open house meeting will be held by the Minnesota department of transportation on Monday, June 20, in Red Lake Falls so area residents can review and comment on an upcoming reconstruction project on truck highway 32 from Red Lake Falls to trunk highway 2.

Open house will be held at the Red Lake Falls city hall on Monday, June 20 from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Transportation officials will be on hand to answer questions about the project and receive comments from area residents.

Project will involve roadway reconstruction to strengthen and widen the highway 32 roadway and to flatten the inslopes. Turn lanes would be constructed at trunk highway 92 and county road 14. These improvements would require additional right of way on each side of the roadway. Through traffic would have to be detoured during the construction period.

Development work on the project is proceeding based on a tentative letting date of October 25, 1985.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

When it comes to the weather, this hasn't been a good year. Everytime we pick up a paper or turn on the news, there is a report of another "natural" disaster occurring somewhere.

The state of Texas was just hit by over 10 tornadoes and hail the size of baseballs. Several people were killed and hundreds of others saw their homes completely destroyed.

At the same time, five feet of rainfall caused ravaging floods across several southern states. Again, hundreds of people were left without their homes.

A few months ago, the people of Hawaii witnessed the worst hurricane in recent memory.

As I read these stories, it's something hard to fully grasp exactly how devastating these disasters are. One story described a tornado in Texas wrapping a mobile home around a telephone pole, toppling others, flattening a two-story home and lifting the roofs off several others. The same story told about a 15-year old boy inside a mobile home being held by his family. The tornado pulled the boy from the grasp of his family, and he was found dead outside the trailer home.

As the father of four sons, suddenly, the real impact of such disasters hit home.

It also made me realize how lucky we've been in Minnesota this year. We haven't had any of those misfortunes. Sometimes it's hard to even imagine that kind of terror and tragedy.

The people in Rochester can tell you what it's like. A few years ago, flooding left five people dead and damage in excess of $60 million.

Most of us have never had to cope with such a disaster. A lot of us wouldn't know what to do or where to turn. But, as in Texas, the southern states, Hawaii and Rochester, the American Red Cross does. We can always count on the American Red Cross and its highly skilled and caring volunteers to be among the first on the spot — helping people find shelter, providing food and clothing and first aid.

The American Red Cross has a national disaster budget which is used especially for these kinds of emergencies. But because these disasters have struck the United States with such unrelenting force this year, the American Red Cross was forced to make an announcement recently:

The disaster budget is out of money.

Because the Red Cross feels it's urgent to replenish the national disaster budget quickly, officials decided to start a fundraising campaign.

These are not the best times, and raising money isn't an easy task.

To help bring attention to this emergency situation and to the importance of this cause, they asked me to be the honorary chairman of the fundraising effort in Minnesota. I accepted the job and feel greatly honored that I can play a role in their efforts.

Not only do I believe very strongly in the American Red Cross, but I think it's terribly important that we do everything we can to help our voluntary organizations when they need our help.

As the honorary chairman of the American Red Cross national disaster fund campaign, I urge you to help in whatever way you can. By making a small donation to your local Red Cross chapter, (designate that it's for the disaster fund) you will be helping thousands of people who are the helpless victims of terrible weather disasters.

James Spong Assigned To Lowry Base

James A. Spong

Airman James A. Spong, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Spong of Oklee, has been assigned to Lowry air force base, CO, after completing air force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland air force base, TX, the airman studied the air force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the community college of the air force. He will now receive specialized instruction in the supply field.

Dairy Bill Is Bad For State, Ag Head Says

A controversial dairy bill passed out of the House agriculture committee recently would severely harm Minnesota, the fourth leading dairy state, and its 26,000 dairy farmers, says Minnesota department of agriculture commissioner Jim Nichols.

Dairy production act of 1983 proposes to cut U.S. dairy support prices by $1.50 per hundredweight from $13.10 to $11.60 in order to cut the nation's dairy surplus. A total of $1.65 per hundredweight will be deducted from the farmers check with the mandatory promotion fee. "This amounts to $180 million per year for Minnesota or $6,900 per farm," said Nichols.

He predicted that the price cuts will probably last for the next six years and will ultimately cost each dairy farmers in Minnesota more than $40,000 in lost income.

"Price cuts are being pushed by southeastern dairy farmers and western corporate farms. Southeastern farmers currently receive $17 to $18 per hundredweight. If this bill passes, Minnesota will lose 5,000 dairy farmers in the next decade. They will be replaced by corporate dairy farms on the west coast," Nichols predicted.

Price cuts are being proposed by the Reagan administration to cut surplus dairy stocks. "But it doesn't work that way. The truth is that recent price cuts in the form of a 50 cent assessment have increased production and the resulting surplus. Production has increased every month since farmers received the first price cut December 1. Price cuts will only increase the surplus as farmers increase production to make up for the lost income," Nichols said.

Government costs are incurred when the government buys surplus stocks. "If there is no surplus there are no government costs. It is ridiculous for the Reagan administration, Senator Rudy Boschwitz and Congressman Vin Weber to push a proposal that will increase government costs. Cutting the price is a continuation of current policy which has increased production by two per cent nationally."

"What is needed is an incentive to cut production along with an elimination of the federal milk tax. We need a realistic, long-term solution that will curb the surplus while providing farmers a chance to maintain their cash flow and meet costs."

To seek a more realistic policy that is fair to Midwestern farmers, the commissioner is calling a meeting of the farm organizations (including Farmers Union, NFO and Farm Bureau) and dairy farmers on Tuesday, June 7, at the State Capitol at 1:30 p.m. Governor Rudy Perpich and Commissioner Nichols will forward the proposals from Minnesota dairy producers to the Minnesota congressional delegation and governors and congressmen of Midwestern states.

Stangeland Supports Bill To Use Surplus

Congressman Arlan Stangeland has endorsed a plan which he says will "bolster farm commodity prices and save taxpayers' dollars by distributing government-owned surplus food to needy Americans."

"It is better to give our food surplus to needy Americans than to pay the cost of storage in warehouses," Congressman Stangeland said. "The distributed food cannot drive down the future price of farmers' commodities. And taxpayers won't have to pay for storage."

The bill, (H.R. 1590), has been approved unanimously by the House agriculture committee.

"This bill would require the secretary of agriculture to provide surplus commodities, that are not otherwise needed for foreign and domestic commitments, to emergency feeding centers and other worthy recipients," Congressman Stangeland said.

That would include schools, elderly feeding centers and veterans administration hospitals. The program would be authorized for a two-year testing period, and it would include limited administrative funding for over-sight of the program.

"The food would be delivered in a processed form: flour, instead of wheat," he said. "That would prevent the distributed goods from displacing the farmers' commodities.

"By reducing the federal surplus, this bill will increase demand for new U.S. crops," said Rep. Stangeland, a senior member of the House agriculture committee. "That increased demand will bolster farm prices, especially after the impact of the PIK program begins to be felt."

Congressman Stangeland was an original co-sponsor of an identical piece of legislation (H.R. 1513) which was proposed by Republican members of the House agriculture committee at the start of the 98th Congress.

Leann Steiger, Wanda Nelson Receive Award

Leann Steiger

Wanda Nelson

Home-Based Head Start program, operating through Inter-County community council, inc., Oklee, announces that two staff persons have earned a national professional award known as the child development associate (CDA) credential. In March, Leann Steiger and Wanda Nelson, Home Base Educators, were assessed as qualified to receive the CDA credential by a four-member team composed of child development professionals and a local parent participating in the Head Start program.

Leann Steiger, who lives in rural Thief River Falls, has been with Head Start for three years and has served the Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls areas as home base educator. Wanda Nelson has been with Head Start for two years, lives in Thief River Falls and has served the Goodridge and Thief River Falls areas.

Award of the credential requires that applicants demonstrate skill in 13 areas of child care and development ranging from maintaining a safe and healthy environment to stimulating social and intellectual development in children. The assessment of skills is competency based meaning that candidates are observed in the actual working environment and judged on performance.

To gain the skills, Steiger and Nelson attended workshops and classes on many aspects of child development and received on the job training as home visitors for the Head Start program. Both also had completed training through the child development and family relations programs at the University of Minnesota, Crookston, and had worked with children in other programs.

Basic component of the home based Head Start program at Inter-County is its staff of home based educators. During the first meeting with Head Start children and parents, home educators, like Steiger and Nelson, make an extensive assessment of the child in terms of his or her language abilities, motor and intellectual development and other areas such as ability to get along with others and to take care of him or herself.

After a determination of the child's needs, the head start educator devises a plan of activities to help the child improve in those areas of need. The activities will vary greatly depending on the child. Some children need help in learning colors or numbers, some in tying their shoes or expressing themselves with words.

Head Start program of Inter-County serves 96 children in its service area that includes East Polk, Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater counties. The program operates from September through May. More information about Head Start may be obtained from Inter-County Community Council, Box 186, Oklee, MN 56742, or phone 796-5144.

Transplant Changes Life Of Mrs. Welk

local organizers for money to help Mrs. Welk travel to Minneapolis for her transplant work, the foundation said none was available.

That refusal prompted local people to set up a local foundation, and it is that foundation which is conducting the community action Saturday and Sunday, June 18 and 19, at the Thief River Falls sports arena. Money will still be channeled to the Kidney Foundation of the Upper Midwest, but some will be retained to provide direct assistance to area people when the need arises.

"The folks here are doing a tremendous job," Mrs. Welk said of the local kidney fund efforts. "I have told them I will help in any way that I can. And I am a strong supporter of organ donor programs. People don't realize the joy and relief from suffering that organ transplants can provide unless they have been directly affected."

Cornea transplants are now 90 per cent successful, kidney transplants are 80 per cent successful and heart transplants have a 60 per cent success rate. Yet only four out of 10 Americans who need a transplant receive one, primarily due to the lack of donated organs. Donor information is available from the Hennepin County Medical Center, and University of Minnesota hospitals in Minneapolis and Mayo clinic in Rochester.

Many others can share the relief and excitement Mrs. Welk experienced when she heard the joyful shout, "Yvonne can have the kidney!"

Crookston Sets June 18 Art In Park

Artists from across Minnesota and North Dakota have registered for the fourth annual Art in the Park slated for Saturday, June 18, at the University of Minnesota Crookston (UMC). The artwork will be on exhibit and available for sale between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. on the UMC campus mall. In case of rain the event will be moved inside the food service building.

Visitors to Art in the Park will have a chance to view and buy art works from virtually every medium, according to the two co-chairpersons coordinating the event, Claudia Rasmus and Kathy Dryden, both of Crookston.

Artists are already registered in the areas of photography, rosemalling, metal casting, pen and ink, woodworking, painting of all varieties, glass craft, pine needle art, pottery, calligraphy, prints, and sculpture.

"More artists are registered this year than at the same time last year," commented Rasmus.

Special features at this year's Art in the Park include the return of the popular "Balloon Man" Carl Lundeen of Crookston, who has rapidly become a friend of children of all ages by creating mice, dogs, and various other animals out of balloons. The Pillow theatre will give several presentations; winning 4-H groups will perform; several musical groups will stroll throughout the mall; Lloyd Eisert and his fiddlers will play an afternoon concert; and children will have the opportunity to have their faces painted.

Life-Line To Celebrate Anniversary

Life-Line Christian center, Newfolden will celebrate its first anniversary on Sturday at 8 p.m. at the center.

Scheduled event is a home talent variety night. Special lunch will be served and all age groups are invited to attend.

TO THE VOTERS OF INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 564:

I take this opportunity to thank all of you who went to the polls on May 17, 1983, and cast a vote for my election. I further take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation to the many people in this School District who have provided me with ideas and expressed their concerns to me over the past nine (9) years.

The election for the Board of Education for School District No. 54 is behind us. The future of education and our children's future is, however, still very much before us. We must, as parents and citizens of this School District continue to maintain our interest in education and the educational process.

Thank you.

Answers from the Bible by Pastor Don Peres

Q. Pastor Don, the Bible says "Honor thy Father and thy Mother." What exactly is meant by this verse? To what extent must one obey his parents? Does God want children to grow independent of their parents and lead their own lives? How does one break away from dominating parents without a big battle?

A. You have asked some very interesting questions, all somewhat related.

Let's take a look at your first question.

Eph. 6:2 says, "Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise."

The word "honour" means to love, respect, adore, revere, admire, esteem, to treat someone as though they are very special.

God asks us to honour our parents, not because they make all the right decisions necessarily, but because of the position of authority God has given them as parents. That honour should exist all the days of their lives, even if they have to live in a retirement home.

Now for your second question: "To what extent must one obey his parents?"

Eph. 6:1 says, "Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right."

Col. 3:20 says, "Children, obey your parents in all things; for this is well pleasing unto the Lord."

Notice Paul always tells "children" to obey. Concerning taxes and other governmental matters, the United States always considers a person a child until they reach the age of 18. In the Old Testament a Jewish male was considered a man when he reached the age of 12. When Jesus was twelve years old, he went to Jerusalem and was in the temple three days. His parents couldn't find him. When they finally did find him, they expressed their concern. In Luke 2:51 the scriptures tell us Jesus went back home with them and was subject to them. He stayed home till he was 30 years old when He began his public ministry. So, if a person decides to stay at home after 18 years of age, they are still subject to their parents' authority.

Your third question was, "Does God want children to grow independent of their parents and lead their own lives?"

Yes, He does. That's what parents ought to be doing when they "train up their children in the way that they should go." (Prov. 22:6) I know it's hard for parents to let go, but they should be helping their children to mature and to begin to make independent decisions. Adults are made, not born.

The scriptural attitude would be to talk kindly and carefully with your parents, making sure to keep an attitude of honor toward them. If your parents are children of God, they should soon find peace in their hearts about your decision and rejoice with you in your future.

If you have any questions that you would like to have answered from the Bible, please write: Pastor Don Peres, Box 129, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Keep Your Baby Safe On The Road

One of the most important investments for new parents is a child car safety seat, advises the Better Business Bureau of Minnesota.

Automobile accidents are the leading killer of children between the ages of one and four in this country. Some people think they can protect infants and young children from injury by holding them in their laps. They cannot.

From the very first ride home from the hospital, an infant should be secured in an approved safety seat.

Protection Tips For Tornado Month of June

June is "tornado month" in Minnesota, a time to keep in mind how best to protect yourself, your loved ones and your property if a twister comes your way, according to Tom Motherway, emergency services director of the Minnesota public safety department.

Tornadoes usually come out of the southwest in the late afternoon of a hot, humid day, but they can occur any time, day or night, when warm, moist air rises to meet cool, dry air and strong jet stream winds above it.

Tornadoes often are spawned by several thunderstorms, heralded by towering cumulus clouds and an oppressing lack of a breeze. When the sky begins to darken, the weather can change swiftly into a furious tumult of high winds, thunder, lightning, pelting rain and destructive hail.

First thing to do when those early signs appear, Motherway says, is to stay tuned to radio or television for news of a "tornado watch" or a "tornado warning."

A "tornado watch" is a forecast by the nation weather service of the possibility of a tornado. This is the time to do a little planning such as locating family members and gathering items including a flashlight, battery operated radio, important papers and your car keys.

Your car keys are important. If a twister should hit and scatter your belongings, your car could be your "lifeboat" afterwards.

When a "tornado warning" is broadcast, usually accompanied by a steady, five-minute siren, take cover without delay. At home, go to your basement and take shelter under a heavy workbench or table. In a dwelling with no basement, the safest place is in an interior room under heavy furniture, or in a bathroom or closet. Stay away from windows.

Never stay in a trailer or mobile home. Seek refuge in the nearest substantial structure. If there is none nearby — or if you are caught out in the open — lie flat in the nearest ditch, ravine or culvert, with hands and arms shielding your head. Beware of rising waters.

Motorists should protect themselves in the same way if there is no time to evade the onrushing funnel clouds by driving at right angles to it. The first warning a motorist may have of a tornado approaching from behind is its ominous shuddering sound, much like that of a jet plane or train.

If your property has suffered damage, inspect it immediately for electrical problems and gas leaks. Report them to utility companies or the fire department at once, if danger is imminent. Do not enter a damaged building until you are sure it is safe. Report to emergency services authorities on the scene, who will see to it that you get medical care, food, clothing and shelter.

For free publications on how to protect yourself during the tornado season, contact your county emergency services office or the Minnesota division of emergency services at (612) 296-2233.

Thief River Falls' Scott Sabo was not selected in the 1983 Major League baseball amateur draft this week.

A tenth-round draft choice of the Minnesota Twins a year ago, Sabo elected to return to the University of Wisconsin this year where the junior was a member of the Badgers' NCAA national champion hockey team and was a left-handed pitcher on the Wisconsin baseball squad.

Milwaukee Brewers and Kansas City Royals both expressed interest in Sabo, but a not-very-productive spring season with the Badgers apparently diminished his value in the scouts' eyes and he was by-passed in the draft after having been told earlier he was almost certain to be taken.

But Scott himself admitted he had an off-year and indicated he would have been surprised if he had been drafted.

In his defense, Sabo was hampered all spring by a sore toe that bothered him when he pitched and ran. In addition, Wisconsin's march to the NCAA hockey finals left him way behind in his baseball form when he joined the team immediately after the hockey season ended. He never did catch up.

His plans at this point are uncertain. He could sign as a free agent if a major league club were to be interested in his services, but he may simply take a break this summer from a nearly year-round sports program and return to Wisconsin next year for another season of the hockey-baseball combination.

Meanwhile, Thief River Falls' Tim Bergland was expected to be selected in the National Hockey League draft that started today. Headed for the University of Minnesota on a hockey scholarship, the recent Lincoln high school graduate was listed as the top 18-year-old hockey player in the state by NHL scouts.

Hartford expressed a great deal of interest in Bergland, an All-Section 8 and WCCO radio all-state selection this winter who played in the Minnesota North-South all-star game and was a member of Team Minnesota in the Minnesota-Massachusetts high school all-star series in Boston.

Baseball Finals Set

Championship games are scheduled today (Wednesday) in Region 8A and Region 8AA high school baseball tournaments.

In Region 8A at Red Lake Falls, Roseau meets Bagley at 7 tonight for a Class A state tournament berth. Both finalists were runner-up finishers in their respective sub-region tournaments, but in Tuesday's regional semifinals, Roseau shut out Sub-Region 8A winner Bagley 5-0 and Cass Lake eliminated North Sub-Region 8A champion Lake of the Woods 7-3.

Class A state baseball tournament will be played June 16-17 at St. Cloud's Municipal Stadium. Cass Lake is looking for its first state tournament appearance since the Panthers made back-to-back trips in 1953 and 1954. Roseau earned state tournament trips in 1966-1976-1977. Should the Rams win tonight, Thursday's Thief River Falls vs. Roseau American Legion baseball game will be postponed here.

Meanwhile, St. Cloud Apollo and Moorhead will square off today in the Region 8AA finals at St. Cloud. Apollo is South Sub-Region 8AA representative and Moorhead is the North Sub-Region 8AA titlist.

Class AA state baseball tournament will be played June 14-15 at the new Municipal Stadium in St. Paul. Apollo made state tournament appearances in 1973-77-78-80, but Moorhead, surprisingly, hasn't earned a state tournament berth since the Spuds made back-to-back trips in 1967-68. They also appeared in the 1953 event.

Thief River Falls, eliminated by Crookston 4-0 in the North Sub-Region 8AA quarterfinals this spring, hasn't made a state baseball tournament appearance since 1963. The Prowlers also played in the state tournament in 1955 and 1959.

CATCHER BRIAN KEMNITZ of Thief River Falls applied the tag on Crookston base runner Rick Schmitz, but to no avail as the ball bounced away on a sixth inning safety squeeze during Tuesday's American Legion baseball game played on the Thief River Falls fairgrounds diamond. Crookston won the 1983 Northwest League opener 6-2. It was the season opener for the visitors, while Thief River Falls, scheduled to be in Grafton tonight (Wednesday) for a 6 p.m. doubleheader and at home Thursday for a 7 p.m. game against Roseau, fell to 1-1.

Crookston 6-2 Winner Over Young TRF Legion Ball Club

A young Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team became even younger Tuesday and lost a 6-2 Northwest League decision to Crookston on the fairgrounds diamond.

There were only two full-time starters from this spring's Lincoln high school varsity baseball team in the Thief River Falls American Legion line-up last night — pitcher Tim Bottem and shortstop Kerry Wollin. Three others were missing — first baseman Gary Cornell and catcher-third baseman Jim Hallamek on vacation trips, plus catcher Al Ness, a last-minute line-up scratch because of a hand injury.

Consequently, the results maybe weren't all that surprising as Thief River Falls, a 2-0 season-opener winner over Fertile last Friday, fell to 1-1 for the year. It was the season opener for Crookston.

Thief River Falls' schedule includes a 6 p.m. doubleheader at Grafton tonight (Wednesday) and a 7 p.m. Northwest League game here against Roseau Thursday.

Crookston had a quick 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning Tuesday when lead-off batter Derek Bray, who went on to have a 3-for-4 night at the plate, rapped a first-pitch single into right field. Eight straight balls put Ken Perreault and Jim Schwab on base with walks. An infield fly accounted for the first out of the inning and gave Thief River Falls a chance to get out of it with a double play. They got the opportunity on Pat Madigan's ground ball to short, but the relay to first for the possible inning-ending double play was wide of the mark for an error and two runs scored.

Crookston got another unearned run in the fourth when Mike Madigan reached second on a two-base throwing error, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored when Chad Ricord's soft fly ball fell into short left-center for an RBI single.

Thief River Falls was held hitless for three innings until Bottem stroked a one-out solo home run in the bottom of the fourth, hitting the scoreboard in center field above the 340-foot sign. Wollin followed with a double inside the left field foul line and scored on a two-out ground ball single into right field by Bob Huot.

That represented the Thief River Falls offense for the night. After cutting the gap to 3-2, Thief River Falls fell behind 5-2 in the fifth when another potential double play was muffed. Crookston tacked on a sixth inning run on a safety squeeze bunt by Perreault.

DIVING BACK TO the bag, Thief River Falls runner Tim Nyland was safe as Crookston first baseman Mike Madigan waited for the ball to arrive on a first inning pick-off attempt by pitcher Pat Madigan during Tuesday's American Legion baseball game played here. Crookston won by a 6-2 margin.

Legion Baseball Program Is Observing Its 58th Season

Now in its 58th year of competition, American Legion baseball started just after Memorial Day and will continue through the summer for 252 teams registered in the Minnesota. The Minnesota program is part of the 3,900 teams that participate across the country in this, the largest and oldest of the youth baseball programs across the country, according to Matty Stukel of Ely, state director of Minnesota American Legion baseball.

Competing in area leagues, the teams will play in ten district tournaments to provide the district champions to compete in the state tournament.

Minnesota state tournament is scheduled for August 12-15 at Johnson Field in New Ulm and the Municipal Field at Sleepy Eye where the ten district champions and the host team will compete in an 11-team double elimination playoff to name the Minnesota champion.

Minnesota champion will advance to one of eight national regional tournaments at Ely August 24-28 to name a regional champion to compete in the World Series.

Minnesota runner-up team will advance to a national regional tournament at Stevens Point, Wis. August 24-28 to name a regional champion who will also advance to the World Series.

Minnesota places two teams into regional play because of the size of the state's program, the second largest in the nation and is one of five states that do so, making all of the regional tournaments eight-team double-elimination events.

Eight regional champions will gather in Fargo, N.D. for the World Series of American Legion baseball September 1-5 to name the national champions of American Legion baseball.

American Legion baseball started as a nation-wide program for young people in 1926 and has continued each year. Teams are sponsored by local American Legion posts. Total cost of the baseball program in Minnesota is over $600,000 per year.

Some 56 per cent of the current major league players are graduates of American Legion baseball, with the program producing that side effect. Basic aims of the baseball program is to provide the chance for young people to play baseball and to learn the lessons in teamwork, skills and individual participation that baseball teaches, stressed Stukel.

It could have been a long season for the Northland community college women's fast pitch softball team in 1983, but despite a 3-15 record, the Northwomen still enjoyed themselves, according to coach Deb Jacobson.

"Our record didn't look so good, but we played teams close in most of the games. We were never blown out. Even through the record wasn't as good as we maybe would have liked, overall it was a fun season," she explained.

Biggest problem, noted Jacobson, was Northland's inability to hit the tougher pitchers the Northwomen encountered during the year. Four Northwomen hit .327 or better, but the rest hit only .230 and below, with six of them at .163 or below for the year.

There was also a problem on defense at times, acknowledged Jacobson - like most of the time. A majority of the games were loosely played.

Still, there were some bright spots. Sophomore Marlys Huot of Thief River Falls was the leader. She earned praise from Jacobson for her strong pitching, a fact not overlooked by the rest of the Northwest Division coaches who voted her to the all-division team. While handling nearly all of the pitching duties, she was also the top Northland offensive player with a .411 batting average and 21 runs-batted-in, along with 18 runs scored and 23 base hits.

Lorene Bulzomi, a freshman catcher from Fertile finished second on the team batting charts with a .365 average, while Kim DeHann, a sophomore first baseman from Red Lake Falls, hit .346 and Mary Kuznia, a freshman infielder from Stephen, hit .327.

Northland wins included a 14-6 decision over the University of Minnesota-Crookston to snap a season-opening five-game losing streak, along with a doubleheader sweep over Rainy River at International Falls 4-2 and 15-8.

Losses came at the hands of Fergus Falls 9-0, 13-2, 7-3, 11-5; Brainerd 6-1, 7-5, 9-5, 14-8; UMC 5-3, 25-20, 13-12, 11-5; Mesabi 13-8; Inver Hills 8-1 and Rochester 14-0.

DNR NEWS

DNR Collects Eggs

A record 648 million walleye eggs were taken by DNR fisheries crews during the spring spawning run, it was announced recently.

Richard Hassinger, fisheries chief, said the number of eggs taken surpassed the exceptional year of 1973 when 566 million were taken.

One of the spawning stations this spring was at Spicer in Kandiyohi county where Rice and Nest lakes produced almost three times more eggs than in previous years, nearly 42 million.

Hassinger said the DNR operated 16 spawn stripping stations this spring for walleyes. He estimated that more than 389 million walleye fry will be produced from the eggs and stocked in state lakes and ponds.

Hassinger added that many of the fish will be of catchable size in three to five years.

"This was also a banner year for the taking of muskie eggs," he said. "More than 1.4 million eggs were taken, with the seven county Metro Region accounting for 1.2 million 'pure' muskie eggs and over 221 thousand hybrid muskie-northern pike cross eggs.

"These hybrids should provide some exciting fishing in several metro lakes during the coming years."

Public Access Use

Owners of shoreland residences do not entirely confine their recreation to the lake or river on which they reside. More than a third (35.5 per cent) launch their boats on other lakes or rivers also, according to a survey recently completed by the Department of Natural Resources, division of waters.

The survey was mailed to 3,500 lake and river home owners throughout the state and the returns are now being evaluated.

On the average, shoreland owners launch their boats at about three additional lakes each year. These are mostly located within 30 miles of their own residence, although about 40 per cent travel more than 30 miles for this purpose. Shoreland residents who launch their boats on other lakes or rivers do so on the average of eight or nine times a year.

"It would appear that the recreation needs of shoreland residents are not entirely being satisfied by the experiences offered by their own lakes," said a DNR researcher. "This is possible related to the difficulty of meeting all recreation needs on any one given lake resource.

"That suggests the need to continually monitor lake use along with recreation activity preferences. A public access program can then be better targeted to meet those needs."

Questions regarding the survey can be directed to Jeff Stitt or Joe Stinchfield at the Division of Waters, telephone 296-9226.

Fishing and Swimming Tops

Results of a recent DNR study indicate that fishing and swimming are far and away the top recreation activities of persons with shoreland residences.

A questionnaire was mailed to more than 3,000 persons with homes on lakes or rivers in the state. Of those who responded, 41 per cent said they swam daily or often. Almost as may, 39 per cent, indicated that they fished daily or very often while using their shoreland residence.

Next to fishing and swimming, motor boating, hiking, water skiing, picnicking and photography were popular activities.

Many land oriented activities rank in the top ten of preferred recreation choices. In fact half of the ten most popular activities are land oriented.

Top ten activities are listed as follows in order of popularity: swimming, fishing, motor boating, hiking, water skiing, picnicking, photography, hunting-trapping, bicycling and canoeing.

Officials said these findings emphasize the need to address water resources planning in a comprehensive approach.

DNR Promises More Game Law Arrests

Enforcement Division of the Department of Natural Resources has announced that it will step up its efforts to control the illegal take of fish and wildlife.

According to Fred Hammer, Director of Enforcement, a greater emphasis will be placed on using work teams to respond to problem areas where a large number of violations are occurring and the local conservation officer needs assistance. Work teams will be highly mobile and able to respond on short notice to deal with these situations quickly.

Road checks will also be increased statewide to apprehend the poachers who are taking fish and wildlife in closed seasons and the violator who refuses to stay within the legal limit.

Enforcement Division will also step up activity on undercover investigations which frequently focus on commercial exploitation of natural resources. Commercialization generally involves the illegal sale for profit of game, fish or furs protected by state statute.

"The TIP (Turn In Poachers) program has provided concerned citizens and sportsmen with a method to assist conservation officers with their enforcement duties," said Hammer. "Citizen cooperation through this program led to 340 arrests during 1982 that might not have been made otherwise. Anyone with information on a violation can anonymously report it to the Department of Natural Resources by using either of the toll-free numbers, metro 297-3999, and out-state 1-800-652-9093. Informants can remain anonymous and may be eligible for a reward if their TIP results in an arrest."

He said the work team assignments will be accomplished by rotating the conservation officer complement statewide.

"In this way," said Hammer, "the local conservation officers will not have to neglect their normal resources, watercraft safety, and snowmobile safety related duties in their home stations to any extent, and the sportsmen and sportswomen of Minnesota will get more for their license fees without greatly increasing costs.

"It's always cheaper to protect and keep what we've got than to start over again because of the activities of natural resources thieves like the poacher and overbagger."

Watt Praises D.U. Efforts In United States

Secretary of the Interior James Watt has praised Ducks Unlimited (DU) for its recent commitment to conserve wetland habitat for waterfowl in the United States.

Ducks Unlimited president Robert Eberhardt announced recently that the private waterfowl conservation group will for the first time begin efforts to restore and maintain wetland habitat in the United States. The group, which has nearly half a million members, has been responsible for saving millions of acres of wetlands in Canada since 1937.

"There is a critical need for increased efforts by the private sector to preserve our remaining wetlands, and Ducks Unlimited deserves a great deal of credit for its willingness to help," Watt said. "This is a very important and timely contribution toward wetlands protection."

Watt said that Ducks Unlimited's entry into the United States complements the efforts of the POWDR (Protect Our Wetlands and Duck Resources) task force of business, conservation and government leaders he established in 1982 to encourage the development of new measures to protect U.S. wetlands. Ducks Unlimited is one of the groups represented on POWDR.

Watt also noted that POWDR had helped develop proposed legislation — the Protect Our Wetlands and Duck Resources Act of 1983 — which would bar use of certain federal subsidies to encourage development of wetlands.

A recent Interior Department study found that 458,000 acres, or 715 square miles of wetland habitat is lost in the United States annually and about half of the 215 million wetland acres that once existed in the United States has disappeared.

"Halting this rapid loss of wetlands is one of our highest environmental priorities," Watt said. "We must conserve these uniquely valuable areas that support our migratory bird populations, contribute to the production of recreational and commercial fisheries, provide natural erosion and flood control, and help to cleanse and replenish our water supply."

Ducks Unlimited will undertake a two-phase program that includes working with federal and state wildlife agencies to study wetlands to determine areas of high potential productivity for waterfowl, and restoring and maintaining areas in the United States most critical to breeding North American waterfowl.

State Tennis Tournament Now Underway

Fifty-fifth annual MSHSL state boys tennis tournament begins a four-day run today (Wednesday) with two days of team competition and concludes on Saturday following two days of play in singles and doubles at the 98th Street Racquet Club in Bloomington.

This year's tourney returns to a one-class format, a format used from 1929 through 1978. During the last four years the AA-A format existed, only to give way to one class this year as a result of a decline in the number of schools in Class A sponsoring boys tennis. Only 49 schools were registered from A. In all some 154 high schools participated this spring.

Wednesday and Thursday's play is devoted to team competition. Team quarterfinal matches began at noon and 2 p.m. today. Semifinal and championship matches will take place on Thursday at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., respectively.

Team pairings looked like this: Upper bracket, 12-noon, Section 3 St. Thomas Academy vs. Section 8 St. Cloud Tech and Section 5 Blake vs. Section 6 St. Louis Park. Lower bracket, 2 p.m., Section 4 Coon Rapids vs. Section 7 Hibbing and Section 1 Rochester Mayo vs. Section 2 Blue Earth.

Four of the eight teams are newcomers to this year's field. They are Rochester Mayo, Hibbing, St. Louis Park, and Coon Rapids. Last year's AA team champion Austin failed to qualify, but Blake, the A winner will try and win again this season.

Experts expect either St. Cloud Tech or St. Louis Park to capture top laurels at this year's event.

Singles and doubles play which begins on Friday will bring together 24 singles participants (top three players from eight sections) and 24 doubles teams (top three teams from eight sections).

One of last year's two singles champions will hope to capture another gold medal. He's Class AA victor Darryl Laddin, a senior from Hopkins who defeated seventh-grader David Wheaton of Minnetonka 6-2, 6-3 for the title. Laddin, however, may be hard-pressed to win again as eighth-grader Wheaton beat him 6-2, 7-5 in a match during the regular season this campaign.

Should Laddin become victorious and win the state singles title again, he would become only the ninth individual since 1929 to win back-to-back championships. Should Wheaton win, he would become Minnesota's first state tennis titlist as an eighth grader and could go on to become the nation's first five-time victor, should he win titles in ensuing years. Six boys nationally have won four years. In Minnesota, two boys have won as many as three times. They were Dave Healy, Rochester (1953-55) and Chuck Darley, Rochester (1962-64).

In doubles, senior Steve Beckendorf and sophomore Myles Anderson, Blue Earth, won last year's Class A doubles title as underclassmen and this year hope to repeat. Only three doubles teams have captured back-to-back titles since the tournament's inception in 1929.

Of the 154 high schools participating in boys tennis this interscholastic season, the number of boys competing numbered 3,049.

Conservancy Is Preservationist For Wild Species

Creamy wild indigo bends in the wind, as an Ottoe skipper butterfly lights on a flame flower. A Blanding's turtle trundles by, making slow progress across the dry prairie. It's springtime at Weaver Dunes, located in southeastern Minnesota. Weaver Dunes is owned and maintained by the Nature Conservancy's Minnesota chapter. The chapter has 3,900 members statewide.

The four rare species mentioned above are among the hundreds protected within the Nature Conservancy's 65 Minnesota preserves. The conservancy is the only private, non-profit organization in Minnesota dedicated to purchasing and preserving important natural lands.

Today is an especially important one at Weaver Dunes because several young Peregrine falcons will be released. The Peregrine is being reintroduced in Minnesota after an absence of 25 years. Weaver Dunes was selected as the release site because the Peregrine's historic breeding and nesting cliffs are nearby.

The program is an on-going one. It is estimated that young falcons will have to be released for 15 years to build a self-sustaining population. At the turn of the century, falcons were a common sight, soaring above the Upper Mississippi where they lived in granite aeries.

Unlike the Peregrine falcon, many animals and plants can never be reintroduced. Over the past 150 years, it is estimated that over 40 animal and plant species have disappeared from Minnesota. Today in Minnesota 99.5 per cent of the prairie and 84 per cent of the marshes have vanished. "We know we are at an important crossroad in the preservation of natural Minnesota," says Geoff Barnard, director of the Nature Conservancy's Minnesota state office in Minneapolis.

The Minnesota heritage program, a new computer-based information system, allows the chapter to quickly and accurately pinpoint the occurrence of rare plants, animals and other features within Minnesota.

"Right now there are over 60 species of plants, animals and natural habitats that face immediate extinction in Minnesota. We believe we have to act now," says Barnard, "to save these irreplaceable parts of our Minnesota heritage."

The species and natural formations should be saved, according to Barnard, for several reasons. "We believe it's important for Minnesota's children to have some idea of what their state looked like 150 years ago.

"From a scientific viewpoint, we think that our survival depends on preserving biological diversity. After all, only nature can create the genes we need in agriculture and medicine. Who knows what plant, for example, might yield a new medicine?"

Through its program of private land acquisition, the Nature Conservancy's 1983 critical areas campaign has targeted nine wild and unspoiled areas in Minnesota as priorities for preservation.

These nine areas include Straight River wildflower preserve in Rice county. The preserve's wooded slopes and protected ravines are favored by several types of woodland wildflowers. One extremely rare wildflower found there is the Minnesota dwarf trout lily. It grows in two counties in Minnesota and nowhere else in the world.

The Minnesota chapter's prairie chicken preserve system now includes more than 4,000 acres in 16 projects. The prairie chicken is a threatened species in Minnesota. The Nature Conservancy hopes to enlarge the prairie chicken preserve system by acquiring additional land at Western Prairie in Wilkin county in northwestern Minnesota through the current campaign. The prairie chicken's booming, which can be heard for a mile on a clear, spring day, is part of an impressive courtship ritual.

The 1983 critical areas campaign is part of a three-year goal to raise $1.6 million for land acquisition and maintenance. "It's the largest campaign ever attempted for private land conservation in Minnesota," says Barnard. This year, thanks to a $600,000 grant from the Goodhill foundation, donations to the Nature Conservancy will be matched, dollar-for-dollar. All donations are tax-deductible.

"Purchase and preservation of natural areas by the Nature Conservancy is especially important today in the light of reduced government funding for this important task," comments C. Robert Binger, chairman of the Minnesota chapter.

The conservancy's preserves, each one acquired through the donations of Minnesotans, reveal surprising and little-known aspects about our state. For example, the conservancy is concerned about preserving Algific Talus Slopes, a type of land formation which is considered nationally rare.

Within these slopes are ice caves. An arctic environment is created around the mouths of the caves by the escaping cool air. And it's on that rim that glacial-age plants and species can survive. One of these arctic plants is the threatened golden saxifrage.

There are now 65 preserves owned and managed by the Nature Conservancy in Minnesota. Most of them are accessible and open to all Minnesotans free of charge. They include Kasota Prairie in LeSueur county. It offers an almost continuous display of wildflowers, from the first pasqueflowers in April to the last gentians in October.

The Nature Conservancy sponsors organized field trips to the preserves from spring through fall. Activities such as bird watching, hiking and photography, which allow participation in nature without damage to it, are encouraged. Experts such as naturalists, ornithologists and botanists lead the trips.

For further information about the Nature Conservancy's Minnesota preserves or the 1983 critical areas campaign, call 612-379-2134 or write the Nature Conservancy at 328 E. Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55414.

FATHER'S DAY SPECIAL
DURING THE MONTH OF JUNE

Are you and your wife expecting a baby? Do you want to be accessable when the time comes for her to go to the hospital? During the month of June, you may rent one of our "beepers" for the 3 weeks prior to expected delivery time 'til one week after for $30.00 (so if it turns out to be a month later - it's still good). Just bring us a note from your doctor giving the expected date and your check for $30.00 and we'll deliver your "Beeper" to you 3 weeks prior to that date. So you're not expecting in June. The offer is still good as long as you reserve your "Beeper" during June!

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, David Nordhagen, who passed away June 11, 1960.

When we see a precious blossom
That we tended with such care
Rudely taken from our bosom
How our aching hearts dispare
Round its little grave we linger
Till the setting sun is low
Feeling all our hopes have perished
With the flower we cherished so
We shall sleep but not forever
There will be a glorious dawn
We shall meet to part, no never
On the resurrection morn.

Sadly missed by Dad, Mom, brothers Les, Bruce, Rich and Steve and sister Shirley.
1t46c

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Srnsky.

We cherish the love you so willingly gave.
Today we bow silently over your grave;
We whisper a prayer, and leave a bouquet,
We haven't forgotten today is the day.
We miss you Mom and Dad, Grandpa and Grandma dear
Life is so lonely since you're not here.
How we loved you, bless your heart.
Sad was the day you had to depart.

FOR SALE ON BIDS

The ten acre Alfred Hermanson berry farm is being offered for sale on bids. This river property is located on the airport road, just outside the city limits. It is fully irrigated and ready to be operated as a truck farm if someone wishes to again develop it. The location of this property makes it, also, ideal for development. Appreciation has been expressed by the organization to the member families and friends of the band whose support and contributions have helped support the program. Continuing support is requested by the Band Wagon group at upcoming events to help meet the goal.

Another dance with donated live music is being planned, along with a pancake breakfast and concession stand during art-in-the-streets on June 23.

Minnesota Food Expo Set Thursday

Minnesota food expo, which gathers 38 Minnesota Food companies with buyers, has been set for Thursday from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thunderbird motel in Bloomington.

"By invitation only" marketing function helps Minnesota food companies meet potential buyers, show off products in a way different from usual sales calls and test new markets.

Minnesota food expo is a promotion cooperatively sponsored by state government and food producers and processors. Since 1964 more than 100 food expos have been held in the nation's major metropolitan markets resulting in increased domestic sales for Minnesota companies. This is the second Minnesota Food Expo held in 1983. The first was in Milwaukee on March 10. An autumn expo is scheduled for the Chicago area.

Minnesota department of agriculture works closely with participating companies to develop a comprehensive guest list of leading food industry buyers from the retail, insitutional and food service sectors. Community leaders and state dignitaries are invited as well.

During the expo invited guests try hors d'oeuvres, entrees, side dishes, desserts and refreshments displayed on the Minnesota "Table of Taste." The "Table of Taste" is a large buffet attractively displaying Minnesota foods. Guests also view food companies' displays in the reception room and company representatives are on hand to answer questions and pursue prospective sales leads. As guests leave they are presented with a portfolio containing product literature and a copy of the Minnesota department of agriculture's "Buyers' Guide To Minnesota Food Producers And Processors."

Area Horses Will Run In Minn. Derby

Tenth running of the Minnesota derby at Assiniboia Downs race track in Winnipeg, Manitoba, will feature a field of 12 horses racing one mile for a $25,000 purse on Sunday, July 3.

Last year's Minnesota Derby winner was Promise Hill Farm's classy gelding "Won By Default" owned by Wheelock and Irene Whitney of Independence.

There are presently 33 horses nominated to the 1983 Minnesota derby, but this number will be trimmed down to the top 12 entries by race time. The 33 horses currently eligible include "Peg's Victory" owned by Laverne Budd of Roseau and "Bobby Q", owned by Merle Quist and Robert Novotny of Greenbush.

These three-year-old thoroughbreds are owned (at least 50 per cent) by Minnesota and North Dakota residents, and some of these horses have come from as far away as Arizona, Florida and Kentucky.

In last November's election the people of the state voted yes to allow pari-mutuel betting on horse racing in Minnesota. On May 23, Gov. Rudy Perpich signed the horse racing bill into law and made two appointments to the first Minnesota racing commission.

This means that thoroughbred racing will soon be coming to Minnesota. Anyone interested in membership or more information is invited to call or write the Minnesota Thoroughbred Association, 612-455-2729, 918 Marie Ave., S. St. Paul, MN 55075.

118 Nominated For Teacher Of The Year

Twentieth annual search for Minnesota teacher of the year has attracted 118 nominations from 112 school district communities.

Area candidates include Janet Shawn, home economics instructor at Lincoln high school and Gayle Waale, elementary physical education instructor in the Marshall county central school district.

Sponsored by the Minnesota Education association, the program is designed to focus attention on Minnesota's outstanding teachers in public and nonpublic schools. It does not attempt to select the best teacher, according to the MEA.

The nominees will be narrowed to the "Teachers of Excellence," from which an honor roll of teachers will be chosen. The teacher of the year, chosen from the honor roll, will be announced at an open-to-the-public luncheon October 9.

The judging panel consists of 22 men and women who represent large and small public institutions that prepare teachers, nonpublic schools, news media, school administrators, teachers, students, the judiciary, business and industry, ethnic minorities, senior citizens, government and the lay public.

Minnesota nominees have ranked high nationally and two have been named national teacher of the year with many being considered finalists.

Expert Thought Studied To Learn Process Involved

by William Hoffman
'U' M News Service

Marvels of the computer age only reaffirm the unrivaled powers of the human mind to store and retrieve information. Yet computers can lend a hand in helping us to understand how we think.

Computer is an essential tool to cognitive scientists, practitioners of a new academic discipline that explores human memory and thinking. By combining psychology and computer science, cognitive scientists hope to construct computer programs that imitate the thought process.

The field has a representative at the University of Minnesota in Paul E. Johnson, a professor of management sciences and also a faculty member in the psychology department's center for research in human learning. He is trying to formulate a "theory of expert reasoning" by studying the thinking patterns of experts in several technical fields.

"I want to understand how experts think," Johnson said in an interview. By building and testing a theory about how they reason, he hopes to find out.

Psychology in general has been looking into the nature of expertise for a long time. But unlike behavioral psychology, which relies heavily on the relationships between external stimuli and observable responses, cognitive psychology delves into the mind itself, looking for evidence that could explain how the mind works. It has already produced some interesting and encouraging results.

Some of them are Johnson's. So far, he has studied expertise in medicine, science and engineering and law, and he is preparing to study management experts. Johnson takes his experts through "protocol analysis" in which they are asked to say out loud everything they are thinking in the course of solving a problem.

Transcripts of problem solving sessions are analyzed step by step, showing the various routes individuals take, including the detours and blind alleys, before arriving at conclusions. Johnson then converts the information into a computer model and tests it to see if it corresponds to the way experts really think during the talking-aloud protocol.

One of the first experts Johnson tested was a University of Minnesota cardiologist. Johnson gave him some fragmentary information about a patient. Before he had finished presenting the information the doctor interrupted with the correct diagnosis.

"At that point we asked him, 'How did you know that?' It turned out he didn't really know, but he had some good ideas based on experience and knowledge special to his domain," Johnson said.

Indeed, what often characterizes an expert and separates him or her from a novice is the ability to make a sound hypothesis with incomplete evidence and make it without employing strict logical inference at every step, which is inefficient and time consuming, according to Johnson.

"We expected experts to think logically, but often they don't," he said. Rather, experts "appear to apprehend things more intuitively. They use shortcuts. They are able to get good ideas quickly about the nature of a problem and then zero in on likely solutions.

"Experts jump ahead in their thinking, and even though they pass over intermediate steps, they still get the right answer," he said.

Novices, on the other hand, "often jump ahead and land in the wrong place. Experts stay more global in their thinking until they find a good place to jump to. They have a perspective on their thinking that novices seem to lack," Johnson said.

An expert can solve problems faster not because he or she has a better grasp of a particular set of rules, but because of a deeper knowledge base that is organized in a highly efficient manner, Johnson said.

An apprentice in a field such as medicine may have a great deal of knowledge, but it is usually not organized flexibly enough for rapid retrieval, and both the apprentice and the novice are prone to following "garden path" lines of reasoning that lead them along the way to the wrong conclusions.

One of the difficulties in medical diagnosis is evaluating the importance of each bit of information. "It's a matter of gathering data and assigning value to each piece. Physicians tend to think of diagnosis as an art, not a science. That's true for them, but it's not true for me," Johnson said, adding that "my goal is to understand scientifically what enables physicians to think the way they do."

Lawyers resemble doctors in the way they think because both fields require practitioners to make a vast number of "empirical associations" between the available evidence and their professional experience and learning, Johnson said.

Lawyers "systematically create scenarios that would be plausible explanations of data," Johnson said. But unlike doctors, lawyers consider the "status" of information from their client's perspective in building a case for trial or in providing legal advice about a proposed business transaction. They also anticipate opponents' arguments and defensive moves, he said.

Because physics is more scientifically rigorous and mathematically precise than medicine or law, experts in the field tend to deal less with empirical (observable) relationships and more with principles and theories, and with mathematical rather than symbolic logic. As a result, their knowledge base is more tightly structured and information retrieval proceeds in a more systematic manner, according to Johnson.

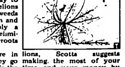
By understanding the nature of expertise, Johnson hopes to improve the decision-making process. Experts find it difficult to explain how they think. The right computer model could show them how, assist them in evaluating information in the future, and eventually become a standard feature of the education curriculum, Johnson said. It could also be used in job selection and evaluation, he said.

Furthermore, a good model combined with super computation "can offer the opportunity to build a theory of artificial intelligence." Indeed, some cognitive scientists are already hard at work on artificial intelligence projects with an eye to developing computer programs that perform tasks requiring considerable intelligence, Johnson said.

Drive to discover more of the facets of intelligence and the development of expertise remains an enterprise limited to exploring "a small corner of the mind," Johnson said, adding that the mind's larger spaces, including those involved in artistic creativity and scientific discovery, are well beyond the reach of any computer and data base available today.

LAWN LORE

Dandelion Days



Dandelions are a deep-rooted problem. Pull as you may, they won't go away.

The only surefire way to rid your lawn of dandelions and other broadleaf weeds like plantain, buckhorn and chickweed is to apply a product designed to eliminate the entire plant—roots and all.

When dandelions are in bloom, but before they go to the puffball stage, is the best time to apply weed control, according to the lawn experts at O.M. Scott & Sons. Left unchecked, dandelions will spread thousands of seeds to insure a repeat performance next year.

Scott offers two tips to insure excellent results when treating your lawn for dandelions and other broadleaf weeds. First, apply the product on a calm day when the grass is wet from dew or sprinkling. (A morning dew provides the perfect application environment.) Second, use an accurate drop-type spreader and be sure to overlap wheel tracks slightly to avoid streaks of weeds in missed areas.

When controlling dandelions, Scotts suggests making the most of your time and your money by applying a product that also gives your lawn a complete fertilization. If crabgrass has been a problem in your lawn, there is a product available to do three jobs at once—prevent crabgrass, control dandelions and fertilize.

Get to the root of the dandelion problem with a simple spring weed control application. Your lawn will look good—and so will you.

If you have a question about your lawn, you can talk with an expert at Scotts simply by dialing their toll-free number: (800) 543-TURF. In Ohio, the number is (800) 762-4010. There is no charge or obligation for this service.

STUFFED SHIRT

You've met this man before! Remember him? What grand airs he liked to assume! What vain boasts poured from his lips! He was forever trying to make an impression, but most people saw through his false front. They called him a STUFFED SHIRT!

Airs and vanity rarely fool us. We look for the inner qualities of a man's character. Only when those inner qualities are just as fine as the external impression he makes—only then are we sure we have met a man of the highest caliber.

Our sanctuaries build character! Into the life of the individual and of the community it pours those moral and spiritual influences which develop man's innate nobility. Through religious education and the worship of God, they point young and old to the high goals and rich resources of Christian living.

THEN and NOW!

Famous German-Americans have included Dwight D. Eisenhower, space travel pioneer Wernher von Braun and George Herman "Babe" Ruth.

On October 6, 1683, thirteen families from Krefeld, Germany, set foot on American soil, founding the settlement of Germantown, near Philadelphia. In the ensuing three centuries, seven million more German-speaking emigrants were to follow them in search of freedom, social justice, fortune and happiness. Many Americans of German descent contributed significantly to the development of American culture, technology, society and economic structure. Some have gone down in history as presidents, cabinet members, generals or business tycoons, as well as Nobel prize winners, painters, writers, scientists, musicians and sports stars.

THEN: Did you know that such famous industrialists as Guggenheim, Steinway, Levi Strauss, Heinz and Loeb were all German-Americans? August Roebling, who constructed the spectacular Brooklyn Bridge over New York's East River, was also of German ancestry. Can you name two Presidents who were German-Americans? If you guessed Dwight D. Eisenhower and Herbert Hoover you're correct. Among er famous German-Acans of the 20th century are John D. Rockefeller, Albert Einstein, space travel pioneer Wernher von Braun and political scientist and politician Henry Kissinger.

NOW: Today, more Americans can trace their ancestry to Germany than to any other country—52 million, or 28.8 percent of all Americans, according to the Census Bureau. If you or any of your neighbors have last names such as Schmidt, Muller, Petersen, Weiss or Bamberger, chances are you can join in the celebration of 300 years of German immigration to the United States. In honor of this important anniversary, Lufthansa German Airlines has produced a booklet called "The German-American Connection." It's filled with information about great German-Americans, tracing German roots and offers a few pointers on traveling in Germany. For a copy, write to Lufthansa, Dept. UX12, 1640 Hempstead Turnpike, East Meadow, New York 11554.

FACTUAL NEWS REPORTING EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

Social Security Reform

Following editorial is from the Fairfax Standard:

Most of us, agonizing over the shortfall in receipts vs. expenditures by social security, do not realize non-U.S. citizens living outside the boundaries of this nation, haul down some pretty big social security payments.

Nearly $1 billion in social security benefits is paid each year to 210,000 non-U.S. citizens living in other countries. Most of them are survivors or dependents of a family member who once worked in this country.

The social security act has never restricted benefits to U.S. citizens or to people living in the United States.

Those who have worked in jobs covered by social security and who have paid taxes, whether they are citizens or not, always have been able to collect benefits.

Illegal aliens never have been required to provide proof of citizenship or legal status before collecting benefits.

Some of this has been addressed by the social security rescue plan, recently passed by Congress and signed by President Reagan. The general accounting office, however, reports the new requirements are not as broad, and do not stop as much abuse of the system, as they could.

The newly enacted financial package will stop payment of social security survivors' and dependents' benefits to relatives of an alien beneficiary who has been living outside the United States for more than six consecutive years. However, retired aliens — those who worked here and returned to their native countries — would continue to receive their social security benefits.

The GAO reports notes that payments of social security benefits to aliens "represents a number of complex and difficult issues."

Some of those issues, the report stated, involved the fairness of treating aliens differently from U.S. citizens and the legality of requiring alien workers to pay social security taxes if they cannot receive retirement benefits.

Thirty-five per cent of the alien dependents now receiving social security benefits were added to alien workers' families after they left the United States. Therefore, the GAO reports recommends that policy changes could include restrictions on benefits payments to additional family members.

It might be wise to rethink paying any benefits to those working illegally in this country. The government could require proof of legal immigrant status before payments are paid.

The social security rescue plan did much to stabilize the program. Perhaps improvements in the alien section would also help.

Baseball Recollections

Columnist Bill Dix of the North Hennepin Post recently brought to mind the "golden days" of local baseball, the times when kids could get together and play the game without all the organization that goes into the activity today.

"We do it, this whole organized thing," Dix points out, "because, like Everest, it's there. I keep forgetting that most of the parents in any youth athletic association were products of such an organization themselves. Unlike some of us who were having children when we should have been having grandchildren, they cannot remember a time when parents didn't interfere with their children's play."

Dix recalls the games at Gully Hill where baseball was played on an open field from frost-out to frost-in and from nine to 36 kids showed up to choose sides. "Biggest and best first," he recalls, "littlest and worst last. If you stuck with it you got bigger or better, or both. Your reward was getting picked earlier or until such time that you graduated from the pickee to the picker."

Sociologists now tell us that such a procedure could be damaging to the psyche. There must be a zillion kids who went through that process without trauma. It was a system which certainly created equality.

"If your team got beat 33-11 one day, you did a better job choosing players the next," Dix writes. "You settled all your arguments without adult intervention. Oh, once in awhile a foolish parent would try to bring adult calm and reason to the scene, but if she (it was usually a she because the games were played between breakfast and the evening meal) showed up too often the game changed parks.

"How did we do? There were enough good ballplayers to stock the major leagues, just as today. There were also well-stocked minor leagues and hometown baseball teams. I played more innings of baseball in a month than my son will play in a Little League career. He and his peers are free to do the same as I did, but he won't and his peers won't, and they don't. Never mind that they have more and better fields.

"Never mind that by mid-summer they will be complaining of boredom. They don't do as we did because they don't know how. Uniforms and umpires and real bases and — for God's sake — batting gloves, are the only way they know.

". . . We didn't invent the foolishness of which I speak," Dix concludes. "We inherited it and we're stuck with it. Many will rail at me and foam at the mouth and call me un-American, but they will never convince me that my son will have as much sheer joy from baseball as I've had."

Matter of Statistics

Following editorial is from the Bemidji Pioneer:

Efforts to require insurance companies to disregard sex in setting insurance rates are going forward on two fronts. The Supreme Court of the United States has been asked to declare that sexual discrimination in setting such rates is a violation of the civil rights of women. Meanwhile, Congress is debating a bill which would require insurance companies to set all rates on a unisex basis.

This is the age of the emancipation of women. The drive for equal rights makes any reform attractive if it seems to confer benefits on women. It has taken great pressure by women's groups to make employers and insurance companies recognize that the health costs of women should be fully covered by disability and medical plans, including the costs associated with childbirth. The campaign to equalize insurance premiums paid by men and women has gained support because it is seen as another part of this great crusade for women's rights.

As insurance companies have been forbidden to practice racial discrimination in fixing premiums, it seems to many that they should be forbidden also to practice discrimination on the basis of sex.

But there is a difference. Race is hard to define. It is inherently repugnant in our culture to inquire of a person as to his or her race. There are many persons of mixed or uncertain race. Some people may elect to change their racial identity, if there is any such thing.

Transexuals aside, we can hardly say the same for sexual identity. In almost all cases, it is determined at birth and remains unchanged throughout life. It is a biological fact that human beings are created either male or female.

When insurance company actuaries categorize human beings according to sex, they are not conferring rights upon either sex. If it is an actuarial fact that women have a higher life expectancy than men, why should that fact not be taken into consideration in setting premium rates and pension payments, even though it may result in higher rates or lower monthly payments?

It would make as much sense to require insurance companies to refrain from practicing age discrimination in insurance rates. But should we require a 20-year-old to pay as high a rate for life insurance as an 80-year-old, despite the difference in their life expectancies?

Car insurance costs young males more than young females, because the males have a higher accident rate. Should the rates be reduced for the men and raised for the women, regardless of the loss statistics? We don't believe so.

Some who have striven mightily for equality for women — and we count ourselves in that number — do not believe that the courts or Congress should forbid insurance companies or annuity salesmen or pension planners from taking into account the sex of individual insureds, annuitants and pensioners.

There is nothing inherently unfair or improper in grouping people according to sex for statistical purposes. And determining insurance rates is more a matter of statistics than of social policy.

If the Supreme Court does not require the insurance industry to set all rates on a unisex basis, neither should Congress.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

In the past we have read a lot about men and women dedicating their time and energy to make people feel better. We may start with Bob Hope; he entertained our service boys at home and abroad for 25 years.

Helen Keller helped the blind, Sister Theresa helped the sick and the poor in India for a life time. These are only a few of the many men and women who have dedicated time and talents to let others know that someone cares.

A lot of people may not know it, but we have right here in Thief River Falls a man who has gone to the hospital for 52 years to greet the sick and shut-ins. He is Ole Engelstad.

I have been in and out of the hospital for over 30 years. Ole has never missed a visit and when he does call on you he always has a big smile, a few words and maybe a hand shake, which may do as much good as a doctor's prescription.

I feel we owe Ole a reward for the many years of dedication. Maybe we could make a plaque (it would have to be a man's size) or get his name in the Guinness book of records.

We need a lot more Ole Engelstad's. It would make the world a much better place to live.

Thank you,
-s- Melvin Joppru

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

How Do You Rate On Freight?

Shipping goods via a combination sea/air delivery system is saving many businesses time and money.

Many manufacturers and retailers who must ship goods over long distances are finding that it makes good business sense to send their products by both sea and air freight—a shipping system that takes half the time of all-sea, at half the cost of all-air.

Deliveries to the U.S. and Canada via this system are normally made within 16 days of departure from the East. The standard is 18 days to seven European destinations offered by the airline that operates the delivery system. This compares with an average marine delivery time of five to six weeks.

Many businesses are using the sea/air service to reduce the inventory-carrying costs of keeping merchandise in transit. The difference between 18 and 36 days doubles the cost of keeping thousands of items off the store shelf. Warehouse costs can be trimmed and suppliers paid more quickly if transit times are shortened.

The service started 25 years ago, when 75 thousand kilograms of artificial flowers were loaded on a ship traveling from Hong Kong to the Western Canadian port of Vancouver. There, the massive bouquet was transferred to several freighter and passenger Air Canada aircraft bound for New York.

This year, that airline has introduced the guarantee on sea/air deliveries from the Far East to 48 destinations in Canada, the United States and Europe. Shippers can claim up to 50 percent air fare portion if goods do not arrive within quoted times.

All merchandise consigned to Air Canada is put into separate containers. These are generally boarded last, making them easily accessible upon arrival in Vancouver. Cargo is traced by ACCESS, the airline's sophisticated computerized tracing system, which lets it determine almost instantaneously where any given shipment is from origin to destination.

New Regional Plan for Summer-Long Savings

Amtrak Extends 'All Aboard America Fares' With Advance Purchase

Amtrak has announced a regional travel fare which, for the first time, ties savings to advance purchase of tickets and makes available a summer-long bargain fare.

Offering special maximum coach fares for trips taken between June 1 and Sept. 30, 1983, the new plan is a variation with some restrictions of the regional "All Aboard America" fares offered through the spring and discontinued for sale on May 1.

Under the new plan, all reservations must be made and tickets purchased for the entire journey five days before departure. No open tickets will be issued and all changes to reservations or ticketing must be made five days before beginning a trip. Tickets will be on sale through Aug. 31.

As with the predecessor plan Amtrak passengers may make a round-trip in one or more of three regions of the U.S.A. (including Montreal and Toronto in Canada in the Eastern region) for a set maximum. You may take 30 days for the trip and are allowed a stopover in each direction in addition to the destination. Return may be over an alternate routing.

Fare for travel within one region will be $175, up $50 from the former single-region fare. However, fares will remain the same, $225, for travel within two adjoining regions and $299 within the three regions of the U.S.A.

The geographic regions are: Eastern—the Atlantic Coast west to and including the City of New Orleans route between Chicago and New Orleans; Central—from and including the Chicago-New Orleans route west to El Paso, Albuquerque, Denver and Wolf Point, Mont.; Western—from El Paso, Albuquerque, Denver and Wolf Point west to the Pacific Coast.

Fares for children 2 through 11, accompanied by an adult, are $87.50 for one region; $112.50 for two adjoining regions and $149.50 for all three regions.

Because of heavy travel on many Amtrak trains through the summer, reserved seats for those traveling on the Advance Purchase All Abroad America Fares will be limited and these special fares will not be valid for purchase of sleeping accommodations during the very peak June 24-Aug. 21 period. Fares will not be good in Club Car or Metroliner services and may not be used as credit toward Week of Wheels programs. Tickets using this fare will not be sold aboard trains.

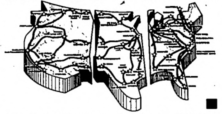
Here's how savings under the new summer regional fares plan can amount to hundreds of dollars:

Eastern: From Montreal you could travel via Amtrak to New Orleans with an en route stop at Atlanta and one in Chicago on the return trip. Instead of the regular coach fare of $512, you pay $175, saving $337.

Central: From St. Paul/Minneapolis, you could take the train to San Antonio with stops in Dallas one way and New Orleans in the other. The saving is $267 from the regular fare of $442.

Western: A traveler could take Amtrak from Seattle to San Diego with an en route stop at San Francisco and a return stop at Las Vegas. Instead of paying the regular $305.50 coach fare, you could use the $175 special summer regional fare, saving $130.50.

Transcontinental: For a traveler crossing the entire U.S.A.—say from New York to San Francisco with an en route stop at Glacier Park and a return stop in Flagstaff for Grand Canyon—the regular fare would be $650. Using the $299 Advance Purchase All Abroad America Fares covering all three regions, the saving would be $351.



(NOTE: See attached map for Amtrak fare regions.)

GARAGE SALE

How To Do A Little Business On Your Own...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own... but is takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item... and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers...so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd... You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood... but you'll want a bigger crowd than that... so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

ENTERTAINING IDEAS

FOR COFFEE-TIME OR ANY TIME:
Apple Cinnamon Coffee Cake

This coffee cake, studded with chunks of cinnamony-accented apples, spells "good eating" anytime. Delicious as a special treat for coffee breaks or snacks, it's also an appealing dessert to which those who aren't counting calories might like to add a dollop of whipped cream.

There's a mystery ingredient in this easy recipe: yogurt. You don't actually taste it, but yogurt adds moistness, tenderness, and brings out the distinctive fruit flavor of the canned apple pie filling. The apple slices start out on top of the golden batter, then sink into the cake during baking.

Blueberry, cherry, or strawberry pie filling can be substituted in this recipe.

APPLE CINNAMON COFFEE CAKE

1 package (18.5 oz.) yellow cake mix (double layer size)
3 eggs
1 cup plain yogurt
1 can (20 oz.) Thank You Brand apple pie filling
3 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons flour

In large mixing bowl, combine cake mix, eggs and yogurt. Beat 3 minutes. Spread batter into an oiled and floured 9x13x2 inch cake pan. Arrange pie filling over batter. Combine cinnamon, sugar, and flour and sprinkle on top of cake. Bake at 350°F. for 40-45 minutes. Best served warm.

Microwave Instructions (Makes two 8" layers):
Mix batter as above. Line 8-inch microwave cake pan with a circle of paper towel. Place 1/2 of batter in prepared pan. Top with 1/2 can of pie filling and slightly less than 1/2 cinnamon mixture. Microwave at 50% power 7-8 minutes, rotate 1/2 turn at 4 minutes. Finish cooking, high power, 3-4 minutes, rotate 1/4 turn at 2 minutes. Exact times may vary with different ovens. Let stand 2 minutes before inverting onto plate. Sprinkle bottom with some of the cinnamon mixture. Repeat for second layer.

Stacey Sandberg At State Pageant

In preparation for her competition this week at the Miss Minnesota pageant in Austin, Stacey Sandberg, Miss Thief River Falls, devoted at least eight hours a day to a readiness routine ever since classes ended at North Dakota state university.

Crowned at the Thief River Falls Jaycee summerfest last July, the blond Karlstad high school graduate has been looking forward to the Miss Minnesota competition ever since. She is a former Miss Karlstad and has one previous trip to the state pageant in her experience background.

"I have been trying to get four to six hours in the sun," she says of her preparation routine each day. "I have been exercising for one to two hours a day, practicing my flute number for an hour and working an hour or two on interviews."

In addition she has been arranging for clothing outfits she will need, meeting with local pageant people, packing items she will want with her for the pageant week and trying to maintain a positive mental attitude.

"People always ask me why I would like to be Miss Minnesota," she said. "There is the prestige that goes with the title, of course, and the opportunity to compete in the Miss America pageant would be fantastic. I think winning at the state level would show the importance of setting goals and working toward reaching those goals."

"And there's the chance to win scholarships. . . Miss Minnesota earns $2,500 in scholarships and the Miss America pageant is one of the largest scholarship organizations for girls in the country."

Stacey left Sunday to begin pageant activities today. The first two days of the week will be devoted to rehearsals and promotional events. Preliminary pageants begin on Wednesday when Stacey will have her interview with the judges in the afternoon and take part in swimsuit competition that evening. On Thursday she will compete in the evening gown category and on Friday will present her talent number — a flute solo entitled "Veloce" from Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano by Bolling. Her accompaniment will be piano, bass and drums from the pageant orchestra.

Should she be selected among the 10 finalists, Stacey will be presented in swimsuit, evening gown, talent and onstage personality in the official Miss Minnesota pageant Saturday evening. Among those in attendance from Wednesday through Saturday will be Mr. and Mrs. David Olin of Thief River Falls, Stacey's official chaperones during the past year.

Although she is a Karlstad native, Stacey said she has had no problem in representing Thief River Falls. She met recently with Mayor Bob Carlson to learn more about the city itself, both to satisfy her own curiosity and to be prepared for questions about the community from pageant judges.

"I feel that northwestern Minnesota communities are unique but also have a lot of similarities," Stacey said. "I thought I knew a lot more about Thief River Falls than I really did and I really appreciate Mayor Carlson's help. I've also done a lot of reading about the history of Thief River Falls and the state of Minnesota."

Stacey has been eager to seek advice and assistance whenever and where ever she could. She worked with Les Torgerson, music instructor at Northland community college, in polishing her flute solo. She has been emphasizing interviewing to gain experience there, and worked with Dorothy Dodds, instructor in the sales and marketing program at the local AVTI and Becca Messreni, AVTI student who advanced to national competition. She previewed some of her pageant competition outfits for Betty Walton of Mr. Duane's in Thief River Falls, and she has received guidance from Robi Jaeger of Fargo, Miss North Dakota USA.

To gain modeling tips and experience and learn about coloring and make-up, she attended a clinic for two and one-half days at Image Grooming Associates in Minneapolis and had con-

MISS THIEF RIVER FALLS, Stacey Sandberg, left Sunday to participate in a week of activities connected with the Miss Minnesota pageant at Austin. After two days of promotion and rehearsal activities, Stacey will begin preliminary pageant activities with swimsuit competition Wednesday evening, evening gown competition Thursday evening and talent competition Friday evening in preliminary pageants. The top 10 candidates will compete Saturday in the official Miss Minnesota pageant to select a winner to advance to the Miss America pageant. Stacey is pictured in her evening gown, swimsuit and talent competition outfits. She will play "Veloce" by Bolling on the flute as her talent number at the pageant.

This is the second and final segment of your legislators' report card, explaining the major issues and reporting the votes of the recently completed 1983 session.

Pay Commission-Salaries

Legislators won't be forced to vote for increasing their own salaries under a bill passed this year. The bill sets up a commission which will determine salary increases for statewide elected officers, legislators and judges, along with some other high ranking state officials.

The pay raises will be put together by a 16-member commissinon that will report by Jan. 1, 1984. Unless the Legislature takes action against the commission's pay decisions, the new salary levels will automatically go into effect.

House and Senate votes are for the final conference report: House, Wally Sparby (DFL-Thief River Falls), yes; Senate, LeRoy Stumpf (DFL-Plummer), yes.

Food Costs For Families Shown

For a family of four people with elementary school children, moderate weekly food cost is $94.30, according to computations made by the U.S. department of agriculture. Thrifty families could get by on $58.70 and low-cost families on $75.20 while liberal spenders would pay $112.90.

Costs listed assume all food is bought at the store and prepared at home and do not include any non-food items often bought at stores. Most families will probably be in the low-cost or moderate plans, USDA reports, while the thrifty plan is used to set the coupon allotment in the food stamp program.

To estimate a family's food costs using the accompanying table, use the following procedure:

(1) For members eating all meals at home or carried from home, use the amounts shown.

(2) For members eating some meals out, deduct five per cent from the amount shown for each meal not eaten at home. Example: For a person eating lunch out five days a week, subtract 25 per cent or one-fourth of the cost shown.

(3) For guests, add five per cent of the amount shown for the proper age group for each meal.

Costs in the second part of the table are for individuals in four-person families. If your family has more or less than four, total the individual figures and make the following adjustments, because large families tend to buy and use food more economically than smaller ones:

For a one person family, add 20 per cent; for a two-person family add 10 per cent; for a three-person family add five per cent; for a family of five or six subtract five per cent; and for a family of seven or more, subtract 10 per cent.

	Plans
	Thrifty	Low-cost	Moderate cost	Liberal
Families:
Family of 2 (20-54 years)	$34.30	$44.30	$55.50	$66.60

Report Card On Legislator Voting Listed

compliance with USDA standards by providing low interest loans. There was little doubt some kind of bill would be passed this year after a New York dairy refused to accept Minnesota manufactured milk because the state doesn't comply with the federal guidelines calling for yearly inspections. The inspections begin next year and all producers must be in compliance by July 1, 1985.

A key vote came early in the House when legislators approved $330,000 for the loan fund. The vote on that amendment follows:

Sparby - yes.

Here are the House and Senate votes for the final bill: House, Sparby, yes; Senate, Stumpf, yes.

Electric Co-op Bill of Rights

One of the most heavily lobbied bills spanning over the last two legislative sessions has been the electric co-op bill of rights. This year, after being heavily amended, the bill passed.

The law would allow all co-op members to see the business records of their co-op in the same way public corporations must open their records to shareholders. Members are allowed access to board meetings and the board must record roll call votes on rate hike motions. Retail co-op board members would be assured access to business records of wholesale co-ops, such as UPA and CPA. Stockholders can petition for votes at annual meetings and would be given equal access to influence votes through newsletter and other media.

However, these provisions will only apply if a referendum is passed endorsing these rights. Proponents admit the final bill is only a step in the right direction and promise to come back wtih a stronger piece of legislation if the new law fails to curb abuses.

Opponents point out that abuse exists in isolated areas and they question whether reverse referendums will help in the trouble spots. They feel stronger legislation would weaken the structure of co-ops.

The final House and Senate votes are listed: House, Sparby, no; Senate, Stumpf, yes.

Waste Management Act Revisions

The major change in waste management provides a year delay in the siting of hazardous waste landfills in Minnesota; sludge and ash and solid waste landfills in the metropolitan Twin Cities.

Although the waste management board may settle for just four sites in Carver, Scott, Marshall and Aitkin counties, it is required to study the feasibility of locating a hazardous waste site in crystalline bedrock. Also, the WMB must actively pursue various conservation, reduction and recycling technologies in an effort to reduce the amount of hazardous wastes produced for landfilling.

In the area of solid waste landfilling, all metro counties — except Carver — must search out additional potential sites for approval by the Metropolitan council.

The new law recognizes sewage sludge, to be placed in sludge and ash landfills, as hazardous. While siting is delayed, the bill drops the need to search out two additional sites, allowing the present four certified sites to suffice.

House and Senate votes for the conference report are listed: House, Sparby, yes; Senate, Stumpf, yes.

Court Unification

Should county and district courts be unified into one level, making scheduling easier? Proponents claim the change would be efficient. Opponents fear judges will lose their ability to specialize and oppose loss of local county judge seats. The Senate endorsed studying the matter, while the House bill went back to committee for hearings next year.

Budget

State spending in the next biennium will increase by almost 13 per cent. Here are the highlights from the major spending bills:

Education: The Legislature raised the state share for public education by 12.8 per cent, to $1,475 per pupil unit, and froze it at that level for the entire biennium.

The most controversial aspect allows school districts to levy additional funds to replace lost state money. While this pumps more money into the districts, areas with high property values (such as suburban and rich farmland areas) will have to pay for better education through higher property taxes. The levy cap was set at 24 mills.

In addition, there were appropriations to improve computer instruction and to fund the state vocational-technical institutes.

State Departments: Funding for the legislative, judicial and most executive branch departments was set at about $1 billion. The largest appropriation was $90 million to the departmentof natural resources.

Health, Welfare and Corrections: The most controversial aspect of this $1.9 billion spending bill was a $265 million jobs program. It would encourage businesses to hire the unemployed for $4 an hour or higher through state subsidies, depending on the duration of the job.

In addition, aid to families with dependent children will rise five per cent.

Semi-State Agencies: Money for agriculture, transportation and other semi-state agencies was set at $1.8 billion. The most controversial aspect was an increase in Metropolitan transit commission (MTC) funding to offset the need for higher fares in this biennium.

In addition, a provision was included which provides "feathering" of real estate taxes in the metropolitan area. In the future, property owners will have their MTC property taxes based on the amount of bus service provided to the area. Some suburban landowners with little or no bus service could have their property taxes lowered.

Sen. Stumpf and Rep. Sparby both voted yes on all the final votes on the conference reports in each appropriation bill.

Bonding

When the state doesn't have enough money to finance large projects through appropriations, it sells bonds as a method of raising the money. Usually major bonding bills are passed in the second half of the session, although this year the legislature passed a larger-than-average $111 million bonding bill.

Monday from this will be used to: purchase the Minnesota Education Association (MEA) building near the Capitol, which could house the new appeals court; renovate the state office building and the Capitol; build a new women's correctional facilitie in Shakopee; acquire new park lands; and build a new music building for the University of Minnesota on the west bank.

The vote here is on the final conference report: House, Sparby, yes; Senate, Stumpf, yes.

Minimum Pricing

A bill that would allow Minnesota to join a potential Midwest grain cartel, which would fix commodity prices, was passed by the Senate but killed by the House agriculture committee.

If states which control 60 per cent of production of one commodity join the cartel, minimum prices of this commodity would be 80 to 100 per cent of parity.

The bill was pushed by Anne Kanten, assistant commissioner of agriculture, as a way of making sure farmers got a fair price; foes decried the bill as economically unworkable.

Only the full Senate vote is listed: Stumpf, no.

Melby Service Project Aids Valley Home

Mike Melby, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Melby of Thief River Falls, recently presented 75 book holders to Valley Home as a final service project for his Eagle Scout qualification.

Mike received the idea from his great-grandmother Alice Spray (now deceased), a former resident of Valley Home, who said she was unable to read any more because she didn't have the strength to hold a book. The stands Mike made are small enough to fit on a bedstand or table. Each resident received one and extras were placed in the lobby and chapel area.

Lumber for the project was donated by Peterson Lumber company and help in cutting, sanding, assembly and finishing was given by Bill Carlson, Bill Nygaard, Greg Hall, Andy Melby and Mark and Wayne Borsheim. A total of 103 hours of work went into the project.

At the presentation Friday in the Valley Home dining room, dedication was made by Mike to his great-grandmother. Among those attending were his parents, brother Mark and sister Becky, scoutmaster Jim Hoks, committee chairman Jim Carlson, Bill Carlson, Bill Nygaard, Jim Van Schaick, Andy Melby and Rick Camp, Eagle scout from Tucson, AZ.

First stand was presented to Mrs. Emma Nelson, grandmother of Mrs. Chester Camp. Camp was the person who started Mike in the scout program seven years ago. Mike's project report will now go to the national Boy Scout office for final approval, and a local board of review will then precede his Eagle scout designation.

Program is sponsored by the state fair, the Minnesota board on aging and the Minnesota federation of county fairs.

Selection process begins at Minnesota county fairs. Winners advance to the statewide program and are eligible to participate in the state fair ceremony. Persons who live in counties with fair dates after the state fair August 25 through Labor Day, September 5 are also eligible for the program.

Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) has just finished mapping the entire state for bicycle travelers through a series of 54 bikeway maps now available for purchase.

Minnesota, a leader in bicycle transportation maps and programs, is the first in the nation to provide a comprehensive view of the state for bicyclists through maps which cover all public highways, roads and off-road bikeways.

All roads are rated and color-coded for bicycling suitability, all off-road bikeways are clearly marked and all public campgrounds are indexed, listing facilities available at each location.

An equipment checklist, safety information and colorful illustrations in the "Potpourri" and "Living Heritage" sections highlight significant historical, cultural and nature spots to visit.

All outstate maps include closeups of major communities in the area, depicting city streets and facilities available.

"Although increased road safety for the traveling public is the main purpose, the maps are loaded with valuable information for trip planning," said Nancy Mahle, state bikeways program manager.

"They can provide bicyclists with the information they need for traveling in any part of the state," she added.

For a price list and order form, contact Map Sales, Minnesota Department of Transportation, B-20 Transportation Building, St. Paul, MN 55155 (call 612-296-2216) or the Minnesota Bookstore, Minnesota State Documents, 117 University Ave., St. Paul, MN 55155 (call 612-297-3000 in the Twin Cities or 1-800-652-9747 toll free statewide). Bulk orders receive a special rate.

Discussion Needed

Last week we editorialized on the proposal for establishment of a senior citizen center in Thief River Falls, noting that a good selling job is needed to rally support for the idea. We expected considerable comment on the question, but so far we have received very little.

We continue to feel that presentation of a good case for construction of such a center is a necessity if the public is to be expected to support a bond issue to finance it. We would like to hear from anyone — senior citizen or others — who could further explain the needs and uses for such a facility.

Send your letters to the Times (be sure that they are signed) and we will be happy to publish them. Let's get some discussion going so that the topic is familiar to the local public.

ERA Still Vague

After banging around for 10 years, the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution never managed to gain the approval of 38 states necessary for adoption. It succumbed despite all the pressure its proponents could muster and now it has been resurrected unchanged in both houses of the U.S. Congress.

Walter Berns, considered a highly respected professor of political science and constitutional law, has said that after 10 years of study he still doesn't know what is meant by the ERA and he doubts if the sponsors know. Chief Senate sponsor, Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, opening witness in support of the bill, repeatedly answered questions by stating that the courts would have to decide what it means.

Berns questions if we really want to leave the question of what the ERA means to the courts. Would 535 members of the Congress and the legislators of 38 states really like to let a five-member majority of the nine-member supreme court tell them what they meant by the amendment?

Proponents argue that adoption of the admendment would not require coeducational dormitories at state universities or common latrines at army camps, but the amendment makes no such distinctions. Berns asked if "on account of sex" in the equal rights amendment to be treated in the same manner as the "on account of race" in the 15th amendment. If a black marine cannot be denied access to the Quantico showers on account of race, asks columnist James J. Kilpatrick, who is to be forbidden showers on account of sex?

Kilpatrick says the questions being asked about the amendment are not frivolous and he rejects Sen. Tsongas' view that the courts would have to decide its meaning. "It is," he says rightly, " a terrible way to amend the Constitution."

Expressing Opinion

"As a sister and daughter within a commercial fishing family, I was sickened when after back-breaking work, pressures and struggles waged by the commercial fishermen and other interests against the powerful and wealthy sports lobby, commercial fishing was crushed by Senate and House committees who care only for the political process — not who they've trampled beneath their politically ambitious feet."

So states one paragraph of a letter from Arlene Lodahl of Warroad. It was a photocopy of a letter apparently sent to a number of newspapers in the area and we do not accept such letters for our public opinion column.

"They cruelly squeezed out commercial fishing with little regard for the preservation of Lake of the Woods, miniscule regard for a 100-year-old industry and no regard or respect for the specialized occupation of a commercial fisherman," she wrote. "They have successfully eliminated people's livings for the sake of mere sport.

"I believe our representatives are wearing blinders, when in this age of unemployment they legislate a bill that carelessly does away with an entire industry and gives puny compensation in return.

"As a business owner in Warroad I am appalled at the financial loss this means to our community and I'm ashamed of the political process that pushed through a 'let's get it done with so we can close session' bill that spits in the eye of heritage and puts jobs and a valuable food source out of existence," she writes.

The legislative action was at best premature. It was a compromise of two bad bills which eliminated the worst of both but left nothing really good. It negated the efforts of the state department of natural resources to compile meaningful data through comprehensive survey and study of the lake's walleye resource. There was the impression that the action should be taken before DNR research could indicate it was the wrong course to take.

We firmely believe the legislature has again acted from the motivation to do something rather than the restraint to do something right. This is knee-jerk political activity and it speaks ill for the type of leadership the state's citizens receive from their legislature.

Why Steel Can't Compete

Minnesota Iron Range has received a large amount of publicity over the past couple of years regarding high unemployment. There are obviously a number of factors contributing to that situation, but one of the major ones is the inability of domestic steel companies to compete with foreign firms.

Tied closely to that inability to compete is the high cost of labor — both in wages and related benefits. When U.S. Steel contended late last year that steel workers' wages were over $25 per hour and too high to be competitive, the president of a steelworkers local on the Iron Range contested the figure. He calculated that his personal hourly employment cost was "only" $18.738 per hour.

T.W. Sterling, general manager of labor relations for U.S. Steel, responded to the union local president's contention. He noted that the average hourly total employment cost for each wage hour worked (excluding all management and non-union hours) had indeed reached $25.381 in the coordinating committee steel companies. Total employment cost comprises wage and benefit items.

Straight time base rate earnings were $13.34 per hour, he said, while the addition of shift differential, Sunday premiums, cost of living adjustments (COLA), overtime, pay for holidays at two and one-half times the base rate, pay for holidays not worked, pay for regular vacations of up to five weeks for all employees and pay for extended vacations of up to 10 additional weeks paid every five years to eligible employees, pay for time off for jury and witness duty, funerals and severance allowance added $4.150 to the average hourly employment cost.

Benefit items paid by the company including social security share, federal and state unemployment compensation taxes, workmen's compensation benefits, supplemental unemployment benefits, pensions, life insurance, health insurance, major medical, vision care, dental benefits, medical protection plan for retired employees and other items added another $7.890 for each hour worked, making the total $25.381.

Sterling explained that the union official had assumed 2,080 hours worked, or 40 hours per week for 52 weeks of the year. Under best conditions, he said, a typical employee works only 1,850 hours and under current conditions it is much less.

Then Sterling went to his company's payroll records and found that the complaining official had worked only 16 hours in all of 1981, but had been paid benefit items and wages for the 16 hours worked totaling $7,622 or $476.38 per hour actually worked. Again in 1982 the local president had worked only 16 hours but received pay for 152 hours of vacation and holidays and other benefits averaging $463.47 per hour total employment cost.

"The fact of the matter is that steelworker employment cost, and indeed the average iron ore worker employment cost, continues to be over double the average total employment cost for employees in all other manufacturing industries in the United States," Sterling said. ". . . Knowledgeable people have confronted the problem and are at work in an effort to resolve it. If we fail, the consequences will be severe. If we succeed, very good jobs will remain on the Iron Range."

It is easy to see that employees of the company have taken and taken and taken from the company until they have underminded their own employment. Now they are out of the market and they can't seem to figure out why. Probably the reason in that they aren't trying very hard to understand.

Interesting Opinions:

"God grants liberty only to those who live it and are always ready to guard and defend it. Let our object be our country. And, by the blessing of God, may that country itself become a splendid monument, not of oppression and terror, but of wisdom, of peace and liberty, upon which the world may gaze with admiration forever."

Farm Expo '83 Canceled For Low Interest

Minnesota Farm Expo '83 has been cancelled. The three-day event was to be held during July on a site located between St. Cloud and St. Joseph.

Promoters of Minnesota Farm Expo indicated that the number of farm manufacturing companies committed to the event did not reach the anticipated level to guarantee a successful statewide show. Several companies stated interest in a future show, but due to present economic conditions decided to wait until 1984 to expand their show schedules.

A similar event, more regional in nature, is being planned for next year. The show will be patterned after Wisconsin's farm progress days and be held on a working farm. A date for that three-day event will be determined later this year so that a region-wide coordination of special events can be undertaken.

Farm families desirous of hosting Minnesota Farm Expo may obtain further information by writing: Farm Expo, P.O. Box 1753, St. Cloud, Minnesota 56301.

Polaris Begins Production Of Six '84 Models

Six models of Polaris snowmobiles are being produced at the plant in Roseau as some 300 production employees went to work on the 1984 product line recently.

Scheduled for production are the Cutlass SS, the SS Long Track, Star Long Track, Star, Indy Trail and Indy 600 models. Production run is expected to last into September.

Arnie Ochs, vice president of manufacturing for Polaris, said the company is placing a good deal of emphasis on resolving production problems, cutting production costs and improving all phases of the product. Changes include new decals and appearance, snow flaps, torsion system, handlebar pads, windshields, master cylinder covers, seat cushion, motor mounting, bulkhead design, chassis riveting, brake cooling, front suspension, carrier wheels and drive clutch.

Ochs said he feels the industry has bottomed out of the downward trend and told the Roseau Times-Region that he did not feel the start-up of Arctic Cat production in Thief River Falls would change the Polaris position. He called the Arctco effort to reintroduce snowmobile production here "a difficult task."

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep free. The actual aid weighs less than a fourth of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.
These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 32930, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

NW Counties Rank High In Sale Of Crops

While Roseau and Pennington counties are not ranked among the top 10 crop producing counties in Minnesota, both are among the top 10 in government payments received, according to information provided by the Minnesota agricultural statistics service.

Roseau county ranks seventh with $2,428,000 received in government payments in 1981 while Pennington county is ninth with $1,738,000. Martin county is the only county in the state which ranks in the top 10 in both crop and livestock dollar sales for 1981, finishing sixth in crop sales and eighth in livestock sales.

Northwestern Minnesota is well represented in the crop production area, however, as Polk county is first in crop sales at $222,497,000 and Marshall county is second at $144,507,000. Others in the top 10 include Renville, $142,101,000; Clay, $117,623,000; Redwood, $103,045,000; Martin, $97,656,000; Norman, $95,490,000; Blue Earth, $92,952,000; Freeborn, $89,721,000; and Faribault, $88,924.

Stearns county leads in livestock sales with $179,979,000. Others in the top 10 are Otter Tail, $117,978,000; Fillmore, $105,684,000; Nobles, $95,682,000; Rock, $89,142,000; Kandiyohi, $86,475,000; Goodhue, $84,340,000; Martin, $82,203,000; Lyon, $80,385,000; and Winona, $78,766,000.

Polk and Marshall counties also placed first and second, respectively, in government payments at $5,971,000 and $4,870,000. Others in the top 10 were Blue Earth, $3,874,000; Norman, $3,774,000; Kittson, $3,675,000; Clay, $3,595,000; Roseau, $2,428,000; Wilkin, $2,292,000; Pennington, $1,738,000; and Otter Tail, $1,705,000.

In total dollar receipts Polk county still has the lead at $252,999,000, followed by Stearns with $210,562,000; and Renville with $205,902,000. Martin county is fourth with $180,664,000, followed by Redwood, $178,394,000; Otter Tail, $167,534,000; Marshall, $160,708,000; Nobles, $159,154,000; Jackson, $158,604,000; and Freeborn, $155,224,000.

The year 1981 is the last for which county data is available. Total cash receipts are larger than USDA cash receipts for Minnesota because they include inter-farm and intra-state sales of livestock.

All together, Minnesota's 87 counties generated a total of $7.24 billion to the state's economy in 1981. Of this total $3.52 billion came from crop receipts, $3.64 billion from livestock and $79 million from government payments.

HELP WITH INTERVIEWS was provided to Miss Thief River Falls, Stacey Sandberg, during a session last week with Dorothy Dodds (right), instructor in the sales and marketing program at the Thief River Falls AVTI, and Becca Messreni, students in the program who advanced to national competition. Stacey has been doing intensive interview studies for the past several weeks in preparation for her participation in the Miss Minnesota pageant this week. She left Sunday to take part in the week-long program.

Miss TRF In State Pageant At Austin

sultation and analysis at a modeling clinic in Fargo.

Participation has been a key word for Miss Thief River Falls during the past year, despite Stacey's attendance at North Dakota state university where she is majoring in psychology and will be a junior next fall. Among other things she has appeared at the local farm wives appreciation dinner, annual chamber of commerce banquet, Uff Da Days drawing, Operation Christmas, Jaycee Women Christmas party for children, charity ball (where she became the interviewer in a version of "The Dating Game") and the Jaycee and Jaycee Women awards night program.

She was a stage guest at "Capitol for a Day" in Thief River Falls, distributed awards at the North Country auto showtime, performed for residents of Valley Home, was a guest at the Karlstad Lions talent show and took part as a guest in pageants at Grygla, Middle River and Owatonna.

Stacey said she would definitely encourage girls to enter the Miss America program and to set goals and work toward them. There are many reasons to enter, she said, and the goals needn't include winning the title. The goal may be to perform in public, to meet new friends, to conquer fear of appearing before crowds or to gain the Miss Congeniality award. "Select an important goal for your own reasons and then work as hard as you can to attain it," she suggested.

As the pageant week date neared, Stacey began to feel the pressures associated with the state event. "There will be so many beautiful and talented girls there," she said of the state pageant, "that I'm sure everyone will be under a lot of pressure. That's why mail call will probably be one of the best times; you can relax and rebuild your positive thinking."

Candidates for Miss Minnesota may not be contacted by telephone during the pageant week. Messages, greetings and gifts will reach them if addressed to: Miss Minnesota Pageant, Box 92, Austin, Minnesota. 55912.

The MonDak® herbicide advantage: Knocks out wild buckwheat for bigger wheat yields.
Gives you 3 to 5 extra bushels of wheat per acre.
Small weeds can be big problems for wheat growers. As soon as they're up, they're stealing precious moisture and nutrients from your wheat crop.
That's the time to spray 'em with MonDak® herbicide. When weeds are small and actively growing, MonDak herbicide is immediately absorbed by weed leaves and roots. Then translocates throughout the weed for leaf-tip to root-tip kill.
Without tank-mixing, MonDak herbicide controls the hard-to-kill broadleaf weeds, even those other treatments leave behind.
You'll knock out wild buckwheat... seedling Canada thistle... sunflower... kochia... and a host of other broadleaf weeds in wheat.
For effective broadleaf weed control in wheat, ask your ag chem dealer for MonDak herbicide. And get prepared for 3 to 5 extra bushels of wheat per acre.

Congratulations go out to Thief River Falls' Tim Bergland and his selection by the Washington Capitals in the fourth round of last week's National Hockey League draft.

Often times we're somewhat reluctant to lavish too much praise or give too much "ink" to a local athlete — afraid, apparently, that it takes away from the team concept that coaches are always striving for. The athletes, coaches and fans know who the talented players are, and when they achieve certain goals they're obviously singled out in the media. But to put them in a constant spotlight would be unfair to both them and their teammates.

Bergland, though, attracted attention this winter with an outstanding hockey season and was justly rewarded with post-season accolades, along with a scholarship from the University of Minnesota and most recently his prestigious selection in the NHL draft. He was rated the best 18-year-old hockey player in the state by scouts, and he was the first Minnesotan picked, a tribute to his talent and potential development as a hockey player.

It seemed to give the entire community, especially those people closely tied in with the Thief River Falls hockey program, a great deal of pride when Bergland was drafted. Everyone wishes him the best of luck.

Hockey Program Outlined

Thief River Falls Amateur Hockey Association (TRFAHA) has outlined its 1983-84 program for Tiny Mites, Squirts, Pee-Wees and Bantams.

Tiny Mites instruction program for 5-8-year-olds will remain unchanged for next year and the Squirts In-House program for 9-10-year-olds is expected to remain stable with four or five teams, depending upon the number of players in the program at that level.

Some changes, though, are planned for the Pee-Wees (11-12-year-olds) and Bantams (13-14-year-olds).

There will still be A and B traveling teams for the Pee-Wees and Bantams, but squad numbers will be reduced to 15 players to insure playing time for all team members. Eagles Pee-Wee A team will play 24 games, excluding post-season play; Merchants Pee-Wee B team will play a maximum of 20 games, excluding post-season play; VFW Bantam A and the Bantam B teams will both play a maximum of 24 games, excluding post-season play.

A new wrinkle next winter will be the Intermediate In-House program, a four-team league made up of non-traveling Pee-Wees and Bantams. They'll follow a format that has been highly successful in recent years at the Squirt level.

TRFAHA officials also announced that their second pizza sale, which supplanted the traditional candy sale last year, will get underway Sept. 1.

NHL Draft Doesn't Change Bergland's Plans

Tim Bergland has no visions of grandeur. The recent Lincoln high school graduate was a fourth round draft choice of the Washington Capitals Wednesday in the annual National Hockey League amateur draft, the 75th player taken overall, the top Minnesotan selected.

However, it's a long ways from the Thief River Falls sports arena to the Capital Centre in Landover, Maryland, home of the NHL franchise. It's a step that Bergland, and even those who selected him, realize isn't ready to be taken yet.

Bergland was elated with the announcement of his selection, although the club making the pick came as a big surprise. "It was great," he said when asked how it felt to be a fourth round NHL draft choice. "I wasn't too sure where I would go." He figured Hartford, the New York Islanders and Calagary were the likely candidates since they had shown interest in him. Washington, as it turned out, was a surprise.

His selection in the draft culminated a remarkable season of hockey for Bergland, who developed from a good high school hockey player as a junior into an outstanding high school hockey player with a great deal of potential as a senior.

Bergland says he really can't put a finger on the reason for the sudden outburst of talent. "I guess it was the weights," he offered in reference to a summer weight-training program that gave him the strength to become a strong skater with an outstanding shot.

It resulted in a number of post-season honors. He was an All-Section 8 selection; was named to the WCCO radio all-state team; was picked to play in the first North-South high school all-star hockey series in Duluth; was named to the Team Minnesota roster that traveled to Boston to play Team Massachusetts in a high school all-star series; and was rated as the top 18-year-old high school hockey player in the state by NHL scouts.

Like nearly all hockey players in the youth, high school and college ranks, Bergland has dreamed of being drafted by an NHL team, but it wasn't until towards the end of the 1982-83 season with the Prowlers did he realize that his dream could indeed become reality, he explained. That's when the scouts and media made it be known that he was a top prospect.

Bergland has signed a tender to play hockey at the University of Minnesota, a real treat in itself and a big challenge. He'll play hockey for the Gophers, quite possibly for four years, before the NHL option presents itself.

Unlike the National Football League draft of college-age players who are expected to make immediate marks as professional athletes or try other means of employment, the NHL draft is more often than not based on potential. With a few exceptions, those 18-year-olds selected by NHL teams are often encouraged to continue playing as amateurs in the college, junior or olympic ranks with the hopes of eventually developing into NHL-caliber players.

That's what Washington is doing. "Somebody from Washington contacted me, a scout or somebody, and told me they'd keep in touch," said Bergland. A contract was never mentioned.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bergland, Tim was to be in the Twin Cities today (Monday) to begin competition in a summer hockey league featuring high school and college players before enrolling at the University of Minnesota this fall.

There were five Section 8 high school players selected in the 1983 NHL draft. After Bergland was picked on the fourth round by Washington, Detroit Lakes' Bob Caulfield (a junior this year) was taken in the fifth round by the New York Islanders; East Grand Forks' Craig Mack was taken in the seventh round by Quebec; Warroad's John Bjorkman was taken in the 11th round by the Islanders; and Roseau's Chad Johnson was taken on the 12th round by Los Angeles.

Also connected with the draft was a trade by the Winnipeg Jets of former Warroad high school star David Christian to Washington for the Capitals' top draft choice. A member of the Gold Medal-winning U.S. Olympic team in 1980, Christian was the Jets' team captain, but was a free agent after playing out his option and had hoped to sign with a United States-based team because of the tax situation and the devaluated Canadian dollar.

TRYING TO COMPLETE a double play, Pepsi Bottling Co. second baseman Mark Harder stepped on the bag to force out American Legion-Miller Beer-TG Sporting Goods runner Dan Brinkman, then relayed his throw to first base in the third inning of Thursday's Division I Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association game. In a match-up of once-beaten teams, American Legion-Miller Beer-TG Sporting Goods won by an 8-4 margin.

TRF Legion Sweeps Grafton

Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team swept a Wednesday night doubleheader at Grafton by 13-4 and 6-5 scores to improve its season record to 2-1.

A scheduled Thursday game with Roseau was postponed when the Rams won the 1983 Region 8A high school baseball tournament title Wednesday with an 8-6 championship game decision over Cass Lake at Red Lake Falls, setting the Roseau American Legion schedule back until after this week's state Class A high school tournament.

Thief River Falls will have Northwest League assignments Tuesday vs. Karlstad and Thursday at Warroad, both 7 p.m. starts, and will finish the week with a Saturday doubleheader against Detroit Lakes here at 12-noon and 2 p.m.

A Thief River Falls offense that had managed just four runs in two previous games (a 2-0 win over Fertile and a 6-2 loss to Crookston) had a field day in the first half of the Grafton doubleheader, banging out 10 base hits to go along with 10 walks in a 13-4 rout.

Tim Bottem had three hits and three runs-batted-in for the winners while Tim Nyland and Brian Kemnitz had two hits each. Nyland drove in four runs and Kemnitz had two RBI's.

Thief River Falls had a five-run second inning and led 8-0 after 2½ innings.

Winning pitcher Ryan Drees gave up seven hits and walked five, but he also picked three Grafton runners off first base, including back-to-back pick-offs on Curt Rose and Tom Folske after walkino them both in the sixth.

Both teams scored five times in the fourth inning of the scheduled five-inning doubleheader nightcap, but Thief River Falls also tacked on a fifth inning run for a 6-5 victory and twinbill sweep.

Thief River Falls' winning run developed with two outs in the fifth when Steve Solheim doubled and scored on a single by Dean Brandon, who was 2-for-3 and had three runs-batted-in for the game.

Singles by Brandon and Brian Kemnitz were complemented by three walks, a sacrifice fly for an RBI by Kerry Wollin and a run-producing error in the Thief River Falls fifth. But Grafton tied it when Thief River Falls starting pitcher Tim Nyland issued two walks and a single to Dean French to start the bottom of the inning, then threw two wild pitches for runs before being replaced on the mound by Bob Huot.

Huot, in turn, was touched for two walks and two hits as Grafton knotted it at 5-5 before the inning finally ended.

DNR hotline

Due to the many commercial fishermen and the many fishermen from out of the area fishing Lake of the Woods and the Rainy River beginning March 1, much of the spawn for future walleye populations is lost. Why doesn't the DNR close fishing on the Rainy River from March 1 instead of April 15?

Spring fishing in the Rainy River is variable depending on weather and ice conditions. In 1982, fishermen were able to get on the river only three days before the season closed on April 14; in 1981 they fished 25 days.

In 1981 the catch was 14,000 walleyes with an average weight of 1.3 pounds. During the 1983 spring fishing period, the catch was 2,300 walleyes averaging 1.4 pounds. This compares with a catch of 300,000 walleyes per year taken from Lake of the Woods and an additional harvest of 150,000 pounds of walleyes annually by commercial fishermen.

Last year, 37 per cent of the fishermen were local, 45 per cent came from a distance of between 50-150 miles and 18 per cent came from more than 150 miles.

Very few large females are taken in the spring Rainy River fishing. Eighty-nine per cent of the fish creeled are males averaging less than 1½ pounds.

DNR is monitoring the spring fishing in the Rainy River annually to determine its effects on walleye populations in the Rainy River and in Lake of the Woods. Minnesota DNR, Fisheries Section.

Summer Hockey Camp Being Planned In TRF

Plans have been developed for the first Thief River Falls North Country Hockey Camp that will be held July 31 through August 13 at the old arena in downtown Thief River Falls.

Two one-week sessions will be offered from July 31 to August 6 and from August 7 to August 13 for players who will be Squirts, Pee-Wees and Bantams next year.

Each group will be limited to 20 skaters and two goaltenders. Camp fee will be $50 per participant per week. In addition, a special goaltender's school will be held in conjunction with the camp, limited to 12 goalies at a cost of $20 per week.

Because of the small groups the camp will be working with, participants will be selected on a first-come, first-serve basis following the mailing of the information and registration forms shortly by the Thief River Falls Amateur Hockey Association (TRFAHA), the camp sponsor.

Ron Novak, Thief River Falls youth hockey director, will serve as the Thief River Falls North Country Hockey Camp director.

Camp coaches will be Tom Goddard, a former Lincoln high school and University of North Dakota hockey player who has also played senior amateur hockey with the Warroad Lakers; Billy Poole, a former Prowler who has coached Bantam and high school junior varsity hockey teams in Thief River Falls; Pete Sullivan, a one-time Thief River Falls goalie who has coached youth and high school hockey teams in Red Lake Falls and Bemidji; and Bill McGann, a Duluth Central and University of Minnesota-Duluth graduate and hockey player who served as Lincoln high school head hockey coach before moving to Proctor where he is an assistant coach.

Both sessions will follow the same time schedule, starting with camp orientation and open skating for the participants on the Sunday preceding the drills — July 31 and August 7. Squirts will skate at 6 p.m.; Pee-Wees at 6:45 p.m.; and Bantams at 7:15 p.m. The Monday-through-Friday schedules will feature Squirts on the ice from 8-9:15 a.m.; Pee-Wees 9:30-10:45 a.m.; Squirts 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; Pee-Wees 12:45-2:15 p.m.; Bantams 2:30-3:45 p.m.; goaltenders 4-5 p.m.; and Bantams 5:15-6:45 p.m. Both sessions will conclude with Saturday games — August 6 and August 13. Squirts will play at 8 a.m.; Pee-Wees at 10 a.m.; and Bantams at 12-noon.

Purpose of the camp, explained officials, is to increase the players' overall hockey understanding and abilities. Objective at the camp will be to develop the basic skills in the game of hockey — the skating, passing, shooting, stickhanding, etc. It's an attempt to give local skaters a chance to participate in a summer hockey camp at home.

In addition to the Squirts, Pee-Wees and Bantams, the Thief River Falls North Country Hockey Camp will also feature a two-week high school hockey league during those July 31-August 13 dates.

Open to all high school hockey players, league teams will play six games per week at night, with games scheduled at 7 and 9 p.m. Registration will be limited to 44 players — 40 skaters and four goaltenders — per week to make up for the four-team league that will feature two lines, two sets of defensemen and one goalie per team.

Teams will be coached by qualified hockey people and all games will be worked by qualified officials. Registration fee is $30 per week, with applications again taken on a first-come, first-served basis following the TRFAHA mailings.

FATHER'S DAY SPECIAL

DURING THE MONTH OF JUNE

Are you and your wife expecting a baby? Do you want to be accessable when the time comes for her to go to the hospital? During the month of June, you may rent one of our "beepers" for the 3 weeks prior to expected delivery time 'til one week after for $30.00 (so it turns out to be a month later - it's still good). Just bring us a note from your doctor giving the expected date and your check for $30.00 and we'll deliver your "Beeper" to you 3 weeks prior to that date. So you're not expecting in June. The offer is still good as long as you reserve your "Beeper" during June!

Combined Notice of Finding of No Significant Impact and Notice of Intent to Request Release of Funds
Date: June 9, 1983

City of Thief River Falls
Box 528
Thief River Falls, MN 56701
(218) 681-2500

TO ALL INTERESTED PARTIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

The purpose of this notice is to identify two separate but related actions to be taken by the City of Thief River Falls:

On or about June 28, 1983, the above-named City will request the Office of Local Government to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 97-35) for the following project:

TITLE: Industrial Manufacturing Reinvestment. PURPOSE: Equipment and building rehabilitation loans to three existing industries. LOCATION: City of Thief River Falls. CENSUS TRACTS, 9905 and 9903.

Finding of No Significant Impact

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and accordingly the above-named City has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-90).

The reasons for such decision not to prepare such Statement are as follows:

1. All industries currently exist.
2. All industries are in industrial parks.
3. No current or past problem of an environmental or service nature have occurred.
4. The project will not increase industries' capacities beyond the ability of municipality or township to serve.
5. A positive benefit seen socially and economically.
6. A positive impact seen is the working conditions within the industries.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the above-named City which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, at the City Planning Office between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

Public Comments of Finding

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City to the City Planning Office. Such written comments should be received at Box 528 on or before June 28, 1983. All such comments so received will be considered and the City will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the within project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

Release of Funds

The City of Thief River Falls will undertake the project described above with Block Grant funds from the Office of Local Government (OLG) under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. The City of Thief River Falls is certifying to OLG that the City of Thief River Falls and Bob Carlson, in his official capacity as Mayor consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision-making and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval the City of Thief River Falls may use Block Grant funds and OLG and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will have satisfied their responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

Objectives to State Release of Funds

OLG will accept an objection to its approval only if it is on one of the following bases: (a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the certifying officer or other officer of grantee approved by OLG; or (b) that the City of Thief River Falls' environmental review record for the project indicated omission of a required decision, finding or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24CRF Part 58) and may be addressed to OLG at 100 Hanover Building, 480 Cedar Street, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by OLG. No objection received after June 29, 1983 will be considered by OLG.

Class AA Baseball Starts On Tuesday

Thirty-seventh annual Minnesota Sstate High School League (MSHSL) state baseball tournament begins a four-day run Tuesday with the Class AA portion of the event beginning at 10 a.m. at St. Paul's new Municipal Stadium.

New facility, located across from old Midway Stadium on Snelling Avenue, will be the site of seven championship series games and a third place contest during Tuesday and Wednesday.

Quarterfinal encounters commence at 10 a.m. Tuesday and run throughout the day with future games starting at 12:30 p.m., 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. Wednesday's semifinal games are scheduled for 10 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., respectively, with third place and championship affairs set to start at 4:30 and 7 p.m. that day.

Class A portion of the tournament will change scenes, moving to St. Cloud's Municipal Stadium on Thursday and Friday. Times of games on each day are the same as slated in Class AA.

Teams for the Class A tournament were not determined at the time of this MSHSL news release.

Solid pitching, good hitting, and a stout defense make Edina a solid favorite to capture top honors in the eight-team Class AA tournament. Top-rated in the final state coaches association poll and beaten only once in 20 games this campaign, Edina's Hornets will be out to win the school's second ever state baseball crown. Previously, the suburban Minneapolis school won top honors in 1968.

Losers only to Bloomington Kennedy (7-4), Edina has won their last 15 games and comes into the 1983 event with a 19-1 record. Holders of a 12-5 won-lost record in seven previous state tournament games, Edina's baseball team will try and win for their school a fourth state title this school year. Others were in girls tennis, boys gymnastics, and girls golf.

Should coach Jim Luther's aggregation win the tourney, will be the school's 49th (12 more than any other MSHSL school) since first becoming a high school in 1950.

Region 6AA champions are paced by senior pitchers Rob Wassenaar and Rick Raether, both of whom were unbeaten and winners of eight games each. They both have worked in excess of 50 innings and have earned run averages of 1.15 and 1.51, respectively.

Edina's offensive batting attack carries a .330 average and its defensive play has yielded but 15 errors in 20 games.

Edina's credentials are very impressive, but the other seven region titlists aren't conceding top honors to the school that has had much success in many sports this school year. With only Grand Rapids returning from the 1982 field, the remaining six schools, including first-time entrant Stillwater, would like an opportunity to capture the title trophy and gold medals.

Other teams that will be on hand include Frank B. Kellogg (Little Canada), Shakopee, St. Cloud Apollo, Burnsville and Holy Angels Academy (Richfield). Two-time defending champion Cretin was ousted in region playdowns.

Pairings for quarterfinal play on Tuesday look like this: Region 4AA — Stillwater (15-8) vs. Region 6AA — Edina (19-1) at 10 a.m.; Region 3AA — Frank B. Kellogg (16-4-1) vs. Region 7AA — Grand Rapids (14-5) at 12:30 p.m. in the other bracket, Region 2AA — Shakopee (15-5) vs. Region 8AA — St. Cloud Apollo (16-4) at 4:30 p.m.; and Region 1AA — Burnsville (13-9) vs. Region 5AA — Holy Angels Academy (15-4) at 7 p.m.

Only Edina (1968) and Grand Rapids (178) have won previous state baseball titless among the entrants. Grand Rapids, in fact, is making a seventh consecutive state tournament appearance, and hopes to improve on an overall state tourney mark of 8-9 compiled during nine total appearances.

St. Cloud Apollo is back in the event for a fifth time, while each of the others — Frank B. Kellogg, Shakopee, Burnsville, and Holy Angels Academy are making second ever appearances.

Attendance at the tournament is expected to draw in excess of 4,375 total that witnessed last year's event at the Chaska Athletic Field, and may draw more than the 5,912 record total of 1977.

Roseau To Have Mixed Softball Games June 26

Sixth annual Roseau Jaycee Women's mixed slow pitch softball tournament will be held Sunday, June 26.

Entry fee is $50, plus a red-stitched softball. Tournament director is Paulette Omdahl, 806 Sixth St. N.E., Roseau, MN 56751; telephone 463-2045, evenings. Entry deadline for the 16-team event is June 18.

Apollo, Roseau Win Baseball Tournaments

St. Cloud Apollo won the Region 8AA title and Roseau took the Region 8A crown last week in high school baseball tournament play.

Both titles were decided Wednesday when South Sub-Region 8AA winner Apollo defeated North Sub-Region 8AA representative Moorhead 6-4 at St. Cloud while North Sub-Region 8A runner-up Roseau out-scored South Sub-Region 8A runner-up Cass Lake 8-6 at Red Lake Falls.

Unlike Region 8AA where just the two sub-region winners meet in the region finals, both the champion and runner-up sub-region teams in Region 8A make up a four-team region semifinal field. Those games were played last Tuesday when Roseau eliminated South Sub-Region winner Bagley 5-0 and Cass Lake knocked off North Sub-Region 8A winner Lake of the Woods 7-3.

TRF Softball Tournaments Are Postponed

Heavy rains Sunday washed out the scheduled 24-team Lake Agassiz men's slow pitch softball tournament scheduled to be played in Thief River Falls.

There were eight teams scheduled to compete in the double-elimination Division I portion of the tournament for Class A and B teams, including entries from Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, East Grand Forks, Fosston, Shelly, Detroit Lakes and Grand Forks.

Sixteen teams were scheduled to compete in the single-elimination (plus consolation bracket) Division II portion of the tournament for Class C and D teams, with entries from Crookston, Thief River Falls, Grand Forks, Grygla, Park Rapids and Bemidji.

Black Powder Shooters Held Two-Day Event

Pungent smell of black powder smoke hung over the Pennington county sportsmen club north of Thief River Falls on Saturday and Sunday, June 4 and 5, as the tenth annual muzzle loaders' "Rondyvoo" was held, sponsored by the River Junction Ramrodders.

Antique weapon enthusiasts from this area gathered with guests from Canada and North Dakota to compare notes, swap stories and supplies, and complete in various events using both replica and original guns. Many of the replica weapons were hand built by their owners, either from kits or from scratch. Several participants dressed the part as well, wearing buckskin pants and moccasins.

Saturday events included trap shooting using muzzle loading shotguns, pistol shooting at 25 and 50 yards rapid fire pistol (using muzzle loading revolvers) at 25 yards, and flintlock rifles at 50 yards.

Sunday events included offhand shooting at 25 and 50 yards, cross-sticks shooting at 100 yards, and breech loading black powder cartridge rifles at 100 yards. Following competitive events both days, participants held other informal matches such as metal silhouette shooting.

Following the final event on Sunday, shooters' scores were tallied and winners in each category were allowed to choose from a variety of prizes which were donated.

Winners in each category were as follows: pistol aggregate, Bob Halcrow, Drayton, ND.; rifle aggregate, Jack Davidson, Thief River Falls; high lady, Cornellia Johnson, Winnipeg, Manitoba; flintlock, Stuart Johnson, Winnipeg, Manitoba; 100 yard rifle, Jack Davidson, Thief River Falls; 50 yard pistol, Bob Halcrow, Drayton, ND.; 50 yard rifle, Howard Hagen, Thief River Falls; 100 yard cartridge rifle, Vic Pogatchnik, Thief River Falls; 50 yard cross-sticks, Ken Fletcher, Thief River Falls; rapid fire postol, Irving Swanson, Thief River Falls; 25 yard pistol, Laverne Olson, Drayton, ND.; 25 yard rifle, Dennis Capistran, Mentor; and shotgun, Hardy Hodge, Thief River Falls.

Nancy Fellman Is TRF Artist Of The Month

(Starting this month the Thief River Falls community arts council is featuring an area "Artist of the Month", whose work will be on display at Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls for the entire month. Persons who would like to recommend an artist to be featured should contact the Thief River Falls community arts council at 681-2960 or 681-4056.)

Energetic, organized and talented... those words aptly describe June "Artist of the Month" Nancy Fellman. Thief River Falls community arts council has arranged a display of Nancy's china and porcelain painting in the showcase at Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls. That exhibit will remain through June 30.

Many area residents know Nancy as a former co-owner and manager of Country Class Arts, a craft marketing and supply shop in Thief River Falls. Nancy sold her interest in the business in March, in order to spend more time with her family and her art. She now operates out of a studio in her home at 116 Parkview Street, where she lives with her husband Barry and two children, Vicki and Steve. Nancy has been active in church and community affairs, and is also involved with the community arts council which she currently serves as vice president, and chairman of this year's "Art in the Streets" celebration, scheduled for June 23.

While Nancy's display consists only of china and porcelain painting, she also does other art work such as rosemaling, folk art, tole paiting and needlework. She claims her interest in the arts "developed slowly through the years." Her dedication to the art of china and procelain painting is largely attributed to the efforts of her instructor, Marianne Nelson.

Nancy said that before students would be allowed to paint a flower on a piece of china, she made them go outside and scrutinize the flower they were to paint. She also made them use the library to research the particular flower before they were allowed to paint it on china. This attention to detail is now evident in Nancy's work, which is delicate and very accurate.

Nancy notes that working with this medium requires special materials, equipment and techniques. Colors actually melt into the glaze on the procelain or china when they are fired at high temperatures in her kiln, so that the dishes can be used. In fact, Nancy says she and her husband have hand painted coffee cups which they use every day.

Because the colors tend to fade somewhat as they are fired into the glaze, Nancy notes that she may have to paint and fire some pieces as many as five times to get the desired effect. Each firing can take a day, and Nancy adds that all of that work can be destroyed in an instant if one of the colors changes due to a chemical reaction during the firing. Although experience reduces the odds of such accidents, she notes, with a bit of frustration, they still happen occasionally.

Nancy says she particularly enjoys exhibiting and meeting people at area art events. She has displayed her work at shows in Thief River Falls, Crookston, Bemidji nd Park Rapids. The community arts council sponsored exhibit will provide an additional opportunity for art lovers to familiarize themselves with her work by visiting the library during the month of June.

NANCY FELLMAN has been declared "Artist of the Month" for June by the Thief River Falls community arts council. Although her interests and talents in the field of art are varied, her specialty is painting on ceramics and china. Some examples of her finely detailed work are on exhibit in the display case at Northwest regional library, where they will remain through the end of the month.

Imitations Not Equal To Real Dairy Products

Research indicates imitation dairy foods don't stack up nutritionally to the real foods they imitate. The extent of their nutritional limitations and potential effects on human nutrition are unfolding in a study sponsored in part with Minnesota dairy farmers" promotion dollars.

Experiments conducted at the University of California have shown laboratory rats fed imitation dairy products display severe signs of malnutrition.

George Briggs, a professor of nutrition science, incorporated imitation cheese as part of a diet consisting of all necessary nutrients. The rats thrived at first, but after a few weeks they began losing weight. Had they stayed on the diet longer, Briggs said, they might have died.

The research team constructed a second, similar diet, but substituted real cheese for imitations. The rats that dined on the real product showed none of the ill effects of their imitation-fed counterparts.

Additional experiments with imitation milk have proved even more dramatic. "The imitation milk product pretends to be similar to real milk in value," Briggs said, "but we find that when we feed it to our rats, it isn't equal to milk at all."

"As a matter of fact, the rats' hair starts to fall off in three to four weeks and their growth is poor. If we allow them to go on longer, we find skin lesions. Without the nutrients needed, they would eventually die," Briggs stated.

Public attention has been drawn to the superiority of real dairy products as a result of the American Dairy Association of Minnesota's REAL Seal program. The seal is a symbolic drop of milk which encloses the word "REAL". It is included only on the packages of 100 per cent real dairy products.

"The REAL Seal is really a consumer service," said Cliff Markuson, general manager of the American dairy association of Minnesota. "It allows easy identification of real dairy products and brings attention to imitation's nutritional inferiority."

Lab Tests For Tree Diseases Are Offered

Free laboratory tests for the two major shade tree diseases, Dutch elm and oak wilt, will again be offered by the Minnesota department of agriculture, starting June 1, according to commissioner Jim Nichols.

This is the 22nd consecutive year that the plant industry division has offered free tests of stressed tree samples in the continuing campaign to control diseases that have destroyed thousands of valuable shade trees throughout Minnesota.

Citizens and local government officials are encouraged to inspect elm and oak trees for signs of unusual wilting and discoloration that can indicate presence of disease.

Samples should be cut from actively or recently wilted branches, not from dead and dry branches. Submit four or five branch sections at least one quarter inch in diameter up to one half inch, and six to eight inches long, from each tree showing stress symptoms. Wrap the samples, separately tied for each tree, in a plastic bag or wrap to preserve freshness, attach your name, address and telephone number, and send to: Plant Industry Lab, Minnesota Department of Agriculture, 90 West Plato Boulevard, St. Paul, Minnesota 55107.

Individuals submitting samples for more than one tree should separate and code each sample as to the tree location.

Laboratory testing and analysis results take about ten days for elm samples, two weeks for samples from stressed oak trees.

Questions regarding stress problems on other types of trees and shrubs may be addressed to the University of Minnesota, Plant Disease Clinic, 1519 Gortner Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota 55108. Modest fees are charged for information and testing service by this University facility.

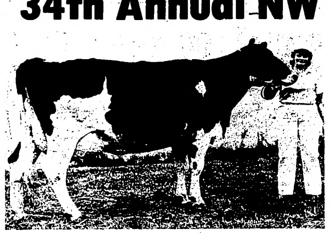
34th Annual NW Dairy Day Goes Under Cover



GRAND SHOW CHAMPION at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday was this six-year-old registered Holstein shown by 15-year-old Loretta Visser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Visser of Gary. The cow, which also won the Holstein breed championship a year ago, was judged the Holstein breed champion this year, top purebred animal of the dairy show and overall show champion. It also anchored Loretta's championship three-animal individual herd entry.

JUNIOR SHOWMANSHIP title at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday was won by 13-year-old Shannon Carlson of Roseau, showing at his fourth dairy day. The two-year-old grade Ayrshire earned him his first championship in the four years of showing.

Influenced by threatening weather early Tuesday morning, Northwest Dairy Improvement association officials decided to make the 34th annual Northwest Dairy day an under cover affair. Activities were moved from the scheduled downtown location to the curling club building and sheep and poultry barn at the Pennington county fairgrounds.

The change in location didn't make any difference to Loretta Visser of Gary who took top honors at the dairy cattle show, or to Rick Millner and Shannon Carlson of Roseau who won senior and junior showmanship honors. Dairy day magic worked as rain held off until about 6 p.m.

Northwest Dairy Princess competition went as scheduled at the Best Western Inn with coronation held at the city auditorium. Gaining the crown to succeed Heidi Neumann of Ada was Lori Ann Olson of Fertile, a 19-year-old blue-eyed blonde. Assisting in the coronation program, emceed by Duane Walton, princess contest chairman, was Janet Forner of Chaska, Minnesota's Princess Kay of the Milky Way.

Lori Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Olson who milk 30 to 35 head of grade Holstein cattle on their farm six miles east of Fertile. She is five feet, seven inches tall and played forward on the 1982 Region 8A champion girls basketball team at Fertile which participated in the state high school tournament. A sophomore this fall at Moorhead state university, she has two older sisters, Mary, 23 and Kristi, 21, a younger sister Rachel, 14, and a brother Andrew, 11.

First runner-up in the princess contest was Sue Koch, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Koch of Puposky in Beltrami county. A 1982 graduate of Bemidji high school, she is five feet, eight inches tall, has brown hair and hazel eyes, and is a secretarial student at the Bemidji area vocational-technical institute.

Second runner-up was Brenda Miller, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Miller of Fosston. She is five feet, six inches tall, has red hair and blue eyes and is a 1982 graduate of Fosston high school. She will be studying business administration this fall at Bethany Lutheran college in Mankato.

Selected as Miss Congeniality was Cindy Brooks of Gonvick, voted by the 24 princess candidates as the contestant they most enjoyed meeting during the day. Special recognition was given to Stephanie Dickey of Leonard who was cited by the judges for honorable mention as being very close in the point system to second runner-up Brenda Miller.

Five of the 1982 dairy show breed champions repeated their performances in 1983. Only in the Ayrshire breed, which last year produced the overall show champion, was there a change in the top placing. This year Dale Rupprecht of Thief River Falls showed his five-year-old purebred cow to the Ayrshire breed championship and overall reserve champion purebred of the show. Dale, 18, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Rupprecht.

Loretta Visser, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Visser of Gary, repeated as Holstein breed champion with a six-year-old purebred which was also her 1982 entry. This year the cow was also judged champion purebred of the show and overall show champion. It also was one of three entries by Loretta which earned her the individual herd championship as well.

As winner of the grand champion purebred title, Loretta earns an expense-paid trip to the World Dairy Expo at Madison, WI, in October. And as the overall points champion of the show she was presented with the Stuart McLeod memorial award. McLeod was a founder and first president of Northwest Dairy day and served in that office over a quarter of a century.

Champion grade animal of the show was a two-year-old entered by Darin Huot, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald (Bud) Huot of Red Lake Falls. His animal was the champion grade Holstein, and was placed by the judges as reserve champion of the show overall.

As winner of the grade championship, Darin will receive a purebred dairy calf at the 35th annual Northwest Dairy day in 1984. Darin was in his fourth year of showing at Dairy day this year and had won no previous championships. Tim Beyer of Red Lake Falls received the purebred calf this year.

Huot's grand champion grade was also part of the champion county herd of five animals entered by Red Lake county. County herd is comprised of five animals entered by five different exhibitors. Others having their cattle in the top county herd were Lori Beyer, Robin Beyer, Denise Huot and Randy Huot. Marshall county herd was reserve champion.

Best uddered cow of the show was two-year-old purebred shown by Kimberly Carlson, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mylo Carlson of Angus. It was also named reserve champion in the Holstein breed competition. Champion junior award was won by Scott Muzzy, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Muzzy of Thief River Falls, who showed a registered Holstein yearling. Junior division entries included calves, junior yearlings and yearlings of all breeds.

Breed champions and reserves included the following:

Holstein — Loretta Visser, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Visser of Gary, champion; Kim Carlson, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mylo Carlson of Angus, reserve;

Brown Swiss — Joan Johnson, 13, daughter of Mr.

LORI ANN OLSON, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Olson of rural Fertile, won the crown of 1983 Northwest Dairy Princess at competition held Tuesday in Thief River Falls. First runner-up was Sue Koch (right), 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Koch of Puposky, and second runner-up was Brenda Miller, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Miller of Fosston. Lori, who was crowned by 1982 Northwest Dairy Princess Heidi Neumann of Ada, will represent Region I of the Minnesota American Dairy association at the Princess Kay of the Milky Way competition during the Minnesota state fair in St. Paul.

SENIOR SHOWMANSHIP title Tuesday at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls was won by Rick Millner, 18, of Roseau. Rick demonstrated showmanship to open the show, substituting for Rhonda Visser of Gary who could not attend, then improved on his 1982 runner-up performance by winning the senior event this year. His cow is a three-year-old purebred Holstein.

Council Approves Lower Valuations

Thief River Falls city council approved a recommendation to lower the valuation on the former Arctic Enterprises property from $2,283,200 to $1,600,000 for purposes of tax assessments due in 1984. That action was taken at their meeting held Monday evening in council chambers at city auditorium.

According to Mayor Bob Carlson, he had advised Walter Mahanes, president of Minstar Inc. (owner of the property), of the reduction which was suggested by County Assessor Gerard DeHaan. Mahanes reportedly replied that the offer was "not acceptable under any circumstances." Although that valuation would lower the taxes on the property to approximately $70,000 as compared to approximately $105,000 due this year, Mahanes reportedly said that the company would not accept any valuation which would require them to pay more than $25,000 in 1984.

Carlson noted that he had also spoken to representatives of the school board, who had expressed concern over the matter, since Minstar has reportedly threatened not to pay the taxes due this year unless the $25,000 figure was met. Failure to pay those taxes could result in shortfalls of approximately $51,000 due to the school district, $28,000 due to the city and $28,000 due to the county. Most of that money has already been budgeted for.

Asking price for the property has reportedly dropped from 4.5 million to $2 million since Arctic Enterprises went out of business. DeHaan stated that he felt some reduction in valuation was in order since the property had been vacant for about two years, but noted that there was no way he could recommend lowering it to the level requested by Minstar.

Although he expressed concern that they consider the fact that Arctco Inc. is currently renting approximately a third of the enclosed portion of the property, with a $61,000 lease which expires in December, Carlson stated that he felt DeHaan had made a fair assessment.

On a roll call vote to approve the reduction to $1,600,000, Aldermen Ambrose Wysoski and Clayton Restad voted against allowing the reduction; Aldermen Ken Murphy and Milan Borsheim and Mayor Carlson voted to approve it; and Aldermen Don Goodrich and James Womack abstained since they own stock in Minstar. Alderman Bill Penning was absent (for the fourth meeting in a row,

Inter-City Gas Files For Rate Increase

Inter-City gas corporation has filed an application for an increase in rates with the Minnesota public utilities commission on Friday, June 10.

Inter-City if requesting an increase in revenue of approximately $3.25 million or 6.4 per cent. However, under the rules established by the commission, Inter-City is required to place interim rates into effect which, if authorized, will produce an increase in revenue of approximately $2.7 million or 5.4 per cent. The interim rates if authorized are scheduled to go into effect August 9, subject to refund, if disallowed later and will be the subject of intensive review by the commission prior to permanent rates being established and approved.

These interim rates would increase the average residential customer's annual gas bill by $69.44 or 9.4 per cent.

Reason for an increase at this time is the continued loss of large volume industrial sales which have subsidized the other classes of service in the past, and to some extent inflation.

Inter-City serves 20,000 customers in 44 communities in northern Minnesota and has regional headquarters in Cloquet with district offices in Cloquet, Chisholm, International Falls, Thief River Falls and Wadena.

Negotiations Session Wed.

Next negotiations session between the Thief River Falls board of education and the Thief River Falls Education association has been scheduled for Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Lincoln high school library, according to Robert Block, superintendent of schools.

Legion and VFW color guards presented the present flag. David Carlson, (at podium) Americanism chairman and lecturing knight for the Elks lodge, delivered an address on patriotism.

Circus has been chosen as the theme this year with activities planned accordingly. A large number of artists have been invited to display and sell their art. Some of the art work to be exhibited includes woodworking, wildlife watercolors, oil painting, tole painting, woodcarving, needle art work, soft sculpture and many other forms of art. Northland community college will have a booth featuring various types of art.

To start off the day a Kiddie Parade is planned for 10 a.m. Children from preschool age to the fifth grade are urged to take part. Three prizes of $10, $5 and $2 will be given. Participants are asked to use the circus theme for their costumes and entries. King And Queen Event, Parade At St. Hilaire

St. Hilaire centennial celebration is only weeks away and various committees in the community are putting final touches on plans for the 100-year observance. Two of the events scheduled include the centennial parade at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 3, and a senior citizen king and queen contest.

Allan and Karen Young are chairmen of the parade committee and note that they would like to have more marching bands for the parade. Music groups entered so far include only the Thief River Falls senior citizen kitchen band and the Kem Temple Shriners band. Band or other entries can contact the Youngs at 964-5423.

Parade entries include antique buggies restored by Melvin Annabuck and a circus wagon owned by Bob Baune. Julie Frazer and Sheri Boman have been working on a float since last fall, constructing replicas of the business places in St. Hilaire and a horse-drawn hay baler will be a parade entry as well as give demonstrations following the parade.

Grand Forks air force base K-9 corps will give a demonstration following the parade and will also be a parade entry. A number of service clubs and the 40 et 8 Voiture have also entered floats and the St. Hilaire community club is making a small replica of the wannigan which served as a floating kitchen for logging crews on the river during St. Hilaire's early history.

Also scheduled to be in the parade are St. Hilaire's oldest couple, Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Johnson, who have been married 65 years; the senior citizen king and queen to be elected in a public contest; Sen. LeRoy Stumpf of Plummer and Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls.

A fun and creative activity has been planned for students — chalk drawing on the street. Each child or group will be assigned a specific area in which to create a picture or design. There are three age categories with a prize of $10 for each. The three divisions are (1) kindergarten, first and second grade; (2) third, fourth and fifth grades; and (3) sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Contact Nancy Fellman at 681-4056 to reserve a space. Only if there are additional spaces available on June 23 will children be able to take part if they did not reserve a spot.

Entertainment has been scheduled throughout the day. The time schedule for persons appearing will be in the June 20 edition of the Times. Just a few persons who will be appearing are Larry Golightly on guitar, Nancy Klopp, woodwind quintet, Kirsten Olson on piano and Mary Rogalla, Tony Ricci and Shawn Fremstad in a guitar group. A number of other persons and groups are scheduled to appear.

All events during the day will be on the same location downtown. In the event of rain activities will be moved into the city auditorium. The Monday, June 20, Times will have the schedule in full of the day's events.

Middle River Gets Approval For Park Funds

Plans to allocate $32,500 in federal funds to the city of Middle River for improvements to Middle River park have been approved by the land and recreation committee of the legislative commission on Minnesota Resources.

Assuming federal approval, the project will be funded as part of the federal jobs program, according to state Sen. LeRoy Stumpf.

The federal money should be available in June, Stumpf said. The city of Middle River will be asked to contribute an additional $32,500.

The $65,000 project will pay for development of a tennis court, hockey and skating rink, picnic area and lighting system, as well as site improvements and design and engineering work.

"I am very pleased that the commission has recommended awarding money for this project," Stumpf said. "The residents of Middle River and the surrounding area will benefit for many years to come from the new facilities that will be constructed in the park."

Grain Growth Retarded By Cool Weather

Cool temperatures continued to be the dominant factor in the statewide crops situation, according to the Minnesota agricultural statistics service. Days were not warming up to seasonal normals, while nights were very cool. Lack of heat input to the soil is holding back emergence and growth of row crops almost everywhere.

On the other hand, the coolness is saving some small grains from drought damage in the extreme west central area, which still has received very little spring moisture. Farmers in that area are hoping for rain to soften the lumpy topsoil before they resume planting their remaining acreage of row crops.

Wet spots were finally drying up in the southwest and south central districts, where spring fieldwork delays had been the most severe. Showers during the week made fieldwork difficult in the southeast district. Moderate rains were welcomed in parts of east central, central and west central districts where topsoil moisture had been getting short. Topsoil moisture is rated nine per cent very short, 18 per cent short, 61 per cent adequate and 12 per cent surplus. An average of five days were suitable for fieldwork during the week ending June 6.

Growth of pasture and hay is still lagging. Some damage from frost in north central and from hail in south central will cause localized setbacks in first-crop alfalfa. Grazing of pastures has begun in most areas. Pasture condition is rated eight per cent poor, 38 per cent fair, 49 per cent good and five per cent excellent.

Spring wheat, oats and barley are all 99 per cent seeded, slightly ahead of five-year averages. An estimated 91 per cent of spring wheat has emerged, compared with 83 per cent a year ago and 89 per cent for the 5-year average. Emergence of oats at 92 per cent compares with 93 per cent for both 1982 and the five-year average. Barley is 87 per cent emerged versus 79 per cent last year and the five-year average of 86 per cent. Spring wheat and oats are both seven per cent jointing, which compares with a five-year average of 15 per cent for both crops. Barley is six per cent jointing versus 14 per cent for the five-year average. Winter wheat and rye condition is rated 37 per cent poor to fair and 63 per cent good to excellent.

Planting of this year's field corn crop is nearing completion, with 94 per cent planted. This compares with 91 per cent last year at this time and 95 per cent for the five-year average. Field corn is 64 per cent emerged, behind both 1982 and five-year average figures of 73 per cent and 81 per cent respectively. An estimated 79 per cent of soybeans are planted, versus 65 per cent a year ago and 83 per cent for the five-year average. Soybeans are 19 per cent emerged, compared with last year's 31 per cent and the five-year average of 54 per cent. Sunflowers are 81 per cent planted, versus 69 per cent a year ago and 83 per cent for the five-year average.

Potato planting progressed at a normal pace with 86 per cent planted, close to the five-year average of 85 per cent. Flax is 72 per cent planted, compared with the five-year average of 79 per cent. Dry edible beans are 85 per cent planted versus 73 per cent a year ago. Sweet corn and green peas for processing are 74 per cent and 93 per cent planted, which compares with five-year averages of 75 per cent for sweet corn and 93 per cent for peas.

Fire Marshal Warns About Heat Detectors

Minnesota state fire marshal Wes Werner of the Minnesota department of public safety has underscored the state's support of a recent federal trade commission (FTC) contention that Vanguard heat detectors do not provide sufficient warning for residential fires.

Manufactured by Figgie international, Inc., Richmond, VA, the detectors do now allow occupants enough time to escape safely, according to Werner.

Werner noted that the FTC charged in a complaint that the company's claim of sufficient warning "is deceptive and in nearly all residential fires, life-endangering conditions will occur prior to the activation of a respondent's heat detectors."

FTC adds that the company's contention that its fire alarm systems combining heat detectors and smoke detectors provide significantly greater fire warning protection is also deceptive.

Typical Figgie residential fire alarm system, sold under the Vanguard trade names, consists of four to five heat detectors for every smoke detector, costing between $600 and $1,000.

If the FTC charges are upheld, the government could seek to require Figgie to pay consumer refunds.

Copies of the FTC complaint and notice of contemplated relief are available from the FTC's Public Reference Branch, Room 130, 6th Street and Pennsylvania Ave. NW, Washington D.C. 20580.

Humane Society Installs Toll Free Number

Minnesota residents can now call the Minnesota humane soceity (MHS) toll-free.

One of the first changes Barbara Raye made as executive director of the MHS was to link the office with a Watts line for in-state calls. "Our primary responsibilities are to out-state residents," Raye said, "We need to be accessible to them. The toll-free number will begin to make it possible for us to stay in contact with Minnesota citizens as well as help them to keep us informed of what their needs are."

Until now, citizens could call the MHS and be called back by office staff. "Not surprisingly, most calls came from the 7-county metro area where people could contact us free of charge", Raye said.

Residents were encouraged to use the number to report animal abuse, request educational materials or information, and to receive help in establishing County societies. The number is 1-800-652-9747.

"Callers will reach an operator and should request the MHS or indicate the purpose of their call. The operator will then transfer the call directly to our office", Raye explained. "We are continuing to take steps to make the Minnesota humane society more responsive but this seems like the least we could do and is a good first step in meeting our obligations as a state-wide agency."

People can also reach the society directly at 296-3613 or write to the Minnesota Humane Society at 529 Jackson Street, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101. Office hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Support Asked For TRF Senior Center

Senior citizens are a minority group nearly everywhere in the world. However, 1980 census data indicates that people age 65 and older make up 17.6 per cent of the population of Thief River Falls. A minority of over 1600 people cannot be ignored.

While many of this city's senior citizens are retired from their jobs and live in nursing homes, special apartments and congregate housing facilities, in no way can they be classified as having retired from the community. Many senior citizens remain active in community affairs as members of fraternal and service organizations, businessmen, volunteers, property owners, taxpayers and elected officials.

While senior citizens may resist generalizations, spokesmen for a group who hope to establish a senior citizen service center in this city, note that many of them do share common interests and needs. In an attempt to meet those needs, they have been conducting meetings with various groups of senior citizens in the community, and have also begun to take their cause before various service organizations.

Ambrose Wysoski and Morris Howick, two of the proponents of the idea, both say that a selling job is needed to garner public support which will be required to finance the project. However, both have also indicated that they are presently more interested in gathering ideas on how the center can best serve the needs of the community. Howick notes that although the idea has drawn a "tremendous response of support" from nearly every group of senior citizens which has been approached, they would now like to get more of the general public involved in the discussion as they attempt to broaden their base of support.

As president of the Pennington county council on aging, Howick has been one of the prime movers as that group has worked first to determine the need for such a center, second to determine the feasibility of various locations, and third to actually muster the kind of financial support necessary to construct the facility. He asks that people who would like to provide input on the proposed project contact one of the officers of the aging council or a member of the committee seeking a site for the center.

Other officers of the council on aging include Merle Lindberg, vice president; Blanche Larson, secretary; and Gerhard Quam, treasurer. Serving on the committee to actively seek a site for the center are Lindberg, Larson, Harry Simons, Val Chommie and Hannah Kisch.

Howick says there are a number of reasons why a central senior citizens center is needed in Thief River Falls. He notes that there is presently no designated place where they can get together as a group, whether for just a cup of coffee or other activities. Although many of the smaller communities in the surrounding area have senior citizen centers, Thief River Falls does not, "even though it is known as the shopping center of the Northwest." Howick says that the council on aging has received numerous complaints from older people in the outlying area who said they had "no place to go" while their families shopped in Thief River Falls.

In addition to serving as a meeting place, some of the other activities which have been suggested for the center include workshop areas where senior citizens could work on crafts. Howick noted that one of the problems faced by many senior citizens is that their small homes lack space necessary to keep up such hobbies as woodworking or quilt tying. Although craft facilities are available through the "55 Club" near Valley Home, and meeting rooms exist in most of the senior citizen apartment complexes, Howick notes that space is limited usually to just the residents and a few guests.

Possibility of using the facility for preparation and serving of the senior meals program is also a consideration, since use of professional personnel at the hospital does increase costs of the program somewhat. Use of volunteer help and senior citizens in the "Green Thumb" program could reduce costs of maintenance and preparation.

Howick noted that some income could be provided to the center by renting space for the offices of the Northwest Senior Federation, a lobbying group for rights of senior citizens which is currently located at 202 East Second Street. The senior citizen craft shop presently in city auditorium would also provide income. Cost of utilities for senior citizen centers is usually assumed by city government, according to Wysoski.

Wysoski, who is chairman of the Region 1 advisory committee on aging for the Northwest regional development commission, notes that the center would be intended for use by more than just the senior citizens of Thief River Falls or even Pennington county. In fact, he notes that because federal money would likely be involved in outfitting the center, its use could not be limited to senior citizens only, and it would be available as a community center. He notes that centers which have been established in other cities have become "centers of activity for the entire community."

Although Thief River Falls already has many public buildings and facilities suitable for a variety of activities, both men note that none are really suitable for use as a senior citizen center. In fact, the committee seeking a site for the center has looked at over half a dozen existing buildings, both public and private, as well as several available construction sites in the downtown area. Howick notes that most of the existing buildings were eliminated either due to problems involved in adapting them to use as a senior citizen center or because of high costs of purchase and renovation. However, he notes that they are still considering a couple of existing buildings as well as several construction sites.

Since the center is intended for use by more than just the senior citizens of Thief River Falls, Howick notes that they would like to have it located near the downtown area so that shoppers could stop in without having to walk long distances or be dropped off by their families. Because they would intend to locate the craft shop presently operating in city auditorium in the new center, a downtown location would be doubly desirable, to encourage shoppers to come in and examine the merchandise.

One of the biggest problems involved in converting existing buildings is making them accessible to wheelchairs, an absolute necessity since many senior citizens have limited mobility. Howick noted that an estimate of $90,000 had been given as the cost of installing an elevator system in the old Carnegie Library building. City auditorium, where the committee on aging presently meets, would require installation of three wheelchair lifts to make the basement accessible. Most other buildings would require installation of wider doors and special bathroom facilities. Inefficient heating systems are also a major problem in many older buildings.

Estimated space needed for the center is between 5,000 and 6,000 square feet. Because making a decision on the optional locations being considered is still dependent on negotiating the lowest cost, Howick would prefer that the sites under consideration not be publicised until they have made a choice.

Wysoski estimated that construction of a new building would cost $240,000 to $300,000. Although bids would have to be taken for new construction, (if that was selected as the best alternative) he noted that much of the interior finishing work could be done by volunteer labor, which he says they have been promised a lot of. Various fraternal groups and individuals have pledged both monetary and physical support for the project.

One of the biggest obstacles which the group must face in their efforts to get the project underway is raising funds for the initial purchase or construction of a building. Wysoski says that once they have a building, he feels confident that grant money will be available to outfit it with necessary equipment. The Minnesota board on aging, which he chairs, has obtained funding amounting to over $321,000 for 25 senior citizen centers established since 1978, in a seven county area which includes Norman, Polk, Red Lake, Pennington, Roseau, Marshall and Kittson counties. In addition, other grants have been applied for through private and corporate foundations.

One problem faced by the group is that in order to be eligible for most of the grant money, they must first be in possession of a building. Howick notes however, that senior citizens are not just sitting back waiting for something to happen. They have established a fund dedicated to obtaining senior citizen service center, and have been raising money through sales of crafts, baked goods, and solicitation of individual donations.

Although the amount in that fund is claimed to be "substantial," it is not in the $250,000 range, and supporters of the center intend to petition the city to bond for that amount. This would require that the matter be put to a referendum vote on the ballot this fall, one of the main reasons why they want the public to be aware of the issue before they enter the polls. They feel that the more informed the public is, the better the chance they will approve a bond issue.

Howick comments that the city has funded "all kinds of facilities for young people," noting the large variety of sports and recreation areas. "We need to have some recreation areas for the older people too," he added. Wysoski noted that today's senior citizens paid for many of the present recreational facilities with their taxes years ago. "I don't think it hurts to remind people that they may be senior citizens too, someday," he added.

MN Aviation Gas Excise Tax Reduced

State collection of excise tax on aviation gasoline will be reduced from 16 cents to five cents a gallon effective July 1, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) aeronautics division announced.

At the request of the Minnesota aviation trades association, Mn-DOT and the Minnesota department of revenue, the 1983 Minnesota Legislature enacted the tax reduction, said Richard B. Keinz, assistant commissioner, Mn-DOT aeronautics division.

"This legislation will reduce the overcollection of motor fuel excise taxes assessed on aviation gasoline. This overpayment has become more significant in recent years as the gap between motor fuel tax and the tax on aviation gasoline widened," he explained. The excise tax reduction of 11 cents a gallon should be reflected at aviation fuel pumps after July 1.

Users of aviation fuel are entitled to refund of excise taxes based on gallons used according to the following formula: all but five cents a gallon up to 50,000 gallons; all but two cents a gallon from above 50,000 to 150,000 gallons; all but one cent a gallon from above 150,000 to 200,000 gallons and all but one-half cent a gallon above 200,000 gallons.

The form, claim for refund-aviation fuel tax (PDR-1AV), may be obtained from the Petroleum Division, Minnesota Department of Revenue, Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155, phone (612) 296-4435.

School Board OKs Job Development

Thief River Falls board of education heard a presentation by Dave Strong and Roger Tunberg of the chamber of commerce job development committee Monday evening, then voted to authorize expenditure of $5,000 from the community education unappropriated fund balance to support the program presented. The community development committee has previously recommended to the board that such allocation be made.

Linda Hawks headed a group of concerned parents who attended to discuss concerns regarding head lice problems in the district, follow-up procedures being used, problems created by students being labeled or humiliated, and possibility of creating information clinic for parents on how to identify head lice and a parent volunteer group to aid with screening. The board indicated it will cooperate to help solve problems which may arise in the future.

Preliminary discussion was held on a proposed administrative organization which would create two assistant superintendent positions — one for K-12 and one for the AVTI. Further discussion will take place at the next meeting of the board June 27 at 8 p.m. in the board room. Percentage formula used to determine amount charged to the AVTI for administrative services was also explained.

Reinstatement of budget items included two custodial positions, assistant principal at Franklin and a combination farm operations and equipment mechanics program at the AVTI.

Approval was given to continuance of group health insurance with the ECSU unit group at a single rate of $57.35 and family rate of $141.17. Nieland Studios bid for school pictures for the 1983-84 school year was accepted, as were bids of $2,000 from the Williston school district for a 1974 model bus and $2,150 from the Lynch Immanual Lutheran church for the other 1974 model bus. No bids were received for KAVS engineering service and rebidding was authorized.

Following discussion of a number of changes in requirements regarding cooperation and planning between the AVTI and community college, the board suggested AVTI director Orley Gunderson, Supt. Robert Block and board member Arnt Aume attend a meeting on those changes July 6 in Moorhead.

Administration was directed to further investigate an option to purchase approximately 20 acres of land located north of the AVTI. It was noted that the Thief River Falls Jaycees had agreed to payment of $400 for use of the Lincoln school facilities for the Miss Thief River Falls pageant.

Figures prepared by the local school district auditors on comparative administrative costs per pupil unit were presented to the board. They showed Thief River Falls at $189.64, East Grand Forks at $205.25, Crookston at $170.40 and Park Rapids at $172.54.

Extra-curricular assignments included Tom Hunt as head coach of boys high school basketball, Tom Schafer as head coach of girls high school basketball, John Schmitz as head high school football coach, Russ Smith as athletic director, Wendell Grand as head high school hockey coach, Whitey Olson as head high school girls tennis coach, Helen Anderson as head high school volleyball coach, Tim Olson as head high school boys track coach and Tom Schafer as head high school girls track coach.

Assistant or lower grade level coaches include: Basketball — David L. Peterson, Alan Buhl, Howard Thorson and Diane Anderson; football — Tim Olson, Charlie Cornell, Tom Lawrence, Bob Forberg and Glen Peters; tennis — Jeanne Olson; volleyball — Jodi Bendickson; track — Lynn Dyer.

Approval was given to post the following positions created by reinstatement of programs: Two custodians, agriculture at Lincoln, science at Lincoln and Franklin, assistant principal at Franklin, farm equipment and farm operations and management at the AVTI and vocational agriculture coordinator at the AVTI.

Resignation of Nancy Shanahan as cosmetology instructor at the AVTI was accepted.

When business students at the University of Minnesota enroll in classes they are likely to find themselves studying the poet T.S. Eliot instead of working with a computer.

Students who earn a bachelor's degree from the school of management are now required to make liberal arts courses 50 per cent of their total program. The majority of their other coursework is still in business, but the change represents a major shift.

"We're not educating people just to fit a slot in a company," said Julie Carson, director of the undergraduate program. "We want them to fit into their community and the society in which they're living."

In the past students were allowed to choose about 22 per cent of their course work from any college, but most chose classes within the school of management. Two years ago that changed. Now they must take no more than 40 per cent of their courses there.

Shift toward more liberal arts in the curriculum reflects a renaissance of interest in the liberal arts nationally, Carson said. She believes top-level management has begun to shy away from specialization. An opinion survey that included responses from chief executive officers and recruiters in Twin Cities firms influenced the faculty's decision to emphasize the liberal arts.

"There are two things liberal arts classes offer in general: skills and a content that helps one form judgments," Carson said. "A history course is not only research, but provides perspectives to help one make decisions. It multiplies the aspects of any situation because you realize so much can be brought to any situation."

In order to graduate, the business students are now required to take 19 courses in the liberal arts. Only students who have attained standings as juniors are admitted to the program. After admission they must take two expository writing courses and two performance courses from the speech, rhetoric or theater arts departments.

Three courses in literature and artistic expression and three in international studies also are required. Typical courses might be "Survey of American Literature, 1900-1945, "in which students are likely to study the writing of Sinclair Lewis, including "Main Street," and "International Communication," a journalism course.

Students must also take a laboratory science course and another science course that promotes an understanding of how science improves one's standard of living.

"Platform Performance," offered through the theater arts department, has been one of the most popular courses students are now required to take. The course emphasizes an interpretation of literature and was developed specifically for the management students by Professor Virginia Fredricks. In this class students read aloud, individually and in groups.

"The main advantage of the course is that it enables students to broaden their literary background and come into contact with people who are creative artists," Fredricks said. "It requires a stretching of the imagination and students also become comfortable in working with other people and in releasing a range of emotional responses."

Carson believes the university may have the only business curriculum in the country in which students are required to take such a class. And she thinks it helps them on several levels. They must learn to analyze material and the way they deliver it, she said.

Fredricks said that student evaluations of the course have been overwhelmingly positive. One student wrote: "I'm more confident with myself in general and especially in speaking before people. I feel I learned some essential tools for conveying my thoughts and opinions to others. These are tools that will come in handy in my business career."

Another student said, "If you can acquire good communication skills, you've got it made. Remaining calm and being able to represent your views is essential in the business world and everywhere."

It is too early to tell what effect the curricular change will have on students' abilities to get jobs since this year's graduating class is composed of the first students to finish the new program, Carson said.

"It's difficult to say whether the curriculum has much to do with the job market," Carson said. "But the management training plus the liberal arts makes students leaders. The combination may not make a difference at the entry level, but it will 10 years down the line.

"One of the difficulties in justifying the liberal arts is that they're not immediately applicable," Carson continued, "but you see the result of the broad liberal arts when you get into discussions with people."

One Twin Cities executive who strongly favors the revision is Ron Hubbs. A member of the program's advisory board, Hubbs said he believes business students should have a grounding in the liberal arts because a manager learns early that he or she needs a broad perspective.

"You cannot examine problems looking down a tunnel," Hubbs said. "You have to become a generalist. Certainly, a liberal arts student or one who has been exposed to the liberal arts will have a much better understanding of these problems, which is necessary to carry out responsiblity."

Another advocate of the change is Chris Johnson, director of corporate relations, a Minneapolis company. A member of the business community for 10 years, Johnson said she thinks the benefits of the liberal arts come because of the development of problem-solving skills and of writing and communication skills.

"Increasingly in business we find that factors impacting on the company may change and the experience of having worked in different disciplines and being knowledgeable about different disciplines can help one respond to changing situations," Johnson said.

MISS CONGENIALITY at the Northwest Dairy Princess competition Tuesday in Thief River Falls was voted by the contestants themselves. Cindy Brooks of Goavick was the winner and is shown here with Heidi Neumann (left), Ada, 1982 Northwest Dairy Princess, and Janet Forner, Chaska, Princess Kay of the Milky Way.

SOMETHING SPECIAL was added to the Northwest Dairy Princess competition at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday. Judges determined that there was such close competition for the second runner-up position that they wanted to grant an honorable mention to the girl who just missed making it to the final three. Stephanie Dickey of Leonard received the honorable mention and is shown here with Heidi Neumann of Ada (left), 1982 Northwest Dairy Princess, and Janet Forner, Princess Kay of the Milky Way.

Natural Yards Gain Favor With Many Americans

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

Directly across the street from the formal, meticulously groomed lawn of the French Ambassador's residence in Washington, D.C., is a corner yard of quite a different color. During the summer, random clumps of blazing-yellow black-eyed Susans shower the neighborhood with color; ornamental grasses, some as tall as a man, billow in the breeze, and dozens of day lilies punctuate the informal scene.

For American homeowners accustomed to neat, green lawns, trim hedges and perhaps a white picket fence around it all, such exuberant perennial plantings may seem a bit scraggly, if not hopelessly chaotic. Yet free-spirited, no-mow landscapes are winning converts across America, among them the completely committed who actually have dug up their lawns to make room for a serendipitous pastiche of plants and flowers. Once the eye adjusts to the new textures and arrangements, the rewards are plentiful in terms of maintenance and enjoyment.

Considering today's hectic schedules and expensive labor costs, the so-called naturalistic garden gives a welcome break from the repetitive cycles of mowing, fertilizing, watering and worrying. "I don't spend more than an hour a month maintaining my own (townhouse) garden," says landscape architect James van Sweden, nationally known for his work in this style. "The big maintenance push is in late winter — cutting all the grasses down, mulching and generally cleaning up. This takes about five or six hours but that's all it takes."

Van Sweden also reports that his gardens, characterized by cascading plants of varied textures and heights, can withstand a certain amount of "benign neglect." Divisions between plantings are allowed to shift as one species or another dominates an area. This creates designs that are ever changing in contrast to traditional landscapes that to van Sweden are "boring in their sameness from one season to the next."

Alternative landscape, can be an effective antidote to what may have become an insidious, sometimes obsessive lawn-care habit, one offering owners little pleasure with the passing years. Flowering perennials and ornamental grasses, integrated with evergreens, spring bulbs and budding annuals, not only broaden the range of attractions in both large and small gardens; they also provide unexpected beauty year round.

"Anyone can create a spring garden," van Sweden asserts. "That doesn't take much skill." The challenge, one that pays dividends, he says, is to choose "all-season" plantings so that what is green and lush in summer will become golden and dramatically spare in winter. The colorful, fuzzy plumes of flowing fountain grass, for example, arch to a height of three feet or so in late summer; then, in winter, the straw-colored leaves, when left intact, contrast handsomely against the snow. If thought out carefully, says van Sweden, the winter garden "will look like a large arrangement of dried flowers."

Naturalistic gardening, one definition goes, assimilates the horticulture of the wild and interprets it for the modern landscape. Wild shrubs, rock outcroppings and other environmental features that once would have been removed or leveled to create an orderly landscape are now valued for the surprise and spontaneity they give residential settings. This, an advocate suggests, helps achieve the true purpose of outdoor space, that of soothing and refreshing the spirit. Though natural landscaping works best on relatively small properties — the idea is especially popular with townhouse owners — the basic principles can be applied in selected areas of larger landscapes.

The shift away from predictable formalism, where even the slightest plant imperfection can produce visual blight, is rooted in a movement begun two centuries ago when the English landscaper, Capability Brown, reacted to the excruciatingly formal gardens of his time and planted the idea of natural landscaping featuring picturesque forests and pastoral scenes on large country estates. Story of modern gardening from that time on has been the story of greater and interest in plants and more variety, with correspondingly less emphasis on the design of the garden, Hugh Johnson explains in The Principles of Gardening.

Today's enthusiasm for outdoor living, concern for energy conservation, interest in uncommon plants and need for privacy and respite from the stress of daily life have made the no-lawn landscape a natural for many Americans. Alongside these considerations, many people today seem to have a need for some "punch and drama" in their gardens, suggests van Sweden, who recently discussed his garden concepts at a Smithsonian resident associate program. "Mystery," he says, "is also an important consideration. In the formal garden, everything is too clear."

Attraction of unusual garden plants harks back to the 19th century when the English horticulturist, Gertrude Jekyll, perfected the perennial border, a massive flower bed filled with a careful grading of heights and colors. One visitor to Jekyll's garden recalled that it was "like an entry into a new world, or walking through a static rainbow."

But by the first decade of the 20th century, enthusiasm for the perennial border had wilted; the "static rainbow," Johnson points out, "needed not only a consummate artist to design it but endless painstaking craftsmanship to keep it going." But worst of all, out of season there was noting to see but bare earth.

Now, perennials are back in vogue — multi-hued day lilies, showy delphiniums, dahlias, daisies and many more. Differing from Jekyll's day, the perennials are part of a mixed system of planting where border specimens take their place alongside shrubs, trees, annuals and early-blooming bulbs. The advantages? Less work and a far longer season of flowers, epitomized by the day lilies, perhaps the ultimate easy care perennial. Depending on the variety, they can bloom from mid-spring through early fall.

For many natural garden converts, the stars of the seasonal show are the ornamental grasses, some of dwarf dimension, others rising to 14 feet in a season. Related to such staples as wheat, rice, oats and corn, the decorative grasses generally prefer sunny climates. They look best as individual plants or in small clumps and are useful as neutral coloring or soft texture beside plants of strong color or severe angularity.

Kathy Meehan, a consultant to the Smithsonian's office of horticulture, recommends that before planting such grasses as the eye-catching plume or the stately pampas, a green thumb would be wise to determine how tall they grow and whether they will need support. "Some are simply gigantic, take a lot of room and are overpowering," she cautions. "You should decide whether you want that."

"We select plants that can be allowed to grow to whatever size they would naturally," van Sweden says, "rather than plan something the owners would continually have to hack away at to keep in scale." Compact plants, for example, are planted next to the house, so that pruning in front of windows is never necessary. Larger varieties are positioned away from the house to provide privacy from the street and neighbors.

As welcome as the ornamentals and their pals the perennials may be in the alternative landscape, there comes a time when something is needed to integrate and unify the garden — perhaps ivy, maybe ferns, periwinkle, hosta or juniper. Even a strip of grass might do to tie things together.

Seldom taking center stage, ground covers, as they are known, provide back-up support. "Ground covers are good connectors," Arlington, Va., landscape architect Sunny Scully says. "If you have one of everything with no connections, it becomes confusing."

Widely used in the West as lawn alternatives, ground covers and color and texture to a landscape, and they thrive where grasses will not — on steep slopes, in dense shade or dry, poor soil — all the while playing a low-profile, low-maintenance garden role. Used in combination — glossy ivy with gray-blue juniper is one possibility — ground covers add swaths of serenity to a landscape. They also integrate well with wood, brick, stone and paved paths and drives and visually link randomly planted spring bulbs.

While ivy is popular because of its fast growth, hardiness and adaptability, Scully recommends that homeowners first think their property's characteristics before choosing specific ground covers. The prickly yucca is a plant "I would never have thought of treating as a ground cover," she says, " but if you have a place where dogs or people cut across your property, yucca is the trick."

After everying is planted in the natural garden, landscape designers advise that the new convert not worry about mistakes. The garden, unlike the patio, is not set in concrete.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The world has known some great economists: Adam Smith, David Ricardo and our own Milton Friedman. However, one man has demonstrated an even keener understanding of the contrast between capitalism and socialism.

Oddly, he wasn't even an economist by profession. He was an architect.

Because this man, unlike many before him, understood what truly motivated men and women; because he understood the tremendous power and attraction of the free market, he built a monument to capitalism. He built the monument in 1961 and it stands today as mute testimony to the human spirit and its desire to be free.

This "monument" is in Europe. It is a thousand miles long and a hundred yards wide. It has moving parts and a single purpose: It kills people.

I speak, of course, of the Berlin Wall. It is actually two walls. One, a hundred-mile barrier of concrete, barbed wire and mines that surrounds West Berlin. The second, with 45,000 automatically triggered machine guns, runs the entire length of the 856-mile border between East and West Germany.

The architect of this wall understood the superiority of capitalism and freedom over socialism. He knew that given a choice, men and women would bring their families out of a socialist country and move toward capitalism. Without an economics degree from an Ivy League school, without charts or mathematical equations, or econometric models, those who built the wall knew that socialism was a failure and that people would not freely choose to live under it.

There was a great deal of evidence to support this view. Before the communists began to construct the wall on August 13, 1961, more than 3.5 million East Germans had already fled communism and its grim realities for freedom in the West — fully one-fifth of the present population of East Germany.

As each family crossed the border, the message came louder and more forcefully: Socialism is a failure. It offers no hope for the future.

And so, the human flotsam that rises to the top in the controlled society decided to stop the exodus. They built "The Wall." Rather than admit the failure of socialism, they would kill those who attempted to flee. The fear of death, they hoped, would keep the people docile.

Here they underestimated the desire of their people to be free. Since the construction of the wall, more than 185,000 East Germans have risked their lives to flee socialism. At least 178 have died in the attempt.

Some of the escapes have been spectacular. Two families built a hot air balloon and flew over the wall. This April, two men in their early 20s shot an arrow across the wall, and using fishing tackle, pulled across a wire cable and then slid down the cable to freedom.

Two weeks after this latest escape, I visited Berlin and saw the wall. As I scanned the guard towers, the remote controlled machine guns and mine fields, I wondered if anyone in East Germany shared the view of some American intellectuals that socialism is "just another economic system." If no one else, at least the border guards themselves must be committed to socialism.

No, not even the guards. I watched as the guards on the wall were actually locked into their guard posts. I learned that the guards, who work in groups of two and three, are rotated regularly so that personal friendships cannot develop — or escape plans hatched. Finally, I learned that of those who have jumped the wall since 1961, 2,746 have been soldiers and border guards. Prison guards escaping from their own prison.

The next time someone tries to tell you that socialism works, ask him why the Berlin Wall was built. The next time you hear someone spouting off about how centrally planned economies are consistent with individual liberty, ask him why Marietta Kirkowski, a 16-year old girl, was gunned down fleeing this utopia.

And ask him how committed he is to the virtues of a state run economy. Would he pull the trigger?

Reagan Should Veto Spending Bills

When Jimmy Carter was elected president in 1976, the federal budget was $364.5 billion. No small piece of change, that. But there was a problem: Candidate Carter had made a number of promises during the campaign, and when politicians promise, the taxpayers foot the bill.

As a result, during Carter's four years in the Oval Office, new spending programs were introduced and old ones expanded until the budget swelled to $576.7 billion. (An increase in the federal budget of $212 billion can keep a lot of promises, and Carter hoped, win friends and influence voters come election time.)

Carter forgot, however, that when you rob Peter to pay Paul, Peter can show a surprising lack of enthusiasm for the process. The American taxpayers, tired of writing checks to pay Carter's political IOUs, decided to do something about the problem. They sent Jimmy Carter back to Plains, Georgia and elected as president a man who promised to slow the inexorable growth of federal spending: Ronald Reagan.

The voters also took the opportunity presented by November 1980 to deliver pink slips to some of the biggest names in the liberal hall of fame: George McGovern, Birch Bayh and Frank Church. These big spenders were replaced by fearsome right wingers who some in the press suggested could cut billions out of school lunch programs without working up a sweat.

Thus, in January 1981, Ronald Reagan, a Republican Senate, a chastened House of Representatives, and the dreaded budget slasher himself, David Stockman, marched on Washington to do battle with the federal spending monster.

Those of us who watched the evening news and read the morning papers remember what a battle it was. Every night we heard about "draconian" budget cuts, agencies abolished, and bureaucrats RIF'ed (Washington speak for fired). The newspapers assured us that Stockman's budget ax was busy slicing and dicing everything and everyone in the federal government.

To hear Dan Rather tell the story, the way Reagan and Stockman were savaging the budget, the federal government would soon fit comfortably in the back of a station wagon.

As the dust clears and we survey the battlefield after his frontal assault on federal spending, just what is left of the $576.7 billion budget Jimmy Carter left us in 1980? Has it been cut in half? Is it now only $500 billion? Could it buy dinner for two at Burger King?

Sad to report, but the 1983 budget is estimated to weigh in at over $805 billion. An increase over Carter's last budget of $229 billion. Despite President Reagan's efforts, the federal budget has risen to where it now consumes one fourth of our nation's GNP. And the rate of increase is accelerating! Even adjusting for inflation, spending jumped 4.1 per cent in 1981, 4.6 per cent in 1982, and 7.1 per cent in 1983.

(Only one third of this increase is due to our nation's commitment to rebuilding our national defense. The bulk of the increase is Washington on its usual spending binge; tossing money at problems and political constituencies.)

The draconian budget cuts we heard so much about can now enter the ranks of American myths like the Easter bunny and the tooth fairy. Spending is up, not down.

In an effort to control this continued growth of federal spending, President Reagan has promised to begin vetoing budget busting spending bills. It is a new strategy for the White House and it could save the American taxpayers billions of dollars. The President deserves our support.

Roseau's Scott Harris is the only golfer to win back-to-back Father's Day golf titles here in the past dozen years. Winners over that time span include Skip Peterson, East Grand Forks, 1971; Lee Sorenson, Thief River Falls, 1972; Ed Demery, Bemidji, 1973; Dick Johnson, St. Cloud, 1974; Mike Lundbohn, Roseau, 1975; Scott Harris, Roseau, 1976 and 1977; Wade Hoppe, Thief River Falls, 1978; Tom Zieman, Thief River Falls, 1979; Jeff Jessen, Dickenson, N.D., 1980; Jay Moum, Thief River Falls, 1981; and Alex Easton, Thief River Falls, 1982.

Easton also added the Thief River Country Club men's city golf tournament title to his honors last summer.

Twenty-seven hole medal play championship flight Sunday will have an 8:15 a.m. registration and an 8:30 a.m. tee-off. There will be eight flights of nine-hole match play, with pre-registration required. Entry fee is $15.

Following Sunday, June 26, a shortstop tournament at the Thief River Country Club will be designed as a fund-raising event for the Lincoln high school boys and girls golf programs.

There will be an 8:15 a.m. registration and an 8:30 a.m. tee-off time that day for the 27-hole medal play championship flights for adults and juniors.

Proceeds will help cover the cost of maintaining the golf programs at Lincoln, which have been designated as community-funded activities and will not be operated in 1984 with School District 564 money as part of the district's budget-cutting policy.

Additional information can be gained by contacting the Pro Shop at the Thief River Country Club, telephone 681-2955.

Another Lincoln sports fund-raiser is a tennis tournament being planned here July 8-10.

Competition will be held in all age classes. A $10 entry fee, plus a new can of tennis balls, will qualify each player for both singles and doubles play. Entry deadline is July 5.

Juniors 14-under will begin play at 8 a.m. Friday, July 8; Juniors 16-18 will start play at 8 a.m. Saturday, July 9; and adults will begin play at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, July 9.

Staples, Grand Rapids Win Titles

Staples, a Thief River Falls football opponent in recent years, had an extraordinary successful athletic record during the 1982-83 school year, including seven regional titles, two state championships and a third place state tournament finish.

A long-time power in wrestling, the Region 6A champion Cardinals won their fourth straight Class A state title last winter. Staples also won Region 6A and state titles in boys cross country during the fall and the Cardinals' Region 6A champion boys basketball team was a third place finisher at the Class A state tournament.

Other regional titles came in girls cross country; girls tennis; boys track; girls track; and most recently baseball. Staples' girls were also expected to win at the regional level after being ranked No. 1 in the Associated Press Class A polls, but after winning a District 24 title, they fell in the Region 6A tournament.

Meanwhile, Grand Rapids kept another string alive with its seventh straight Region 7AA baseball title. With just one starter back from last year's state tournament team and only one senior in the line-up, the Indians still took a 15-5 record into this week's Class AA state tournament in St. Paul.

Six juniors, two sophomores and a senior led the Indians past International Falls 10-0, Chisago Lakes 11-0 and Two Harbors 8-2 in the two-day Region 7AA tournament, with junior Mark Sonaglia picking up all three pitching decisions, including a 15-strike-out performance in the finals when he also homered.

Prowlers' Hitting Didn't Net Anticipated Results In 1983

A .239 team batting average was the chief culprit this spring as the Lincoln high school baseball team completed a less-than-hoped-for 10-6 campaign in 1983.

"We didn't hit the ball," summed up Thief River Falls coach Charlie Cornell. "We didn't expect to hit .350, but even .280 would have been a big improvement."

Of the season-long regular starters, junior Brian (Scott) Johnston was the only consistently-strong hitter for the Prowlers with a .333 batting average and a team-leading 17 runs-batted-in. He also hit three home runs to lead the team in that category, as well.

Only other batter above the .300 mark was junior first baseman Gary Cornell who hit .308 on a 4-for-13 season in which he was sidelined most of the year after an early-season appendectomy.

Sophomore Ryan Drees had a perfect year at the plate — two hits in two late-season at-bats.

But otherwise, it was a bunch of .270's.

Johnston was also the busiest Thief River Falls pitcher with a 4-3 won-lost mark. In 46 one-third innings the righthander gave up 26 runs, 18 of them earned, 39 hits, 28 walks, had 48 strike-outs and carried a 2.72 earned-run-average.

Thief River Falls' pitching staff posted a fine 2.38 ERA, but still couldn't overcome the lack of hitting.

During the season the Prowlers beat Red Lake Falls 11-1, Roseau 4-1, Fergus Falls 9-1, Tri-County 9-3, Minot 11-1, Bagley 11-1, Ada 3-1 and Crookston twice 9-6, 12-0. Losses came at the hands of Fergus Falls 3-2 (12 innings), Moorhead twice 7-1, 11-5 and Bemidji twice 8-6, 11-4. Post-season play was short-lived for the Prowlers, who fell to host Crookston 4-0 in the opening round North Sub-Region 8AA tournament.

It wasn't as good as what Cornell had hoped for, but he wasn't knocking the players. "The kids weren't a disappointment; they had a good attitude and they worked hard," he explained. "But things just didn't work out. The results were disappointing. The (tournament) loss to Crookston was a real disappointment, and there were a couple of other (regular season) losses to Fergus Falls and Bemidji that were disappointment. We should have had a few more wins."

Legion Game Postponed By Rain; Class AA Opponents Visit TRF

Rain Tuesday washed out the scheduled Thief River Falls vs. Karlstad American Legion baseball game on the fairgrounds diamond.

Thief River Falls, 3-1 for the year, is scheduled to play a 7 p.m. Northwest League game at Warroad Thursday. Warroad pulled off a surprise Tuesday with a 3-0 victory over East Grand Forks.

After the Warroad game, the Thief River Falls ball club will have a string of five home games against Ninth District Class AA opponents, with Detroit Lakes here for a 12-noon doubleheader Saturday; Moorhead here for a 6 p.m. doubleheader Tuesday; and East Grand Forks in town for a 7 p.m. Northwest League game Thursday, June 23.

A new Class A-Class AA alignment is being used this summer in the Ninth District, with Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Crookston, Moorhead, Detroit Lakes and Fergus Falls using regular season results to determine their post-season Class AA Ninth District tournament seeding positions at Moorhead July 28-31.

Thief River Falls is 0-1 in both the Northwest League and the Ninth District Class AA standings following a 6-2 loss to Crookston.

Babe Ruth Teams Open '83 Seasons

Thief River Falls Babe Ruth A and B baseball teams for 14-15-year-olds opened their 1983 schedules this week under the direction of coach Mark Harder.

Hosting Red Lake Falls Monday, the Thief River Falls A team won the opener 3-1, but lost the second game 8-7.

Visiting Crookston Tuesday, the Thief River Falls B team swept the host Blues by lopsided 11-0 and 15-1 scores.

It'll be a busy week for all three Thief River Falls Babe Ruth teams. Today (Wednesday), the A team was scheduled to host Crookston and the B team was scheduled to visit Red Lake Falls. On Thursday, the A team will be at East Grand Forks and the Prep team for 13-year-olds will host Roseau. On Friday, the A team is at Roseau and the Prep team entertains Red Lake Falls. All scheduled encounters are doubleheaders starting at 12-noon.

In addition, the Prep team is scheduled to compete in an invitational tournament at Warroad Saturday and Sunday.

TRF A 3, RLF 1

A 1-1 third inning tie was broken Monday when Lee Hamre hit a two-out RBI double and Marty Levin followed with a run-scoring single as Thief River Falls edged Red Lake Falls 3-1 in the doubleheader opener.

Winning pitcher Dave Onkka surrendered just two hits, striking out four and walking two. The winners had four hits.

RLF 8, TRF A 7

Red Lake Falls held off a seventh inning Thief River Falls rally to win the second doubleheader 8-7, never doubleheader 8-7, never trailing after opening up a 2-0 first inning lead and building the margin to 5-0 in the top of the third.

Thief River Falls came back with three runs in the bottom of the third and stayed within 7-5 entering the seventh. Red Lake Falls made it 8-5 in the top of the inning before Jeff Anderson's two-out, two-run double cut it to a one-run affair in the last half inning. Anderson was 2-for-3 with two doubles and three RBI's at the plate.

Red Lake Falls finished with a 9-5 base hit edge. Losing pitcher was Mike Anderson, who was relieved by Jeff Anderson in the fourth.

TRF B 11, Crookston 0

Winning pitcher Kevin Nelson tossed a two-hit shutout as Thief River Falls posted a five-inning 11-0 win in the first half of Tuesday's doubleheader at Crookston.

Nelson struck out 10 and walked three. Thief River Falls combined six base hits with seven Crookston errors for the runs, scoring four times in both the third and fourth innings to break it open.

Quincy Lofberg was 3-for-4 with two RBI's and Eric Charlson was 2-for-3 with three RBI's for the winners.

TRF B 15, Crookston 1

A nine-run first inning led to an easy 15-1 second game Thief River Falls victory Tuesday and a twinbill sweep at Crookston.

Marty Enerson was 3-for-4 with two RBI's in the winner's nine-hit attack. Quincy Lofberg and Eric Charlson both had two hits in four at-bats.

Winning pitcher Marty Levin gave up just three hits, striking out eight and walking three. Crookston was charged with eight of the game's nine errors.

DNR NEWS

DNR Road Check

A road check of anglers returning from fishing trips resulted in 60 arrests near Deer River on Saturday, May 28, the Department of Natural Resources reports.

Conservation officers established the checking station at the junction of highways 2 and 46. Floyd Jaros, enforcement supervisor at Grand Rapids, said the road check was operated by 12 conservation officers assisted by the Minnesota Highway Patrol between the hours of 4:30 and 10 a.m.

He said that 90 per cent of the non-resident anglers were in violation of the rules relating to transportation of fish. Two arrests were made for what he described as "gross, flagrant" violations of the transportation rules and 58 arrests were made for the over-the-limit catches.

Officers confiscated 500 pounds of fish and those arrested paid out a total of $8,590 in bail. Jaros said the fish will be donated for a "Pike for Veterans" fish fry and to a senior citizens center.

Officials pointed out that non-residents who wish to carry their fish with them in a motor vehicle may either transport their fish undressed (which means uncleaned except that gills, scales and entrails may be removed), or they may transport them dressed (filleted).

However, except for bullheads, state law requires that before a non-resident can transport dressed or filleted fish, the fish must be packaged and the contents verified by a licensed Minnesota fish packer.

This regulation is found on page 16 of the 1983 fishing regulations, available at license dealers and DNR offices throughout the state.

A bill was introduced before the recent legislative session to remove the fish packers requirement pertaining to non-residents, but it failed to pass.

Trout Stamp Contest

Artists who plan on entering the competition to produce a design for the state's trout stamp must have their entry in to the Department of Natural Resources by noon on Nov. 2.

A $3 trout stamp is required of anglers ages 18 through 64 who fish in trout streams. Revenue from sale of the stamp is used for the development, restoration, maintenance and preservation of trout streams.

Entries in the contest will be accepted starting Oct. 3 and must be sent or brought to the DNR Bureau of Information, Box 46, Third Floor Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Design will be used for the 1984 trout stamp and must portray either a brook, brown or rainbow trout. The contest is open only to Minnesota residents.

Art work entered in the competition is returned to the artists following the contest, and the winner receives no payment from the state for use of the design.

Names of the artists are not known to the judges prior to the contest.

Officials said those entering the contest should first obtain a copy of the rules, available from the DNR Bureau of Information at the above address.

Lincoln Girls Set New Track Records In 1983

Lincoln high school girls track team set 12 new records this spring — seven outdoors and three new indoor marks, it was reported by coach Tom Schafer.

Outdoors, sophomore Stacie Kruta established new records in the hurdles, running a 16.59 in the 100-meter hurdles at Bemidji and running a 31.89 in the 200-meter hurdles at the Region 8AA meet in Alexandria.

Freshman Renae Berg set a new school standard in the 100-meter dash with a 13.18 effort at Roseau, and senior Lynne Culkins topped the record books with a 15-11 long jump in the North Sub-Region 8AAA meet at Moorhead State University.

Two foreign exchange students also left their marks with the Lincoln track program. Hildegunn Nyland of Norway posted a record 1:03.08 for the 400-meter run at Roseau, while Pia Tymberg of Sweden tied the school record 5-0 high jump set by Marchell Cuppett in 1978 by clearing that height at the University of Minnesota-Crookston this spring.

A new outdoor record was also set in the 1600-meter relay, when seventh grader Cindy Kruta, sophomore Georgia Howard, Stacie Kruta and Nyland ran a 4:15.33 at Roseau.

Thief River Falls made two indoor meet appearances at the Crookston Winter Shows Building this spring and set five new school records.

Stacie Kruta had two more records to her credit indoors, a 10.27 in the 60-meter hurdles and a 1:08.6 in the 400-meter dash.

Tymberg also owns the school indoor record in the high jump with a 4-10, while sophomore Tricia Armstrong reset the 60-meter dash record with an 8.29 effort.

A record 3:51.25 in the 1400-meter relay was turned in by junior Paula Wilkens, Howard, Nyland and Stacie Kruta.

Lincoln girls competed in ten regular season multiple-team meets this spring, plus the North Sub-Region 8AA event at Moorhead State, with qualifiers moving on to the Region 8AA meet at Alexandria.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimates there are 455,000 acres of wetland habitat lost each year in the United States to development of one kind or another. In sum, that is about the size of Boise, Idaho. Such losses affect not only waterfowl, but a host of other birds and mammals.

— Fast Pitch Softball —

Schmidts-Coke of Thief River Falls won third place honors in the Grand Forks invitational fast pitch softball tournament Sunday, and team manager Bill Dormady said, "The kids really played good ball, and except for a disputed call at second base in our one loss, we could have been in the championship game."

Lone Thief River Falls entry in the tournament, Schmidts-Coke started the day with a 12-8 win over Minot Lucky Strike, scoring a dozen runs in the first two innings, highlighted by a three-run first-inning home run by Kevin Sanders and a second-inning grand slam home run by Greg Harder. Mike Drury picked up the pitching decision, and helped his own cause with three hits in four at-bats.

Game two was a 5-4 win over Roggensack, with Howard Dalager's one-out double and Sanders' game-winning single in the seventh providing the margin. Schmidts-Coke had taken a 2-0 lead into the third inning when Roggensack scored a pair to tie the game. The two teams traded fourth inning runs, with Thief River Falls getting the go-ahead run in the fifth before being tied again in the sixth. Mark DuChamp picked up the win on the mound, with designated hitter Paul Walker hitting a towering fifth inning home run.

In game three, Schmidts-Coke came out on the short end of a 5-3 loss to Budweiser of Jamestown. Once again Thief River Falls took a 2-0 lead into the third only to have the score tied. Nick Drees smashed a long homer in the fifth for a 3-2 edge, but Jamestown tied it on a home run in the sixth. Eventual winning runs came in the seventh. Schmidts-Coke thought they had picked a runner off second base, but the umpire ruled otherwise, and the play turned out to be a big one when Jamestown scored twice with two outs for the win. Drury was the losing pitcher. Walker had a pair of doubles in three at-bats.

Third place game was worth $100 to the winners as Schmidts-Coke used the strong three-hit pitching of Drury and DuChamp in a 3-1 victory. The contest went into an extra inning tied 1-1 when Jim Hallamek drew a one-out walk and Mark Lundin drilled a two-run homer for the winning runs.

Dormady was very pleased with the performance of his young players, telling Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league publicist Richard Bjerken, "They never gave up and backed our pitching with excellent defensive work. They really played well."

Class A Baseball Starts Thursday

A new champion and a school that has never previously won a state baseball tournament championship is certain as the Class A version of the 37th annual state baseball tournament is held Thursday and Friday, at St. Cloud's Municipal Stadium.

Defending champion Sauk Centre was eliminated in district tourney playdowns and all eight entrants in the 1983 event hope to bring home to their communities and school a first ever state title trophy, report Larry Larson, MSHSL director of information and publications.

Among the qualifiers, Staples has come the closest to winning top honors. The Cardinals were state Class A runners-up in 1977 to St. Cloud Cathedral. The other seven entrants combined have had 15 chances at capturing No. 1 laurels with Greenway high school in Coleraine leading the way with six previous appearances.

Roseau will be making its fourth appearance in the tourney, while Montevideo and Windom, are back for third times. Montgomery-Lonsdale, in addition to Staples, appeared once previously. Making first-time ever appearances are Austin Pacelli, who joined the Minnesota State High School League in 1974, and Dassel-Cokato, considered by many the tournament favorite.

First round quarterfinal games begin Thursday at 10 a.m. and run throughout the day with future games starting at 12:30 p.m.; 4:30 p.m.; and 7 p.m. Friday's semifinal games are scheduled for 10 a.m. and 12:30 p.m., respectively, with third place and championship affairs set to start at 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. that day.

First-round pairings in the upper bracket feature Region 1A Austin Pacelli (14-5) vs. Region 8A Roseau (17-4) at 10 a.m. and Region 2A Windom (17-4) vs. Region 7A Greenway (13-6) at 12:30 p.m. In the bottom bracket it'll be Region 4A Montgomery-Lonsdale (15-6) vs. Region 5A Dassel-Cokato (18-2) at 4:30 p.m. and Region 3A Montevideo (14-5) vs. Region 6A Staples (14-6) at 7 p.m.

This is the eighth consecutive year that the Class A state tournament will be played at St. Cloud.

Meanwhile, the Class AA state tournament got underway Tuesday at St. Paul's Municipal Stadium as Edina handled Stillwater 11-1; Region 8AA champion St. Cloud Apollo blanked Shakopee 10-0; Grand Rapids edged Frank B. Kellogg of Little Canada 8-7 in eight innings and Richfield Holy Angels Academy beat Burnsville.

Today's semifinals feature Edina (20-1) vs. Grand Rapids (15-5) at 10 a.m. and Apollo (17-4) vs. Holy Angels Academy (17-4) at 12:30 p.m. Third place game will be played at 4:30 p.m. and championship game will be played at 7 tonight.

Local Scouts Weekend Guests Of Canadians

Last weekend Cub scouts and Boy Scouts from Packs 57, 59 and 199 of Thief River Falls and Pack 53 of St. Hilaire along with Troops 199 and 59 of Thief River Falls traveled to Winnipeg. There they were the guests of the Seven Oaks district Cub scouts and Boy scouts, and were billeted with their scout friends there.

Twelve adults attended as leaders of the visiting contingent, five being Scouters, five parents, and bus driver, Harold Halvorson and his wife Alpha.

The Sunday event was the Seven Oaks field day of competitive events held at the Rivercrest community club field. One of the founders of the scout exchange, Walter Carter of Winnipeg, was grand marshall of the scout parade preceding the field day events.

Local Cub scouts were divided into two teams of 15 each. TRF Team 1 included Robby Olson, Troy Winter, Tim DeBenedet, Chad Frazier, Allen Mehrkens, Brice Anderson, Oscar Radniecki, Mike Jordet, Jeremy Enge, Pat Myhrer, Keith Peters, Pat Hanson, Dale Martell, Jason Sauve and Pete DeBenedet.

Five first place ribbons, one second place ribbon and five third place ribbons were earned by the teams. It took the more rural Thief River Falls teams to show the Canadian city boys how to pitch horseshoes as both local teams won a ribbon in this event. The packs will share the traveling trophy returned to Thief River Falls as will the two troops share theirs.

Local Boy scouts formed one patrol for their scout skills events. Participating in the scout exchange from Troop 199 were Shawn Heinze and Jarod Garner, and from Troop 59 were David Novak, Jon Hall, Sean Myhrer, Jeff Feragen, Jack Sculthorpe and Pete Larson, Pack 53, Webelos.

This type scouting event is classified as an encampment, therefore not a district planned or supported event. Other scout units in this district also plan and attend with their scouting friends, campouts and visits, such as the above scouts attended last weekend.

This particular exchange of scouts with the Seven Oaks district of the Manitoba council has been a yearly event for the past 18 years. The above scouts and adult scouters are members of the Voyageur Trails district, Northern Lights council, Boy Scouts of America, a member of the United Way.

TRIP PREPARATIONS are underway for Jacki Kramer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kramer of Thief River Falls, as she prepares for a visit to the Netherlands. Jacki will leave June 25 and return on August 20. Trip was arranged through the Youth For Understanding (YFU) program. Jacki will be staying with Mr. and Mrs. Earn Ongenae and their children Pauline, 18; Marcel, 20; Joop, 21; and Celina, 22. The Ongenaes live in Tilburg, a city of 150,000 in the province of North Brabant. Area representative for YFU is Mrs. John Helley, Plummer.

Council OKs Lowering Of Valuations

Carlson noted.)

Silas Carpenter, representing Consumers Co-op, asked that they also be considered for a reduction in taxes, on the grounds that their building has been essentially vacant for about a year. Hanson requested a 25 per cent reduction in valuation. DeHaan noted that they were still pumping gasoline on the property, but recommended that they be granted a 20 per cent reduction on the building, appraised at $73,600. Total valuation on the property was $103,600. Recommended reduction brought the total valuation to $88,900.

Roll call vote on the reduction was approved 5 to 2, with Aldermen Wysoski and Restad voting against. DeHaan noted that since no other reductions had been requested at the board of review, no more would be considered until next year. Council's recommendations will be considered by the Pennington county board of commissioners when they meet July 13.

Also approved by the council were plans for the Highway 59 South frontage road project with an agreement on cost participation. Local Minnesota department of transportation representative Cliff Larson noted that they would be calling for bids on the first phase of the project on June 24. That phase would concentrate on resurfacing the main line from County Road 62 to Spruce Street, with installation of the signal at First Street. He noted however, that the project was being tied to another project to make Highway 59 a nine-ton route to Erskine; meaning that they might not get to this part of the project until 1984. City's share of the cost will be $213,984.17 which will be transferred from its federal aid urban account.

Larson also noted that some delays were being encountered in obtaining right of way necessary for the project. He said that the second phase, which would include construction of the frontage roads, could be delayed until 1985.

Hearings will be held this fall on another phase of the project which would call for rebuilding of Third Street from First Street to Atlantic Avenue. Council passed a resolution requesting that the state complete a temporary resurfacing done on that stretch of road, due to safety problems caused by most traffic using only the smooth left lane, causing vehicles to pass in the rough right lane.

Request was heard from Charlie Oaks, 114 West Sixth Street, who asked if a plumbing bill resulting from a break in his water line could be placed on his taxes as a special assessment. He noted that the bill was about $1,000 due to unusual circumstances. Apparently, the line had been laid approximately 60 years ago by the city, and instead of coming in from Sixth Street (a distance of about 20 feet), had been brought in from Knight Avenue across his neighbor's property, a distance of approximately 130 feet.

When the leak appeared near his neighbors house, the plumber had assumed it was in her water line and dug it up and replaced it. When that failed to stop the leak, the location of Oakes' water line was discovered, resulting in his liability for replacement of it, plus damages to his neighobr's yard. Oakes questioned whether the city was liable.

Although council members expressed sympathy for his position, they noted that they could not afford to set a precedent in assuming liability or in "acting as a banker" for him. Mayor Carlson suggested that Oakes should either contact an attorney or see about getting a loan to assist him with paying the bill.

In other business the council:

— Heard that final agreements had been reached on the lease and contract for deed arrangement with Northern Outerwear for purchase of the municipal services building, and authorized the attorney to draft the final agreement;

— Approved a recommendation from Police Chief Ken Froschheiser that permits for the slow pitch softball association to have beer at the softball diamonds be limited to before 10 p.m. and exclude keg beer;

— Approved a resolution detailing administration of the community development block grant program, which would release about $493,226 to finance a revolving loan fund intended to stimulate growth of industry.

— Authorized Mayor Carlson and Chief Froschheiser to sign application forms to obtain state money amounting to $125 per police officer to be used for reimbursement of expenses for training requirements. Money is collected by the state as a 10 per cent surcharge on all moving traffic offenses;

— Approved an application by Dr. Richard Heinrichs to get permission from the department of natural resources to install a concrete retainer wall along property he owns in Sherwood Forest;

— Approved requests to have beer in Oakland Park for parties on July 16 and 17;

— Approved progression raises for wastewater department employees Gary Anderson and Mitch Hams;

— Approved a request from the parks department to apply for a $29,776 grant from the Minnesota department of economic security to be used for landscaping projects. Projects would employ seven people;

— Heard that official startup of Bemidji Airlines five flights per day had possibly been delayed until August due to difficulty in obtaining air slots at Minneapolis. Notification was also received that American Central Airlines had filed a letter with the civil aeronautics board in support of selection of Mesaba Airlines;

— Heard that the solid waste committee was looking at the possibility of hauling garbage to Bagley, since a possibility exists that the Gentilly landfill site could be filled in approximately 10 years;

— Adjourned until June 21, when the council will meet with an architect interested in purchasing the Carnegie Library building for possible conversion into an office building and cocktail lounge. Council was also notified that the building has been approved for placement on the national register of historic places.

Brown Pelicans Flock To Tiny Panama Islands

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

It is one of those broiling hot tropical days at the end of the dry season when the air is choked with moisture and dust but the rains just won't come. Gene Montgomery, a biologist at the Smithsonian tropical research institute, bumps his way in a surplus army "mule," a small, flatbed transport vehicle used by the thousands in the Vietnam war, up the steep gravel- and-dirt roadway to the top of Taboga, a tiny Panamanian island where he has made his home for the past five years.

Squinting against the glaring morning sun, his blue eyes narrow to tiny slits as he points down the rugged, wooded cliffside to the azure Pacific below. Gradually, the visitor begins to see the objects of Montgomery's enthusiasm. They appear as tiny white-and-brown dots on the tops of trees, occasionally a fluffy white speck.

Pelicans, he tells his visitor. Thousands and thousands of brown pelicans — not as many as last year, but still a lot. Maybe one-third to one-half of the world's brown pelicans come here in a good year, Montgomery says, here and to Uraba, Taboga's even tinier island neighbor.

The 49-year-old Montgomery is a man with a dream: to preserve part of Taboga and all of Uraba as a Panamanian national seabird refuge for the pelicans — and for the people, for Montgomery envisions the cliffside overlook as a place where people can come to see first-hand the excitement and color of this major brown pelican nesting colony. "I don't know of another place in the world where you can look down into thousands of brown pelican nests and not disturb the birds," he says.

Disturbance is something the brown pelicans know all too well. In better times, breeding colonies of this large-billed marine bird, found only in the Western hemisphere, could be seen along the coasts of the Atlantic ocean and Caribbean sea, from North Carolina to below the mouth of the Amazon in Brazil. On the Pacific coasts, brown pelicans were abundant from northern California through Baja California down to central Chile.

But by the 1960s, dual assaults from habitat destruction by man and pollution from pesticides such as DDT had reduced or wiped out breeding areas in parts of Mexico and the Caribbean, Texas and northern California. Ironically, brown pelicans are now virtually extinct in the Pelican state itself, Louisiana. Brown pelicans quickly became a symbol of the ecology movement; in 1973, the bird was placed on the U.S. endangered species list.

Remoter areas such as Taboga have not been spared. Even as Montgomery talks with his visitor, thick, eye-stinging smoke billows from an adjacent hillside and drifts precariously close to the nesting pelicans. It is a scene played out repeatedly throughout Central and South America, especially at the end of the dry season. Farmers set fire to wooded areas to clear land for planting crops or grazing cattle. Here on Taboga, hunters also set fires to ferret out a sought-after delicacy; iguanas.

As if man-made disasters were not enough, this year the brown pelicans suffered another blow, this from nature, in the form of an exceptionally long, parched and windless dry season that resulted in severe shortages of food for nesting pelicans and their hatchlings. The aberrant weather in Panama was apparently related to upheavals in worldwide weather patterns that brought wind, rain and high seas to California, torrential flooding to Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia and the worst drought in 100 years to parts of Australia.

After four years of observing pelicans, Montgomery believes that such climatic fluctuations and their effects on food supplies are the most important natural factors affecting nesting success of brown pelicans on Taboga, Uraba and other islands in the Golf of Panama. Though "the puzzle still has blanks," Montgomery has pieced together a fairly complete picture of nesting events in a "good year."

Normally, about 2,000 brown pelicans reside in the Golf of Panama. Additional birds begin arriving early in the dry season, that is, at the end of December of beginning of January, when trade winds begin to blow following the end of the rainy season.

Typically, these winds sweep the warm surface water offshore in the Golf of Panama, lifting colder water from the ocean depths to the surface along with a rich mixture of nutrients that nourish a wide variety of ocean-dwelling life, including fish. Fish constitute the main diet of brown pelicans, which, unlike other pelican species, dive from great heights to catch their food.

Montgomery explains that the birds do seem "cued" to arrive at a time when the initial drop in water temperature brings deep-water fish in the Gulf of Panama closer to the surface; pelicans can only catch those fish that swim a few feet below the surface. Later, another surge in the fish population becomes available about the time chicks start hatching. This last surge is a direct result of the cold-water upwelling: The payload of nutrients, delivered link-by-link up the food chain, eventually helps increase fish populations.

"Pelicans seem to be turned on by cold feet," Montgomery jokes. "You know: cold feet, warm heart!" The drop in water temperature, he explains, coincides with the frenzy of courtship and nest building.

"For several weeks, "as most animals do when they's courting, they go a little mad," Montgomery recounts. On arrival, these normally drab birds are dressed for courtship with bright yellow plumage on their white heads, rust-colored plumage on their necks and a bright red color on the tips of their bills. "They spend a lot of time displaying these colors, flapping wings and rubbing necks. They're even more comic-looking than usual."

Eventually, each pelican of breeding age selects a nest site, usually the brown of a tall tree, and waits for an appropriate mate to arrive. After mating, the pair builds a nest of sticks, twigs and vegetation, often tearing off branches so large they can barely be carried to the nest site. Ultimately, as many as eight to a dozen pelican pairs may nest in a single tree, each nest about "Two pelican-bill lengths apart," Montgomery says.

The female lays three eggs over a period of six to eight days, and during this time the male is very attentive, retrieving and offering up choice bits of nesting material. The parents share incubation duties, periodically turning the eggs and protecting them from both the grueling tropical heat and the omnipresent vultures and other predators.

About 30 days after the egg is laid, "a tiny, pink, featherless, floppy chick hatches. In the years of a good cold-water upwelling and an abundant fish supply, the young grow rapidly under their parents' devoted care and feeding. In about three months, the chicks are as big as the adults.

By August, most of the young are independent and, following the departure of their parents, begin to leave the Gulf of Panama. Nearly all the visiting pelicans have departed by September. Montgomery is uncertain where the birds come from or where they go, but he suspects they gather in Panama from California, Mexico and perhaps the Caribbean.

This is the story's ending in a good year. During the 1980-81 nesting season, Montgomery estimated that 50,000 to 100,000 pelicans nested on Taboga and Uraba, making these two islands the second-largest brown pelican nesting colony in the Northern hemisphere, next in size only to colonies in Baja California. On the average, each pelican nest under observation on Taboga successfully producted slightly more than one fledgling (a flight-capable chick). Nests constructed early in the season, however, produced more young than those constructed a month later, while nests built two months after the nesting season began failed to produce young, probably because food was not readily available.

Unhappily, the picture has looked quite different for the past two nesting seasons. In the 1981-82 season, a poor upwelling with warm water temperatures resulted in an almost total nesting failure; nest desertions were frequent and virtually no baby pelicans fledged that year. Montgomery expects nesting success to be extremely low this year as well, due to the bizarre climatic conditions throughout the Pacific Ocean region.

Fortunately, pelicans may live 25 or 30 years, so a few bad breeding seasons are not likely to be disastrous for the species as a whole. In fact, brown pelicans appear to be adaptable creatures, having made an impressive comeback in California after DDT was banned.

But time, Montgomery says, is the essence, for man is likely to treat the birds less kindly than nature. Habitat destruction and water pollution are already serious problems for many marine birds in the United States, Mexico and all of Latin America. In the tropics, demand for farmland is so intense that every available wooded habitat is eyed as a candidate for slash-and-burn agricultural development.

"The fact that the brown pelican has made a comeback in parts of the United State may be leading to complacency about its future," Montgomery says, noting that some people have suggested that brown pelicans should be removed from the U.S. endangered species list. "But the problems for these birds are just beginning in Latin America, where they are coming under the same kinds of pressures they faced in the United States in the 1960s and '70s."

For these reasons, Montgomery is anximous to have a Panamanian national seabird refuge established, a step that would protect the nesting habitat not only of a large portion of the world's brown pelican stocks but also substantial populations of such marine birds as cormorants, boobies and frigate birds.

Many scientists, Montgomery among them, believe that the health of the brown pelican is a valuable indicator of the health of the overall environment. But preserving these birds has less tangible benefits as well.

"Why do the pelicans need a refuge?" Montgomery muses. "Why bother to preserve any aspect of life that we interpret as being pleasant: We do it so generations from now people will have a chance to enjoy the same pleasures, to get the same enrichment from life, that we have enjoyed."

FLAG DISPOSAL ceremonies conducted by American Legion Post and Auxiliary Unit 117 yesterday in Elks Park, required liberal applications of kerosene to keep the fires going. Dark clouds and thunder which had threatened ominously throughout the preliminary ceremonies, turned into a serious downpour as the fires were lit and flags no longer considered serviceable were presented for formal disposal by Connie Driscoll and Ollie Botner. Approximately 1250 flags which had become damaged, soiled or too worn to continue serving as the symbol of our nation were burned in the ceremony.

FOR SALE ON BIDS

The ten acre Alfred Hermanson berry farm is being offered for sale on bids. This river property is located on the airport road, just outside the city limits. It is fully irrigated and ready to be operated as a truck farm if someone wishes to again develop it. The location of this property makes it, also, ideal for development. A large area of the property is covered with beautiful spruce trees and could easily be developed into one of the most beautiful residential areas in the community.

Bids will be accepted up to and opened at 10:00 A.M. on June 24, 1983, at the McEwen Law Office, Northern State Bank Building, Thief River Falls, Minnesota. The top five bidders will have an opportunity to orally raise their bid at that time. No bids will be accepted for less than One Thousand Two Hundred ($1,200.00) Dollars per acre. A deposit of five per cent (5%) must accompany each bid. Seller reserves the right to reject any and all bids and shall have 24 hours after the bids close to make his decision. The successful bidder shall have the first opportunity to purchase any or all equipment used in the truck farm operation.

Urge Towns To Increase Bike Safety

As the number of bicycles and active riders continue to grow in the state, the Minnesota department of public safety urges communities and community leaders to become aware of ways to prevent bicycle-motor vehicle accidents from increasing in their area.

Important questions to ask are:

— Is there an increasing conflict on the streets between bicycles and motor vehicles?

— Are bicyclists provided with specific information about any special local bicycling hazards?

— Is the bicycle officially recognized as a street vehicle and laws about bike use enforced?

— Does your community have on-going public education courses and traffic engineering programs to improve bicycle safety?

There are many positive steps a community can take to improve their local traffic safety situations suggests Commissioner Paul Tschida. Community leaders and bicycle enthusiasts should organize to examine the issue of bicycle safety. A few questions they can ask are: Does the Community offer on-going safety instruction aimed at school children and adults? Are bicycle lanes or paths provided? Has the community surveyed the major cause of bicycle-motor vehicle accidents, not for the purpose of proving guilt but to combat a recurring problem?

"Motorists and bicyclists have dual responsibility on the road," said Tschida. "Motorists must regard the bicyclist as a legitimate form of transportation and bicyclists must obey traffic rules and regulations while riding on public streets. In this way, everyone wins."

Tax Credits Give Added Reason To Remodel Building

Renovating historic buildings, once a hobby practiced by wealthy homeowners, is attracting business people and investors in a big way. Aging buildings are being reborn as profitable commercial real estate: redbrick factories are being transformed into offices, mills by quiet streams into shopping malls and restaurants, and schools, their wide doors shut, into apartment houses.

Trend reflects the economic advantages of rebuilding, and generous federal and local tax breaks, notes the Minnesota society of CPAs. According to IRS figures, qualified spending for rehabiliation of historic buildings totaled $800 million last year and could reach an annual level of $2 billion by 1985.

Renvation, often cheaper and faster than new construction, can put buildings back into active use within two years after plans are being drawn up, compared with four or five years to construct a new building.

One of the biggest tax breaks available is a 25 per cent investment tax credit for rehabiliation of certified historic structures. To qualify, such structures must be listed on the "National Register of Historic Places," or in some way contribute to an historic district.

Savings are not limited to rehabiliation of historic structures, CPAs add. They can apply in other cases. For instance, a 20 per cent investment tax credit is available on buildings more than 40 years old, and there's a 15 per cent credit on buildings older than 30. Rehabiliation tax credits, allowed for investments in income producing property, are taken during the year a building is placed in service.

To get the renovation tax credit, CPAs note, renovation costs during a 24 month period have to exceed the greater of $5,000 or the adjusted cost basis of the building. For instance, if a building sells for $150,000 with $50,000 of that allocated to land, you'll have to spend more than $100,000 on rehabiliation to qualify for the credit.

Savings don't end with the credit, CPAs say. In the past a building owner had to take a depreciation write-off over the period of the building's useful life — usually between 25 and 50 years. Now, since buildings are assigned a 15 year life for depreciation, the owner takes a larger deduction every year.

This depreciation tax benefit was changed by legislation passed in 1982. As a result, the depreciation base is computed by subtracting half the rehabilitation tax credit from the adjusted base of the building.

In other words, if the building costs $300,000 (the $100,000 cost plus $200,000 for renabilitation), the depreciation base of the building is $275,000 ($300,000 minus half the rehabiliation credit, or $25,000). The straight line depreciation deduction is $18,333 a year.

But that's not all, say CPAs.

In many cases still another tax incentive is available for historic buildings. You may "donate" the facade of the building to a local government or non-profit preservation group. That doesn't require you to slice off the front of your building and cart it off to a museum. It means you surrender your right to change its appearance in any way. It also reduces your depreciation base for tax purposes.

So with approval, you can donate the cast iron front, terra cotta relief ornamentation or other features that make up the facade on your building and take a charitable donation deduction for its assessed value. This one time tax savings is known as a "facade easement."

Department of the interior has guidelines for historic rehabiliation. Your state historic preservation office can provide exact details and assist in getting your building declared as an historic structure or a contributing part of an historic district.

Guidelines may limit some of your rehabilitation plans and add to your costs, CPAs note. For example, you must leave 75 per cent of the building's original walls standing. The building's original height must be maintained; so while you may convert an attic into storerooms, you cannot add another floor to the building. If you replace important architectural details such as a cornice or railing, the replacement must be made from materials resembling the originals. New windows must preserve the design of the old windows.

Finally, in planning your rehabilitation project, you should budget realistically. In maintaining a building's charm, your larger purposes are installing modern conveniences and making the entire project profitable.

Many older structures were built before uniform building codes were established, and often details or problems do not surface until work begins. Try to build in "cushions" into your budget for this, CPAs advise.

Computers Give Weed Control Info

Two new computer programs that provide information and recommendations for post-emergence herbicide use on corn and soybeans are being tested at the Pennington county extension office. The programs were developed for use on the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service's EXTEND computer network.

The programs are easy to use; users need provide only information on the weed they wish to control and the stage of growth of their corn or soybeans. The programs then list the herbicides that have been approved and give remarks about their effectiveness and use as well as application rates.

Also, they say when University of Minnesota trials have shown that a weed can be controlled by a herbicide not officially labeled for that use.

This winter the programs will be expanded. Information and recommendations for pre-emergence and preplant incorporated herbicide use will be added. The programs will then take into account multiple weed problems and will rank herbicides according to preference of use for specific situations. The programs will be updated each year so that only the most current information and recommendations are available.

A father's love is one of life's greatest joys. Though a son or daughter grows up all too quickly, there are wonderful memories of many good times spent together.

Fathers deserve a national day of honor. Look how much they do for their families. They leave home early each morning and come back late, often tired. Their toil in the work places of the world provides shelter, food, clothes, education and a great deal of happiness.

Above all, a real father gives of himself to those he loves through his understanding, kindness, guidance and encouragement.

Our Heavenly Father showed how much he cares for each of us by sending his own beloved son to lay down his life for us that we might have eternal life.

Find the strength for your life in the power of that divine love. Worship this week.

Wade Trophy Winner Points For 1984 Olympics

LaTaunya Pollard

LaTaunya Pollard, a three-time All-American from California State University at Long Beach and the nation's leading scorer this season, is the newest recipient of the coveted Wade Trophy, awarded annually to the outstanding junior or senior women's college basketball player in the country.

Widely recognized as the top goal for women players, the award is sponsored by Stayfree and named for Coach Margaret Wade, a pioneer in the establishment and advancement of women's collegiate basketball.

"Accepting this award means more to me than winning the national championship," Pollard said. Next stop for the 22-year-old 'Player of the Year' is the trials for the Pan Am World Games in Brazil this summer. Her ultimate dream is to play on the U.S. team in the 1984 Olympics.

Carrying on the tradition of growing excellence in women's athletics, Pollard's accomplishments rank with previous Wade Trophy winners such as Old Dominion's two-time recipient Nancy Lieberman, Pam Kelly of Louisiana Tech University, and Lynette Woodard of the University of Kansas. Montclair State star Carol Blazejowski won the first Wade Trophy in 1978.

A graduate of Roosevelt High School in East Chicago, IN, and a Wade Trophy finalist last year, Pollard, a 5'11" senior guard, led the 49ers to Western Collegiate Athletic Association Conference championships in 1981 and 1982. She holds 18 school records including most career points, 3,001, and most points in a game, 48, set this year against Marist College. She averaged 29.3 points per game during the season, adding 8.9 rebounds and 4.9 assists per contest.

No Tax Increase

Following editorial is from the Bemidji Pioneer:

President Reagan used his recent press conference to send one overriding message to Congress, the financial markets and the public: He will not risk aborting the economic recovery now in such abundant evidence by submitting to a tax increase.

Mr. Reagan has common sense and most of the current economic indicators on his side, even if he is still short of votes on Capitol Hill. A solid majority in the House and something over half the members of the Senate are on record favoring higher taxes in one form or another.

The standard justification cited these days for piling on more taxes, or at least canceling the third year of Mr. Reagan's tax cut, is the admitted need to reduce the huge budget deficits projected for the next several years.

But we have already seen how Democrats in the House, for example, started out last January by expressing horror over the deficits and ended up in March by passing a budget resolution that would increase taxes, spending, and the deficit for fiscal 1984. That proves what Mr. Reagan has suspected all along: That giving Congress more money only results in more spending with no commensurate decrease in deficit.

Moreover — and this is crucial — a hefty tax increase imposed at just the moment when Mr. Reagan's policies have helped to restart the nation's economic engine could easily switch off the ignition. Federal spending is already soaking up a record percentage of the gross national product. Keeping economic growth on an upward curve depends on higher demand from consumers and a readily available supply of capital for business expansion.

A tax hike would dampen demand and shrink the supply of capital. This cause-and-effect relationship is so obvious that nearly all economists have traditionally opposed raising taxes during a recession or in the early stages of an economic upturn. Mr. Reagan is hardly espousing anything radical or untried in saying he will veto a tax increase to protect the recovery.

Well then, what about the deficits? Does the president's opposition to any new taxes mean that the nation will have to live with $200 billion deficits through the mid-1980s?

Absolutely not, provided Congress gets serious about cutting spending. There is a better chance that this will happen now that Congress knows that Mr. Reagan is dead serious about denying it new tax revenues. The spenders on Capitol Hill will cut only when they are forced to, and Mr. Reagan has just cranked up the pressure dramatically for spending restraints.

How else could the President compel the house to delete the $30 billion it so cavalierly added to his proposed budget for domestic spending in fiscal 1984? And how else could the White House signal the politically fractured Senate Budget Committee that curbing the deficits will require a measure of genuine austerity in the budget?

Then too, Mr. Reagan can point to the increasingly good economic news as ample reason to believe that the deficit doomsayers, including some in his own administration, have overstated the problem.

The latest figures in the Commerce Department's index of leading economic indicators suggest a much stronger recovery than was anticipated even two months ago. And more and more private sector economists are endorsing this optimism.

If they are right and if the Commerce Department's new figures portend GNP growth of, say, five per cent this year, the deficit projections for next year and beyond will have been knocked into a cocked hat. Suppose, for example, that unemployment declines to about six per cent by the end of 1984, as some independent analysts now predict. That would slash the projected fiscal 1984 deficit from $190 billion to less than $100 billion.

What we know for certain is that any growth at all will diminish the deficits if only Congress can be made to hold down spending. We also know that a tax hike now will throttle growth, give Congress more to spend, and leave the deficits unacceptably high.

By promising to veto any sabotage of his economic program, President Reagan has given new cause for believing that it will work.

INFLATION-FIGHTING Ideas

USE COLOR FOR FASHION ECONOMY

Women who yearn for a new fashion look but are faced with budget limits can look to the new trend in rich colors available in today's legwear.

Color is an inexpensive yet dramatic way to extend your wardrobe without overextending your checkbook. Smart pantyhose in fashion's newest shades and textured looks can revitalize an outfit that's a "golden oldie"—giving it a look that's fresh and new.

Here are a few more fashion suggestions from the people at Hanes Hosiery to help you make the most of your fashion dollar:

- Give your favorite black dress three completely different looks by wearing with pantyhose in white, Jet black or one of the new important shades of gray.
- Accent the continuing influence of black and white with ultra sheer hosiery in Pepper Red.
- Choose pantyhose with a texture such as Oleg Cassini's Dotted Line. The delicate side stripe of tiny checks gives an elegant look for day or evening.
- The still popular chino-khaki tones will look even smarter boldly accented with teal or red hosiery.

Have fun with color—at little cost—as you use pantyhose and knee highs to complement your look for the new season.

Smartly colored hosiery can add a new look to your wardrobe at little cost.

To The Editor:

In your editorial of June 6th you asked why we need a Senior Citizen Center. We need a center where the Seniors can go to visit with people of their age, play games, do crafts if they want to. A lot of seniors just sit home, watch T.V. or just look out the window because they have no place to go. At a center they can make new friends.

You named off the places we could go. We senior citizens who don't live in the High Rise or the Skylight have no place to go except to the city auditorium and that is just one day a week on a Wednesday. As far as the card room goes, it is so small.

We senior citizens that don't live in the High Rise can not go and use the meeting room. The only time we can go there is if we are invited. The Skylight has the same rules. The churches meet once a month for senior citizens.

What a center is for is not only the seniors in Thief River Falls but also for senior citizens who come to Thief River Falls to shop and see our doctors. Alot of seniors ride to Thief River Falls with their children and on the bus. When they get tired they have no place to go and rest. None of the stores have places to sit down and rest. Even a lot of seniors here in Thief River Falls ride up town with someone and have to wait for their ride home.

We are very fortunate to have senior meals at the hospital. We are very thankful to the hospital board and administration for letting us be there, but we have to be out by 2 p.m. We can only accommodate 70 and there are a lot more who would like to come to the meals.

I am a meal site council member, project council member of Tri-Valley and was on the Pennington county committee on aging for awhile, so have looked into this, and have talked to people both young and old. Just about everyone thinks we should have a center.

Now I am going to ask you why all the other cities and towns have centers and seem to be able to keep them going. So why can't Thief River Falls.

To my way of thinking the seniors have made this city what it is. Look at all the things we have helped pay for — arena, ball diamonds, playgrounds, tennis courts, hockey rinks and many other things. Then you ask why we want a center.

Aren't we entitled to a little consideration and recreation? It won't be too long before you and a lot of others will be senior citizens.

STRAIGHT TALK

Albert D. Hattis, Associate Professor of Business and Holder of the Schwan Endowed Chair for Free Enterprise, Southwest State University, Marshall

The other day a story was brought to my attention that shocked me, and at my age it is no longer very easy to do that! This story was a perfect example of injustice.

One of the fine things about our country is that we are innocent until proven guilty, and that the proof process requires evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Furthermore, trails or queries are based on both the prosecution and the defendant having an equal opportunity to confront charges. Hearsay, which is defined as information received indirectly based on rumors, reports and gossip, is not acceptable evidence.

The dictionary I have defines justice as involving impartiality, fair play, conformity with what is right and proper. Words that are supposed to mean justice include fairness, impartiality, propriety, right and equal treatment.

Put all of that together and you have a system that applies to everything involving our lives, including our personal, work and leisure experiences.

Our system of "fairness" is important. It sees to it that the individual is properly protected from the whims of those who decide that the individual can be abused. It protects the individual from those with an axe to grind.

A man was traveling back to his home town. He was a teacher who never said no to any request made to him for help from other teachers, communities and entities. He worked long hours. He worked harder than was average or customary. He was available to all who called upon him. Those who attended his classes, including educators, business people, individuals concerned with leisure learning, and regular full-time students, felt that he was doing a very good job, based on their direct experience.

His political views were confined to his non-school involvement and were not extreme.

He had letters of commendation and appreciation from all over.

On this particular day, as he returned from a trip where he had spent four hours in a classroom and had another three and one-half hours to go when he returned, he was very tired. His car travels had started at 6:30 a.m. and wouldn't stop until 10:30 p.m.

In the half hour between his return trip and return to a classroom, two phone calls were received from his school staff people saying that while he was so busy doing productive things, there were some people at his school trying to ambush him or even lynch him. These staff people called because they had observed that he had not been contacted or given any opportunity to respond. They felt that if a dedicated person could be kicked around in this way, it reflected on what could happen to anyone else.

Our teacher was shocked. With all of the good comments from people participating in his programs, projects and classes, and with none of the people reported in the ambush group having participated in what he was doing, he assumed that the callers were passing on gossip. Our system of justice and fair play doesn't do things like this.

Later that evening our teacher got specific calls evidencing that the ambush or lynch effort was being made, and that he hadn't been given a chance to respond. He is still formally unaware of the situation. Informally, he has heard of many other ambushes and lynchings, coercion through implied threats to get twisted comments, and more.

There was an old saying about the person who should cast the first stone at someone who was guilty of something being someone free of guilt. Some of us seem to have a twisted view and do not recognize that when stones are being cast, it is likely that the original thrower may end up as a target. That seems both fair and kind, and good sense.

I believe in justice and fair play. That's why I stick my column "nose" (already broken twice) into injustice and people abuse.

That's Straight Talk!

A letter was sent to one of the 300 or so newspapers now carrying our column. The writer suggested that if I believed everyone was being overpaid, then I should take the first salary cut, as an example.

I did not say that everyone is being overpaid. I did say that we live in a highly competitive one-world market. Our products and services must be priced competitively, or they will not sell. Our costs have to be at levels that permit us to price our products and services competitively.

One of the significant costs for many products and services is labor cost. If a company is unable to sell its products because its costs are too high, that means the company will fail and its employees will lose their jobs. That also means that the employees who have lost their jobs will have to find something new to do, and that something new may or may not pay the same wage they had been receiving.

Those are facts of life, even if they are unpleasant facts, and they still apply in this very real world in which we happen to live.

Recently our President visited Pittsburgh. The steel mills are in trouble. Foreign steel is cheaper than domestic steel. One reason is too high a labor cost. There are other reasons, too. Those steel workers must face up to why they lost their jobs and why foreign steel is taking their product's place. The answer is simple. Our steel making costs are too high and must be reduced. The trip that took steel worker wages up is over.

The teamsters who drive our trucks increased their wages so that freight costs have also helped to make our American products uncompetitive. There were truck drivers (long-haul-over-the-road) earning more than their bosses. The end result of this pressure is failing organized trucking companies, offering fewer jobs. Lots of independent and non-union truckers are providing services at a lower cost that allow shippers to move their products and still compete. The unemployed teamsters must recognize that they have priced themselves out of the marketplace.

As a kid working my way through school, I was a broadcaster. In those days every radio station in our area had live staff musicians. Those live musicians kept pushing wages up, and the end result was the elimination of most live musician jobs.

That decades went into creating inequities, wagewise, doesn't justify keeping those inequities alive, and down deep we know that even when it effects us and we don't like it. When we shop, we normally buy on the basis of price and quality. If the price is too high because costs are too high, then we have a company that is doomed. All of the other upset and concern is meaningless jabber.

There is a company in serious financial trouble 150 miles from my home. Its costs are too high. It told its employees that it can not continue to compete in this real world based upon its labor cost, its other costs and its present procedures and work rules. It has told its employees that without employee wage cuts to make labor cost competitive, the business will die soon.

Some of the employees checked around and found no jobs available when the plant is forced to close. They want to keep their jobs alive. Some employees argue that they have fought for 50 years to achieve a short work week and high wages and will not give one inch. It will be interesting to see if the stubborn employees will wake up to the facts of life in time.

Now let me get back to the suggestion that I be the first to take a wage cut. When I first considered this free enterprise chair position, I had three years left on an employment agreement providing an assured income of three times what I am being paid. I knew that if I wanted this job, I had to take a significant cut in pay and benefits. If the endowment income, with declining interest, were to go down, I would be the first to suggest that my pay be cut, because I love my job, do it well, and appreciate the approval of those I serve.

That's Straight Talk!

SAFETY TIP

Home Eye Injuries Are Preventable!

More eye injuries—some 42 percent—happen around the house than anywhere else.

Cleaning agents are very often the cause—oven cleaners, drain cleaners, lye-containing detergents, ammonia, bleaches—harsh chemicals that can produce serious injury, even blindness.

According to the National Society to Prevent Blindness, which was founded 75 years ago, 90 percent of these accidents are preventable by using protective eyewear and taking a few safety precautions.

- Read the label and instructions thoroughly before using the product.
- Before you use a spray, be sure the nozzle is directed away from you.
- Wear special goggles to protect your eyes from dangerous substances.

For a free brochure on Eye Safety, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to your State Society to Prevent Blindness, or the National Society to Prevent Blindness, 79 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Protecting Your Sight In Later Years

According to the National Society to Prevent Blindness, preventive eye care can help protect our sight in later years.

While we are more likely to experience vision problems with age, they can often be corrected and should not be simply shrugged off as "the price of getting old." Nevertheless, millions of older people, through fear, ignorance, and neglect, endure vision disorders and failing sight without seeking help.

The National Society, now in its 75th year, reports that half of all blind people are over 65, although the 65-and-over-age group makes up only ten percent of the population.

Probably the most commonly known condition, and one that is frequently related to aging, is cataract. Yet, even though the condition develops, vision impairment need not be permanent. In more than 95 out of 100 cases for which it is recommended, cataract surgery, one of the safest operations a patient can undergo, will successfully restore useful vision.

Glaucoma, another age-related disease, is readily detected by a simple, painless test that should be taken at least once every two years. Glaucoma's progress can usually be halted, generally with medication. Any amount of vision already lost, though, cannot be recovered.

NEW TWIST TO FRENCH QUICHE

The classic French quiche has a smashing new variation. "Quiche aux Escargots" substitutes the famous French Helix snail for the crumbled bacon and adds grated Beaumont cheese, the savory semi-soft variety from the French Alps, to the custard in the pie shell. The recipe is easy to make and is delicious as a main dish for a luncheon or buffet, an appetizer at a dinner party or as a hot nibble during the popular "Happy Hour." Serve with a carafe of French dry white wine, such as Mâcon from southern Burgundy.

QUICHE AUX ESCARGOTS

(Makes one 10-inch flan to serve 6)

1 package (11 oz.) pie crust mix
1/4 cup French dry white wine
2 T. butter
2 shallots, chopped
1/4 tsp. Herbes de Provence
1 clove garlic, chopped
2 cans (4-1/2 oz. drained weight each) French escargots, small size, drained
3 oz. Beaumont cheese, shredded
4 eggs
1 cup (1/2 pint) heavy cream
1/4 cup French dry white wine
Salt and Pepper

Prepare pie crust mix according to package directions using white wine instead of water. Roll out dough large enough to line the bottom and sides of ungreased 10-inch quiche pan. In small skillet, heat butter and sauté shallots, stir in herbs, garlic and escargots and sauté for 5 minutes more. Sprinkle cheese over bottom of pie shell. Pour in contents of skillet with all pan juices. In bowl, beat eggs with heavy cream, wine, salt and pepper until smooth and well blended. Pour evenly into pie shell. Bake in preheated moderate oven (350°F.) for 40 to 50 minutes or until puffed and brown. (If desired, this quiche can be frozen unbaked. To serve, bake from the frozen state and extend baking time 15 minutes.)

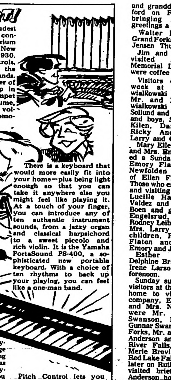
IT'S A FACT!



The largest and loudest musical instrument ever constructed is the Auditorium Organ in Atlantic City, New Jersey, completed in 1930. It has 1,477 stop controls, 33,112 pipes and has the volume of 25 brass bands. It's also the proud owner of the loudest organ stop in the world—a pure trumpet note of earsplitting volume, more than six times the volume of the loudest locomotive whistles.

There is a keyboard that would more easily fit into your home—plus being light enough so that you can take it anywhere else you might feel like playing it. At a touch of your finger, you can introduce any of ten authentic instrument sounds, from jazzy organ and classical harpsichord to a sweet piccolo and rich violin. It is the Yamaha PortaSound PS-400, a sophisticated new portable keyboard. With a choice of ten rhythms to back up your playing, you can feel like a one-man band.

With 44 keys, this keyboard has enough range so you can enjoy playing any kind of music, as well as an eight-note polyphonic system so you can play even complex chords. A special Chord Sequence Memory lets you program the rhythm and chord accompaniment in advance, while Pitch Control lets you tune in with other instruments at jam sessions. It's a keyboard that's hitting the right note with many musicians — beginners to pros.

Piano solos at noon will be presented by Jason Heinrichs and John Wahlberg. Vocal soloist Jane Mackenroth will be featured at 1 p.m. with Vi Barr as accompanist. Piano soloists at 2 p.m. will be Jami Dehnert, Kia Anderson, Carna Sanders, Brenda Ode and Nicole Brang, while pianists at 3 p.m. will be Jennifer Cyr, Lana Jorgenson and Sandra Rustan.

GOING ONCE, TWICE . . . Auctioneers took turns calling the Kidney Fund auction sale on Saturday and Sunday at the city sports arena. Turnout of bidders was light on Saturday, with 118 registered, and most donated items were sold for bargain prices. Attendance improved on Sunday with 176 bidders registered. Auctioned items brought in $1,348.50 on Saturday, and $2,775 on Sunday, for a total of $4,123.50 raised to fight kidney disease. Additional funds were raised through rummage items and drawings, but totals were not available as of press time. Working the sale at the time the picture was taken were (left to right) Mitch Bruggeman, Web Maves, Morris Howick, Dave Bruggeman and Rox Keefe.

Cindi Solem Is Second In State Essay Contest

Cindi Solem

Cindi Solem, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Solem and member of the City View 4-H club, placed second in the state essay contest sponsored by the American Beekeeping association.

Competition was open to all 4-H club members and essays were to be 750 to 1,000 words in length. Theme for the essays this year was "The Honey Bee's Place in the World." Cindi's winning essay is as follows:

The honey bee has an enormous fascination and many people get carried on a tide of interest into a relationship with this marvelous insect which is so unlike ourselves and yet lives in cities of 60,000 strong, without our need for committees and councils.

For years the honey bee has been a part of man's world. Gradually working its way to find his place in the world, the honey bee has come to be known as the most important producer of a favorite sweetener — honey. Honey is the sweetest, most nutritious natural food and has always been eagerly sought. Within the past few years the wholesale price of honey, not only in this country but abroad.

Interest in honey bees is not new. The ancient Egyptians were beekeepers, moving their bees up and down the Nile river to take advantage of the changing flora, source of the nectar and pollen which are the honey bees' food. The Greeks and Romans kept

J. Shaw Among "Teachers Of Excellence"

Janet Shaw, home economics instructor at Lincoln high school and Thief River Falls Education association's teacher of the year, has been named to the "Teachers of Excellence" group selected in the state teacher of the year competition.

Also among the 31 nominees selected from total of 118 by a panel of 22 judges was Donald R. Miller, instructor of the learning disabled at Roseau. The list included 22 women and nine men and an honor roll of teachers will be selected from that group, from which the state teacher of the year will be named.

Each of the 31 "Teachers of Excellence" will receive a plaque at a luncheon in Bloomington on October 9, when the teacher of the year will be announced.

Crop Damage Assessed By County Agent

Pennington county extension agent Terry Courneya reports that rainfall varying from three to six inches has left water standing in low spots on area fields, but notes that major surface flooding occurred in only a few trouble spots.

Courneya says it is too early to tell very accurately, but there will certainly be some crop damage due to standing water remaining more than 24 hours in small grains and corn. He adds that the situation seems to be worse in the Goodridge, Highlanding and Plummer areas and in southwestern townships.

Although sunflowers are somewhat more tolerant of excessive moisture, Courneya notes that sunflower beetles appear to be quite numerous and are causing some very noticeable damage to small seedling plants in particular. However, spraying is not recommended unless the numbers of adult beetles reach one per plant, since sunflowers are not significantly damaged by defoliation unless the terminal bud is destroyed. Leaf production is so rapid and prolific during warm weather that sunflowers can virtually outgrown a heavy infestation of adult beetles which only feed for about 10 days.

Egg number and viability appears to be low for the pests, so the larvae hatch should also be below normal. Pesticides for sunflower beetle control include Lorsban, which has been cleared for application at a rate of one to one-and-a-half pints per acre; and Toxophene, which is still cleared for application at a rate of one-and-a-half to two pounds per acre, until supplies are gone.

Marshall Co. Fashion Revue Is June 29

About 30 Marshall county 4-H clothing project members will be participating in the upcoming fashion revue. This year's revue will be held June 29 at the Alvarado high school gym starting at 9 a.m. with registration. Style show will take place at 10 a.m. with juding to follow.

The 1983 4-H fashion revue theme is "Fashions in Bloom."

Handmade and purchased items are judged on the 4-H member. Judge looks for correct fit, choice of style and construction methods that add to or distract from the total picture.

The queen and attendants will be announced at 4-H night which is July 15 at the Marshall county fair.

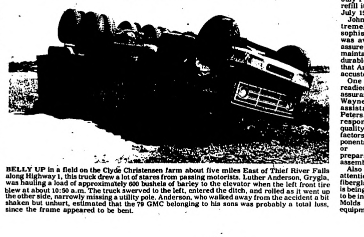
Goodridge Lists Tornado, Fire Numbers

City of Goodridge officials report the Goodridge siren is used for both fire calls and civil defense alerts. Fire call is intermittent and the civil defense call is steady.

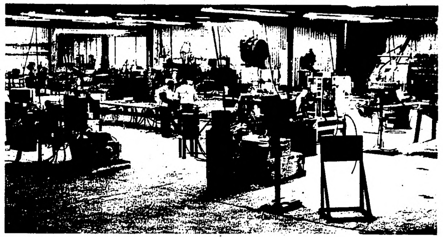
Fires should be reported by calling 378-4110. Callers are reminded to remain on the phone to report the location, fire number or owner of the residence.

Tornado sighting may be reported by calling the same number and relating where the tornado was actually seen. Callers should remain on the phone until the call is acknowledged.

Civil defense siren test is held the first Wednesday of each month at 1 p.m. in Goodridge.



BELLY UP in a field on the Clyde Christensen farm about five miles East of Thief River Falls along Highway 1, this truck drew a lot of stares from passing motorists. Luther Anderson, Grygla, was hauling a load of approximately 600 bushels of barley to the elevator when the left front tire blew at about 10:50 a.m. The truck swerved to the left, entered the ditch, and rolled as it went up the other side, narrowly missing a utility pole. Anderson, who walked away from the accident a bit shaken but unhurt, estimated that the 79 GMC belonging to his sons was probably a total loss, since the frame appeared to be bent.



EQUIPMENT IS IN PLACE and in the process of being tested and checked at the Arctco, Inc., snowmobile operation in Thief River Falls. Arctco has leased 100,000 square feet of space in the former Arctic Enterprises building and is readying for full-scale snowmobile production to begin August 1. Plans are for a pilot run to be made about July 15, after which the company will make adjustments and ready the line for full operation. Leon Johnson and Ole Tweet of Arctco said that progress is on schedule in all areas of the plant.

Arctco Prepares Plant For July 15 Pilot Run

With the pilot run for 1984 model Arctic Cat snowmobiles scheduled for less than a month away — July 15 — preparations at the manufacturing plant are progressing right on schedule, according to officials of Arctco, Inc.

Ole Tweet and Leon Johnson said that the 100,000 square feet in the central portion of the former Arctic Enterprises building should be all arranged with equipment in place by July 1. Several of the areas are in readiness now and equipment is being given final checks for operational capability. Arctco has leased the space in the former Arctic Enterprises building from Minstar, Inc.

There are presently about 25 people employed in preparing the company and plant for the maiden manufacturing year, including the full-time staff and those who have been added for plant preparation work. When the plant goes into full operation about August 1 there will be about 60 to 65 additional employees on the payroll.

Initial preparations have been aimed toward receiving parts, sub assembly and quality assurance with later efforts placed on production line and paint facilities. Tweet noted that when production of the 1984 models is completed later this year, their number will increase the total number of Arctic Cat snowmobiles manufactured to over 783,000. He said the company is determined to continue the tradition of quality snowmobiles, parts and service which has been associated with the Arctic Cat name.

One of the major advantages of moving into the former plant will be the availability of the electrolytic dip paint system which applies urethane paint, Leon Johnson said. The paint system had been maintained until the Arctic Enterprises bankruptcy sale last summer, then had been drained and left alone. Johnson said the system is in very good condition, that it is being cleaned and checked and that representatives of the paint supplier will be here about July 1 to flush the system and refill it in preparation for the July 15 pilot run.

Johnson said he was extremely pleased that the sophisticated paint system was available since it would assure that the company can maintain the high quality and durable finish on painted parts that Arctic Cat customers are accustomed to receiving.

One of the first areas readied for use is the quality assurance area headed by Wayne Konickson with assistance from Wayne Peters. The department is responsible for checking quality, dimensions and other factors of parts and components as they are received or manufactured in preparation for the production assembly process.

Also being given special attention at present is the fiberglass department which is being enclosed and expected to be in readiness about July 1. Molds are being cleaned and equipment arranged so that all fiberglass work can be done in the plant. Arctco expects that all phases of production and assembly which were previously associated with Arctic Enterprises will be done in the plant with the exception of molding the foam seats. Those will be purchased for at least the current production year.

Johnson said that much of the equipment to be used in the manufacturing process was purchased by Arctco during the bankruptcy sale. Specialized equipment, molds and related items had been sold previously to Jim Grafft of Certified Parts corporation in Janesville, WI, and had PRODUCTION TOOLS were among items purchased by Arctco, Inc., during the bankruptcy sale of Arctic Enterprises in Thief River Falls last summer. Leon Johnson, Arctco's vice president of manufacturing, is shown with some of the equipment in the company's tool crib. Ability of Arctco to acquire Arctic tools and equipment greatly helped the new company.

IN PREPARATION for start-up of Arctic Cat snowmobile manufacturing in Thief River Falls, molds in the fiberglass shop are being thoroughly cleaned and prepared for use. The fiberglass area is being enclosed and is expected to be ready about July 1. Arctco, Inc., which has leased 100,000 square feet in the former Arctic Enterprises building, plans to do all phases of snowmobile manufacturing previously done here except for molding of the foam seats.

Pretzel Salad

First layer
1 cup boiling water
1 3-oz. pkg. raspberry gelatin
1 10-oz. pkg. frozen raspberries

Method: Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add raspberries and stir gently until berries have separated. Pour into a mold, bowl or pan. Chill until firm. (Some prefer thawing raspberries before adding to the gelatin).

Second layer
4½ oz. container prepared topping
4 oz., cream cheese, room temperature
½ cup powdered sugar

Method: Combine and whip until smooth. Spread on first layer.

Third layer
¾ cup crushed pretzels
½ cup sugar
½ cup melted margarine

Method: Mix and bake for 8 minutes in a 9x13 inch pan in a 350 degree oven. Cool. Crumble and sprinkle on second layer. Turn out on a plate.

Mrs. Kohler stated that strawberry gelatin and frozen strawberries may be used in place of the raspberries. She also said that if a larger salad is needed, double the recipe and use a bundt pan as a mold.

Mrs. Kohler received this recipe from her daughter, Kathy, who lives in Grand Forks with her husband Bruce Levi and two sons. The Kohlers also have another daughter, Kristy, who is married to Kent Erickson and lives in Hutchinson. A son, James, works in the printing department at the Thief River Falls Times, where Kohler is in advertising.

large apiaries for honey production; they also wrote about bees and beekeeping.

All historical accounts of beekeeping associate the relationship of bees with the activities of man in his search for a livelihood, and indicate that the honey bee is one of man's most important allies. Even before the establishment of other agricultural practices, the honey bee provided man with food and a valuable wax of many uses. At the present time, as well as down through the centuries, millions of people all over the world benefit from the activities of bees and from the by-products of their management.

Honey bees are and always have been the only agency for collecting for man's use the vast supply of sugar in the nectar of flowers which nature pours forth so lavishly. In doing so they perform the services of cross pollinating flowers and thus make possible or improve production of fruit or seeds from a wide variety of plants. By so doing the bees contribute immeasurably to the welfare of man and animals in both domestic and the wild state.

The honey bee has found its place in many parts of the world. According to information from the foreign agricultural service of the United States department of agriculture, the United States, followed by Canada, Australia and Argentina have been leading producers of honey; while California and Minnesota are leading producers in the United States.

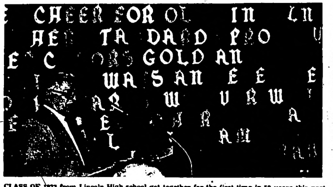
While bees may be kept in most parts of the world where man raises his own food, there are certain limitations that govern the number of colonies that may be kept in a given area, as well as the amount of honey the colonies are able to produce. As a rule, not more than 100 colonies can be kept with profit in one location, and it is generally better to keep a lesser number with the apiaries located from two to three miles apart. Bees may be kept in any place in which they can secure sufficient pollen and nectar for the maintenance of the colony, the ideal location is one in which the bees not only will maintain their colonies but will store economic surpluses for their keepers. Hives are to be found on the roofs of buildings in the heart of large cities, in back lots of city dwellers, in the country, in deserts, and even in parts of Alaska beyond the Arctic Circle.

Bees are versatile in their habits in that they can control the temperatures of their hives on the desert or in the frigid zones in winter. They store up food during times of plenty for periods of dearth or the inactive season of winter.

Besides honey, the honey bee is credited for the production of beeswax. Beeswax is obtained as a secretion from the wax glands of bees and results from the digestion of carbohydrates. By far the most important source is the common honey bee, but wax is obtained from other species of Apis. The value and uses of beeswax were recognized by the ancients and have remained important articles down to the present day. The principal use of beeswax is in the making of candles. It is especially suitable for candles because it burns with less smoke and order than do animal fats and tallows.

There are a number of other products that come from the hive. Many uses have been found for honey, the major product of the hive, including such things as in cooking and baking, beverages, honey butters, jellies, vinegars and even medicines. From time immemorial, the virtues of honey as a remedy have been recognized and even today may people think of honey as the best cure for a sore throat. Minute quantities of valuable minerals essential to the proper functioning of secretions — such as salts, iron, phosphorus, lime and sulphur — are contained in honey. Honey also has an unassailable reputation as an emollient, while its water-absorbing power makes it of great value in certain skin troubles.

The honey bee has probably been associated with man from the time the latter first appeared on the earth. Throughout the years, the honey bee has served a number of purposes in man's world, producing vast amounts of honey and other useful products, and has indeed found his place in the world.



CLASS OF 1933 from Lincoln High school got together for the first time in 50 years this past weekend in Thief River Falls. Approximately half of the original 114 member class showed up for the reunion. Dr. Ralph Fjelstad, political science instructor at Carleton College in Northfield, addressed the group during a gathering held at the Elks Club on Saturday evening. He noted that the class had the distinction of being the only one to graduate without publishing a yearbook, due to the depression conditions at the time. It was also the only class to hold its commencement ceremony in the Trinity Lutheran Church, due to the fact that the city auditorium had burned to the ground in February. Efforts of the committee which organized the reunion were evident in the elaborate decorations which included the school song.

Dear Readers,

A funeral director must be depended upon to offer sound advice and suggestions to safeguard a bereaved family against unnecessary or extravagant expenditures. The desire of every family to perform a final act of love and tribute should not mean a financial burden to the survivors for years to come.

Ashcan School Revitalized Art

By David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian News Service

How to attract attention? That question has perplexed talented American artists for generations.

The first step to recognition, not to mention the hoped for leap to prominence, remains as elusive as ever. But today, at least, American artists have many opportunities for showing their works to art collectors and the public, opportunities arbitrarily denied the creative and energetic at the turn of the century. For this they have to thank a small group of fellow artists who 75 years ago knocked down a heavily guarded gallery door.

In the early 1900s, there was only one major avenue open to sales-hungry American artists. That was a schedule of exhibitions tightly controlled by the then stuffy national academy of design. The academy was in the habit of anointing artists working in the conservative and sentimental styles of the day, while snubbing the avant garde who dared venture off into topical and controversial subjects.

The academy amounted to a "stranglehold" on the fine arts, as one restless turk, urban realist John Sloan, later put it.

In 1908, Sloan and seven fellow insurgents, most of them former newspaper illustrators familiar with the harsher sides of life, broke with the academy's exclusionary exhibition and jurying policies and set up a maverick show at Manhattan's William Macbeth galleries to show their eclectic wares - bold city scenes, forceful portraits, allegorical figure studies and impressionist landscapes.

The show at Macbeth, then one of an estimated 50 commercial galleries in New York — there are more than 400 now — was a "political statement," art historian Judith Zilczer of the Smithsonian's Hirshhorn museum and sculpture garden explains. "The group was not united under a single stylistic banner. Their show had very much to do with reaction to the power structure in the art world," she notes. "Macbeth was the beginning of the independently organized exhibition."

"The event constituted a cultural rebellion, applauded by some and mightily deplored by others," says Fred Voss, research historian at another Smithsonian museum, the National portrait gallery. The exhibition, he points out, marked a call for recognition that excellence in art lay in the originality of personal vision, not in adherence to the traditions prescribed by the academy.

The rebels became known as "The Eight." Robert Henri, their acknowledged leader, described the basis for the revolt a few years after the 1908 show, celebrated recently by the two Smithsonian museums. "Art is simply a question of doing things, anything, well," he wrote. "When the artist is alive in any person he becomes an inventive, searching, daring, self-expressive creature. He disturbs, upsets, enlightens."

Especially disturbing to the academy, whose members gloried in ideal beauty and allusions to classical art, were works by five of The Eight's members, the so-called "Ashcan School." They painted daily urban life as they saw it — nothing idealized, nothing sanitized: elevated trains passing through rush-hour darkness, tugboats plying choppy river waters, tenement kids clashing in a chaotic game of football, a laundress hanging out her morning's labor.

Henri, always the teacher, stressed to the academy (but in vain) that it was not the subject which determined the merit of the work. "The subject," he said, "can be as it may, beautiful or ugly. The beauty of the work of art was in the art itself." Thus, to him, the urban poor and a city's physical structures were subjects as worthy as the refined world of the affluent with which the academy seemed so obsessed.

"Henri and his circle sang the praises of the working people, seeing in their lives the promise, if not the fulfillment, of the American dream," art historian Edward J. Nygren, of Washington, D.C.'s Corcoran gallery of art, explains. But their canvases, filled with boisterous, fun-loving crowds living life to the fullest, were not brushed by social comment and criticism, which became significant factors in the fine arts only when the American dream came into question during the Great Depression.

The style that Henri championed fit the urban subjects perfectly, Nygren believes. The city pulsated with life, and this dynamism was conveyed through technique. Henri favored the quick sketch, a device he had learned in France, and urged his students to work rapidly and from memory. When successful, the technique gave the works spontaneity; the figures did not seem static or rigidly composed.

Henri's circle had no interest in "finicky" styles and techniques, portrait gallery historian Marc Pachter recently told a Smithsonian resident associate seminar on The Eight, "It was possible to be in Henri's crowd and never ever hear the word 'art.'" What these artists were interested in was observing and interpreting urban life, particularly on New York's streets.

New York at the turn of the century was "above all a place of intense reality," Pachter noted. It, and other cities, were teeming, sprawling, experiencing tremendous growth. By 1900, the American frontier had closed, and publisher Horace Greeley's advice to go west was playing itself out as droughts and other misfortunes prompted many inexperienced farmers to return to the booming industrial cities, where they were joined by tides of immigrants looking for their own promised land.

At this time, scores of muckraker journalists and writers working in realistic and naturalistic styles joined ambitious illustrators and artists in New York City — all coming together "as relief from their cultural isolation," Pachter commented. "The American visual artist had ended his separation from other artists and life itself."

From Philadelphia came Henri and four former newspaper men in the 30s and 40s who formed the Ashcan school. They were a varied lot. Henri gave the group its philosophical underpinning: "Paint what you feel," he never tired of saying. "Paint what you see. Paint what is real to you."

John Sloan was facinated with the city's physical features, which to many eyes seem to epitomize the work of the urban realists. One of his works actually contained an overflowing ashcan in the foreground. It was Sloan who said of the academy: It was a place where "you checked your brain at the door."

William Glackens was "easily the most agreeable of the group," Voss believes, and his lifelike city canvases shown at Macbeth were among his best works. Everett Shinn, who turned out such realistic works as "Sixth Avenue Elevated After Midnight," increasingly was drawn to the city's glittering aspects, particularly the theater.

Fifth member of the "Ashcan School," George Luks, was a hard-drinking, compulsive spinner of yarns, who once commented: "A child of the slums will make a better painting than a drawing-room lady gone over by a beauty shop." His paintings were filled with vitality, his style brazen. "I can paint with a shoestring dipped in pitch and lard," he announced. "Guts! Guts! Life! Life! That's my technique."

Joining this cast of five in New York were Ernest Lawson and Maurice Prendergast whose strong opinions about the academy matched those of the Philadelphia crowd, through their impressionist landscapes differed considerably from the "Ashcan" paintings.

Certainly the most different in style were the works of Arthur Davies, the final member of The Eight, who created dreamlike landscapes inspired by French symobilist paintings. The most private of the group, Davies nonetheless would become the key figure in later introducing European modern painting to a wide audience of Americans.

It was Glackens, who as the opening at Macbeth approached, feared the group was in for "an awful roasting." His fears were justified. ". . . like an explosion in a color factory" were the words one critic slung at Prendergast's landscapes. "Clashing dissonances," "anemic color scheme," "will stab you in the optic nerve" — the phrases flowered quickly and acidly from mouths, pens and typewriters.

But the crowds came: "Three hundred people an hour shoving gently in a refined way on opening day," Community college of Baltimore art historian Bennard Perlman writes in his definitive account, "The Immortal Eight." Through a snowstorm and a week of slush, they arrived at 450 Fifth Avenue. William Macbeth termed the show a "remarkable success."

Meanwhile, the national academy, admitting its inability to cope with waning interest at its own doors, called a special convention in Washington, DC, for the purpose, Perlman relates, "of improving art conditions in America." The Eight, of course, had accomplished just that.

NESBU'N ORCHESTRA from Eidsvoll, Norway will be presenting a concert at the Setesdahls Laget on Saturday, June 25, at the Oklee high school auditorium. The group, on a three state tour, is accompanied by Norway's champion accordionist in the age 12 division. The public is welcome. Tickets will be $3 for adults and $1.00 for children.

Star Watching Fascinating During June

Three bright planets and two giant stars make early June star watching a simple late-spring delight.

Venus is the easiest to find. It is the bright "evening star" in the western sky after sunset. This jewel-like planet is Earth's sister in the solar system. It is, however, a much less hospitable place than our blue-green planet, with its yellow sulphuric acid skies and searing ground-level heat.

Saturn is fairly bright too. It lives in the south-southwest sky between sunset and midnight. In that area are two similar-looking objects. The one on the left is the planet Saturn; the one on the right Spica, a star about 200 light-years, or about 1.2 quadrillion miles, away. Saturn's blurred rings — though not their famous lumps, braids and twists — can be seen through a small telescope.

The giant Jupiter shines with its reflected sunlight to the left of Saturn in the night sky. In the southeast sky at early evening, it crosses the southern sky during the middle of the night. The largest planet, and brighter to us on Earth than Saturn is, Jupiter is criss-crossed by storms bigger than Earth itself within its gaseous "surface." It may or may not have a small solid core. Some astronomers call it a "failed sun," not quite massive enough to have condensed, flashed with heat, then burst into thermonuclear activity. The smallest stars ever observed seem to be about 30 times more massive than Jupiter, according to Kris Davidson, astronomer at the University of Minnesota.

Antares, a red giant star hundreds of times larger than the sun, is visible at the lower left of Jupiter. Even at about 500 light years away, it appears faintly reddish to us on Earth. Always much more massive than the sun, it has now ballooned to its red giant stage, a sign that it is nearing the end of its life. If Antares were in our sun's position, its diffuse reddish edge would extend all the way out to the Earth's orbit.

Antares also has a companion, a hot blue-green star. Formed with Antares out of the same cloud of gas and dust, this smaller star — like all smaller stars — is aging more slowly. So, it is still in the prime of its life.

Arcturus, an even more ancient and unusual star, is bright now very high in the southern sky above Saturn and Spica. A bright yellow-orange star, it is about 35 light-years away, 100 times as luminous as the sun, yet is somewhat cooler.

This star is unusual because of its movement, Davidson said. One of the very few stars that has appeared to move out of place during recorded history, it seems to cross about one full moon's width of sky every 1,000 years. Almost all other stars visible from Earth are moving along with the swirling disk of our galaxy around the galactic center — as does our solar system — and so appear to stay within their constellations. Constellations are, after all, only convenient groupings of stars as seen from our vantage point on Earth.

Arcturus is different because it was formed near the time of the galaxy's birth some 10 billion years ago, when the shape of the condensing galactic cloud was spherical or egg-shaped, instead of the flattened disk it now resembles. Arcturus's orbit was set then in an elliptical shape, Davidson said.

Since then, the gas and dust clouds that make up much of the mass of the galaxy have flattened, and the newer stars formed within them follow more flattened orbits. But Arcturus persists in plunging erratically in and out of the galaxy's disk, an anomaly against the background of "fixed stars."

One of the oldest stars visible to the naked eye, Arcturus has survived this long because it is about the size of our sun, which is medium-sized, and so long-lived.

Absentee Treasurer

Minnesotans really shouldn't be surprised about the current flap surrounding Robert Mattson, elected Minnesota state treasurer in the November general election. He was characterized by both parties before the election (at least before the primary, as far as the DFL is concerned) as a ne'er do well whose only ambition was political.

It is not surprising that Mattson apparently hadn't found it necessary to show up for work for a couple of months. What is surprising is that he seemed to be missed and that other constitutional officers were concerned about his absence.

Leaving the state office unattended is not uncommon practice for constitutional officers. How else could the people in those offices flit around the country on the campaign trail? Can we believe Warren Spannaus was in his attorney general's office on a daily basis and conducting his campaign for governor after hours prior to last year's primary? His absences to campaign for himself and others are typical.

From a practical standpoint, constitutional offices with the exception of governor have little more than figurehead status in Minnesota. The people who are elected to those offices cannot begin to know the operations of their departments as well as the salaried personnel who do the work. Elected officers probably get in the way more than they provide any insight of assistance.

So we don't get too upset about an elected officer not doing work he doesn't know how to do. As taxpayers, we are probably better off if he doesn't meddle. But we do believe the people of Minnesota are entitled to have honest, forthright and respectable people in state offices, and we aren't sure that Mattson qualifies.

Mattson claims he has Minnesota residency (required of state office holders) through ownership of property on Lake Leander near Britt. A neighbor says he has never seen Mattson at the house he claims as his legal residence, St. Louis county officials say they have no record of a Robert W. Mattson owning property near Lake Leander, and the driver and vehicle services division of the Minnesota department of public safety say a state driver's license issued to Mattson on January 28 and mailed to the Britt address was returned by the post office and stamped "Wrong Address".

Newsmen have also brought to light a written claim to Florida residency signed by Mattson's wife, thereby qualifying the Mattsons for resident tax advantages in that state. Mattson has said he was forced to be out of the state much of the time since last November's election because he was trying to sell his home in Florida and dispose of business interests.

Obviously, Mattson is not entitled to residency in two states. He is either ineligible to serve as Minnesota state treasurer or he is a non-resident for Florida tax purposes. That rather sticky situation poses a bigger question about his fitness to serve than his unwillingness to show up on the job.

Dairy Supports

This viewpoint on dairy price supports is provided during June Dairy Month by the American Dairy association of Minnesota:

June is celebrated as "Dairy Month" by individuals and organizations involved in dairying throughout Minnesota, and dairy farmers are taking the opportunity to try to dispel what they feel are some widely held misconceptions about their business.

Twenty-five years ago there were almost two million dairy farms supplying the nation with dairy products; today, the number is around 200,000 and there are far more consumers to supply. To meet this challenge, dairy farmers have had to increase their production capabilities, and invest heavily in expensive land, equipment and facilities.

Yet, today we hear much about the government's milk price support system in regard to an oversupply of dairy products. President Reagan's giving away cheese that had been stockpiled in government warehouses was an example.

What most people fail to remember is that milk and milk products, as one of the four basic food groups in our national food supply, can come from only one source: the dairy farm. To guarantee national independence from foreign food sources, it is necessary to insure that dairy farmers can stay in business and continue to supply the country with their vital products.

Traditionally, patterns of demand for dairy products have varied considerably throughout the year, and dairy farmers must be in a position to supply peak demand periods. Unfortunately, when demand weakens, herds of dairy cattle are unlike production processes in other industries which can be slowed or temporarily shut down. The cows continue to produce milk, regardless of what is happening at the supermarket dairy case, and the dairy farmer must continue to feed his herd, operate machinery and run his business, all costing money. In short, the very nature of a dairy farm operation makes it impossible to vary production with short term rises and falls in product demand.

The much talked-about government price supports simply guarantee the dairy farmer that he will be able to sell his product at a price which will keep him in business; a business which helps insure that Americans will continue to be the best-fed nation in the world, free from the dependence on foreign sources of food, and at reasonable cost.

Cart Leads The Horse

Following editorial is from the Roseau Times-Region:

After attending the meeting about Lake of the Woods fishing at Warroad, last week, listening to the arguments about the phase-out bill which is to gradually eliminate commercial fishing on the lake, we have come to the conclusion that the legislative action was ill considered, not in the best interests of the lake and provides an uncertainty as to the possibilities of lake management in the future.

There was an agreement reached. Political pressure by sportfishing groups apparently influenced the legislature to ignore that agreement. That is, of course, the prerogative of the sport fishermen and the legislature, but it is, in our opinion, short-sighted to suddenly legislate away an agreement which had been negotiated through mutual consultation of the parties affected.

The telling point, which the legislature apparently decided to ignore, is that there is a study being conducted on the lake which would provide information upon which to base either a continuation of, or a phase-out of, the commercial fishing venture. It would also, it is believed, provide some information about the role rough fish play in the ecology of the lake.

This study was ignored by the legislature in its deliberations it seems; and while commercial fishing is to phase out, there will be practically the same level of fishing for the period of the study. This doesn't make sense. It would have been logical for the legislature to wait for the completion of the study and then, if desired, eliminate the commercial fishing. The determination would then be made on better information and more logical grounds.

We understand the feelings of sport fishermen who view the take of walleye from the lake with apprehension. We also understand the feelings of the commercial fishermen whose future is at stake. But if the study showed that commercial fishermen are needed to control the rough fish and that the "renewable resource" is such that remaining fish are an unneeded surplus, the removal of the industry would be costly in the rough fish removal program would have to be implemented. Such a program is now in operation in combination with the commercial fishing which will go on for more years under the bill. The "resource" isn't defined now, but might be later by the study.

If the study were to show that commercial fishing should be eliminated, well and good. If it showed that it should stay, well and good. That would be the time for legislation. As it was, the legislature appeared to put the cart before the horse... perhaps in quest of some $40 millions in extra license monies from which the "buy out" might come.

Borrowed Nonsense:

A man with a bad case of hiccups stopped at a drive-in teller window to cash a check. The teller ran a computer verification of his account, then said, "I'm sorry I can't cash this, sir. Your account is overdrawn by $5,000."

"That can't be," the man stammered. "It's impossible. There must be some mistake. You have to be kidding me."

"Yes, I 'm," the teller smiled as she handed him the cash. "And there's no charge for curing your hiccups."

A loser is a guy who thinks he hears opportunity knocking but finds out it's his mother-in-law moving in.

BID?... I'm ready for bed! The excitement at the Kidney Fund auction held on Saturday and Sunday at the Thief River Falls sports arena proved to be just too much for little Caleb Nelson, three month old son of Terry and Judy Nelson of Thief River Falls. He blissfully slept through the action as bargain hunters competed to buy donated items, with all proceeds going toward the effort of fight kidney disease. Approximately $5,000 was raised through the two-day sale, which has become an annual event in Thief River Falls.

Smith Replaces Youngquist At N.W. Station

B.E. Youngquist

L.J. Smith

University of Minnesota's northwest experiment station at Crookston will have a new superintendent July 1 when Larry J. Smith, a scientist on the Crookston station's staff, will succeed Bernard E. Youngquist, who is retiring after 27 years as superintendent.

Smith is a native of Pierz, where he was reared on a grain farm and worked on his family's farm equipment dealership. He holds a bachelor of science degree in agricultural education and master of science and Ph.D. degrees in agronomy from the University of Minnesota.

Smith has been on the staff of the northwest experiment station since 1971, doing agronomic research on many crops until 1978 and heading the sugarbeet research effort for the entire state of Minnesota from 1978 until the present time. He and his wife, Sandra, a registered nurse, have one daughter.

Retiring superintendent Youngquist, originally from Finlayson, has worked in education or research throughout his career. He holds a bachelor of science degree in agriculture, a master of arts degree in education and a Ph.D. with emphasis on rural education and sociology from the University of Minnesota.

Youngquist began his career as a vocational agriculture instructor at Starbuck in 1939. During World War II he served as a civilian instructor in the U.S. army air corps and as a commissioned officer in the U.S. navy in the European and Pacific theaters.

Youngquist's affiliation with the University of Minnesota began in 1946, when he joined the staff of the west central experiment station and the west central school of agriculture, now the University of Minnesota, Morris. In 1952, he became the principal of the southern school of agriculture, now the University of Minnesota technical college at Waseca. In 1956, he became superintendent of the northwest experiment state and the northwest school of agriculture, now the University of Minnesota technical college at Crookston.

As a professor emeritus, Youngquist plans to work on histories of the University of Minnesota campuses and experiment stations at Crookston, Waseca, and Morris; of the Red River Valley winter shows, with which he has been much involved; and the valley's commodity and development organizations. He and his wife, Bernice, will continue to live in Crookston.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

In regard to the dairy support price, there would be no surplus of dairy products if we did not import much more than we export.

These are supposed to be U.S. figures: In 1979 U.S. exported $79 million worth and imported $500 million worth; in 1980 we exported $101 million worth but imported $486 million worth.

Figures for 1981 show we (U.S.) imported twice as much as we exported. Is this the dairyman's fault?

Your's truly,

Pest Control Is Emphasized During June

To help make known the importance of proper pest control, President Reagan has designated June as national pest control nonth. It's a time for homeowners to learn about troublesome pests and how to deal with them.

The National Pest Control association reports that spiders are one of the common pests that we face. Others include flies, common ants, cockroaches and mice.

If any of these were to be recognized for outstanding accomplishments, cockroaches would certainly win for their ability to survive for over 350 million years despite human efforts to control them. They thrive in a warm, moist environment and will eat almost anything. They can even feed on paper or dirty clothes.

Logically, one of their favorite places to hide in the home is in the kitchen, especially under or behind appliances and cracks and crevices. No room is immune, however, if its contruction or furnishings provide shelter.

While it is essential that food scraps not be left out to tempt the insects, even the neatest of housekeepers can be bothered by cockroaches. They often are carried inside in grocery bags or soda cartons and are likely to wander in through open doors or windows. Once there, they multiply rapidly.

There are ways to deal with them, though. Several varieties of pesticides may be purchased for use in the home. If you choose one of these, follow the directions on the label carefully.

The National Pest Control association (NPCA) offers these tips for pest-proofing your home:

Get rid of trash daily or at least get it out of your house; clean up crumbs and spills immediately; don't leave dirty dishes or leftovers on the counter overnight; store food in tightly closed containers; carefully inspect incoming grocery bags and soft-drink containers; screen outside windows and doors; and keep your pets insect-free.

Republic And Union Reach Agreement

Republic Airlines and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers (IAM) recently reached an agreement on terms for a new contract. The IAM has recommended that its 2,500 Republic members approve the contract.

Union has been reviewing terms of Republic's offer, which the airline says the company and its employees can live with. Terms of the contract are not being revealed by either the company or union, pending the approval vote.

"Republic is pleased that it was able to settle this matter without a work stoppage, and preserve its 35-year record of operating without a strike," said the airline's president and chief executive officer, Daniel F. May.

Expect Tourism In State To Have Good Year

Memorial day weekend opened what is expected to be a prosperous summer for the Minnesota tourism industry, according to the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA).

Increased holiday travel, a bigger demand for AAA routings, and strong park and resort area activity indicate that Minnesota should have a very good summer vacation season, said AAA director of travel Ruth Robb. "More travelers are choosing Minnesota destinations," she noted, "probably due to increased support of tourism by the state and more aggressive promotion this year by individual resort and campground operators."

Minnesota travel information center is recording travel information inquiries double or higher than last year's figures, and reports that many state campgrounds are already booked for the first few weekends of the summer.

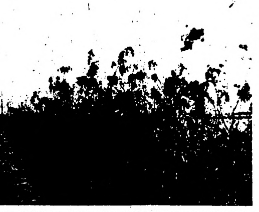
Nationally, summer travel will increase 12 per cent this year, to the highest level since 1978, the industry-financed U.S. travel data center in Washington, D.C., projected earlier this month.

Minnesota AAA's Memorial day fuel survey found plentiful gasoline supplies all over the state and a sufficient number of stations open to meet driving needs throughout the holiday.

AAA reports that gasoline prices are up only slightly from one year ago, due to recent federal and staee gasoline tax increases. According to the survey, current average full-service prices in Minnesota are: regular, $1.326; unleaded, $1.38; premium, $1.601; unleaded premium, $1.552; and diesel, $1.216.

Average self-service prices are: regular, $1.241; unleaded, $1.291; premium, $1.361; unleaded premium, $1.449; and diesel, $1.109. (All prices reported above are cash prices per gallon after discounts.)

Approximately one-fourth of the stations surveyed offered a three to five cents-per-gallon discount to cash-paying customers.



HONEYSUCKLE VIRUS which is spread by the honeysuckle aphid creates "witches brooms" such as those pictured above on infected bushes. The deformed growth is a tip-off to aphid damage and the diseased parts should be clipped off and burned to prevent reinfection. Orthene chemical application in spray form may be used to control aphids that spread the disease. Tartarian variety of honeysuckle, used extensively in farmstead windbreaks in this area, is very susceptible to the virus. It is not known whether the virus will kill the plant upon first infection, but it is known that continuing infection will cause poor growth and probable death of the plant. More resistant varieties are expected to be available for area planting in the next couple of years, according to Ralph Rundell, soil conservation technician with the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district.

ARCHERY competition winners in in the 4-H shooting sports project were (left to right) First, Chad Johnson, Kratka; Second, Robby Finstad, Happy Acres; and Third, Charlie Panek, Silverton. Volunteer teacher was Dana Klos. Archery is one of the areas included in shooting sports, which is a new 4-H project in Minnesota. In the beginner phase, each 4-H member is exposed to using an air pistol, air rifle, archery, firearms safety and a wildlife project. County project leaders are Gary and Bev Finke.

A large number of clinics will be set up at the registration site. Included will be the popular plant pest clinic for field and horticultural crops and the sprayer calibration and nozzle selection clinic. Representatives of the UMC Technical College and the University of Minnesota St. Paul campus will be available to answer questions of prospective students.

A noon lunch will be served in the College Food Service. Free refreshments will be available on the grounds sponsored by the area agri-business people.

Parade Held On Sunday At Camp Ripley

Minnesota army national guard's 47th "Viking" infantry division conducted a parade and review ceremony at Camp Ripley, seven miles north of Little Falls on Sunday. This was the first full scale parade the Minnesota-based division had conducted since 1979.

Approximately 5,000 of the state's citizen-soldiers participated in the ceremony on the parade-airfield located in the center of the camp's contonment area, one of the major highlights of the troops' annual encampment. They are spending nine days of the 15-day period living, training and sleeping in the field. Sunday evening after the parade, the troops returned to the field to prepare for a combined arms exercise that will begin on Tuesday.

In addition to the parade, there were unit displays of equipment and weapons; music provided by the Viking division's marching band; tours of the Camp Ripley military museum and many other activities.

State-owned 53,000-acre training site is located in Morrison county, just off highway 371 between Little Falls and Brainerd. The national guard is a reserve component force, unique in that it has the dual mission of preparing troops for a national emergency and providing service to the state at the call of the governor.

Legion Has Busy Schedule

This will be a busy week for the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team, with fans being given an opportunity to watch 14 games over the next seven days at the fairgrounds diamond.

A recent addition to the schedule will find Gonvick here tonight (Monday) for a 6:30 p.m. game. Then as scheduled, Thief River Falls hosts Class AA Ninth District opponents Moorhead Tuesday in a 6 p.m. doubleheader and East Grand Forks Thursday for a 7 p.m. Northwest League game.

On the weekend, an eight-team invitational tournament will be played here featuring Thief River Falls, Grafton, Warroad, Gonvick, Red Lake Falls, Bagley, Karlstad and the Elmwood Giants of Winnipeg. The new wrinkle to the Thief River Falls schedule will include two games Friday night, five games throughout the day on Saturday, then three more on Sunday in the single-elimination tournament with a consolation bracket.

It should be an interesting week of baseball for the youthful Thief River Falls squad. Those games against Moorhead and East Grand Forks will be important since they'll count in the regular season results that will determine seeding positions for the new Class AA Ninth District tournament playoff format. The six Class AA Ninth District teams — East Grand Forks, Crookston, Thief River Falls, Moorhead, Fergus Falls and Detroit Lakes, will square off in a double-elimination tournament at Moorhead July 28-31, with the winner facing the Class A Ninth District winner in a best 2-out-of-3 state tournament-qualifying Ninth District championship series.

Until proven otherwise, the Moorhead Blues rank as the Ninth District favorite again this summer, a title they've won nine of the past 11 years, including 1982 when the single-class tournament was played in Thief River Falls. While the inexperienced Thief River Falls club might have its hands full with Moorhead, Thursday's encounter with East Grand Forks should be a good match-up between two teams who have had an interesting rivalry over the years.

Featuring a small-town field, the weekend tournament is an extra bonus for the participants. There's added incentive when playing for a championship, and it'll give the teams an opportunity to compete under a tournament format before post-season play arrives a month later.

Miscellaneous

+ Lincoln high school graduate Larry Peterson, whose coaching helped turn losing basketball programs into winners at both Roseau and Appleton, has been named principal and athletic director at Twin Valley. Meanwhile, former Lincoln coach Jim Sims announced last week that he had turned down an opportunity to be an assistant coach on the Moorhead State University football staff for personal reasons and will remain as head football coach at the University of Minnesota-Crookston, a position he's held since leaving the Prowlers after the 1975-76 school year.

+ Bemidji American Legion baseball team opened its 1983 season Wednesday by dropping both games of a doubleheader at Wadena 3-2 and 4-3 due in part to wildness on the part of Bemidji pitchers. In the opener, Doug Garrigan walked six batters and had two run-scoring wild pitches. In the nightcap, Mike Johnson wasted a one-hitter by walking 13 Wadena batters. Bemidji high school's top pitcher this spring, Govind Nadesan, isn't eligible for American Legion baseball this summer because of the program's 19-year-old age limit.

+ Thief River Falls' American Legion baseball team line-up suffered a loss last week when Jim Hallamek underwent an appendectomy. The catcher-third baseman was one of only three senior full-time starters playing Legion ball this summer off the 1983 Lincoln high school baseball team. Shortstop-pitchers Tim Bottem and Kerry Wollin are the other two. Others with varsity experience are Kirk Jenson, a part-time starter this spring at second base; Al Ness, who did a lot of catching for the Prowlers, but was often left out of the batting order because of the designated hitter rule; Ryan Drees, who saw a little mound duty near the end of the year; and Gary Cornell, a starter at first base who missed most of the spring season because of an appendectomy.

—Men's Slow Pitch—

Unbeaten Wennberg's Welding and winless Falls Clinic both had their status changed Friday during a busy 10-game make-up schedule in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association.

Wennberg's Welding stretched its season-opening winning streak to eight games with a first-game 8-5 victory over Pamida Discount Center, but the Division III leaders lost the second half of the split twinbill with a 9-4 setback at the hands of Division II leading Berkner Agency-Best Western Inn.

Meanwhile, Falls Clinic, after eight straight losses to open the season in Division I, beat Norwest Insurance Agency of Division II by an 11-4 count, giving everybody in the 26-team league at least one win this summer.

E.T.'s Bees remained the only unbeaten team, with the Division I leaders going 8-0 by beating American Family Insurance-Co-op Oil 5-0 Thursday and knocking off First Federal Savings & Loan Association 14-1 Friday.

Lee Sorensen Wins TRF Father's Day Golf Title

Lee Sorensen of Red Lake Falls shot a two-over-par 110 Sunday to win championship flight honors in the annual Father's Day shortstop golf tournament at the Thief River Country Club.

A former Lincoln high school and Northland community college golfer, Sorensen fashioned rounds of 38-34-38 for his second Thief River Falls Father's Day golf title — having won it back in 1972 as a high school senior.

Marv Carlson of Thief River Falls was two shots back yesterday with a 112, shooting rounds of 41-34-37.

Dick Penning of Fargo was third in the field of ten championship flight golfers with a 113 on rounds of 38-38-37. Penning is a Lincoln graduate who was a teammate of Sorensen on the 1974 Northland Region 13 championship team that competed in the NJCAA national tournament at Ft. Meyers, Fla.

Jim Geatz, a Lincoln junior this past school year, was fourth yesterday in the championship flight with a 114 as he covered the nine-hole course with rounds of 38-36-40.

First flight — finals: Bob Forberg def. Dave Geatz; consolation winner: Dave Kildahl.

Second flight — finals: Wayne Krueger def. Al Buhl; consolation winner Joel Carlson.

Third flight — finals: Jim Barry def. Art Welter; consolation winner: Wally Kruger.

Fourth flight — finals: Bill Corliss def. David Peterson; consolation winner: Arnie Lee.

DNR hotline

1. How many acres did the DNR plant to trees this year? What were the main species of trees planted?

About 8,500 acres were planted and 2,000 acres seeded — norway pine 44 per cent; jack pine 17 per cent; white spruce 32 per cent; miscellaneous species seven per cent. Black spruce and jack pine were the only species that were seeded. George Miller, regional silviculturist.

2. Do orchids grow in Minnesota? Where can a person observe them? When do they blossom?

Minnesota has at least 46 different orchids and some are fairly common, but most are hard to find except when in blossom. Some are very small, (less than 3-inches tall) and have green blossoms making them even harder to see. Orchid species, like many other plant groups having large numbers of species, tend to have one or two species blossoming each month of the growing season.

All are slow growing and should not be disturbed as they can be killed quite easily. Several state parks have trails established for observing orchids. Lake Bemidji and Scenic state parks have constructed boardwalks to see the orchids and other bog plants. Itasca State Park has an interpretive trail with a number of orchids identified.

For those wishing to take a drive and see large numbers of Moccasin Flowers, the combination road and railroad right-of-way between Baudette and Warroad has large numbers of Large and Small Yellow Lady Slippers and Showy Ladies Slippers blossoming now. These will be blossoming for the next two or three weeks. Enjoy observing them, but do not pick or handle them as they are all protected by state law and they can cause severe rashes on persons that are allergic to them. Paul Rundell, Regional Resource Coordinator.

3. Got a question, a complaint, or a suggestion regarding how your natural resources are managed?

DNR Hotline is your direct channel to a representative who will answer you, whether it concerns parks, fish, wildlife, forests, waters or minerals. Write: DNR Hotline, 2115 Birchmont Beach Road NE, Bemidji, MN 56601; telephone 217-755-3976.

Having recently graduated from a local high school, I would like to know how to obtain employment with the state of Minnesota in the Bemidji area. I have taken two years of shorthand and typing, one year of bookkeeping and an office procedures course. Is there employment in the Bemidji area and what wages could I expect to receive?

It would be necessary for you to contact the local Economic Security-Job Service Office to obtain information on Civil Service position openings in the Bemidji area and also statewide. You must fill out an application and take an extrance exam for Civil Service positions such as Clerk Typist I, Clerk Steno I or Accounting Technician. The starting salaries range from Clerk Typist I at $5.58 per hour to Accounting Technician at $7.31 per hour. Max Hirt, Regional Business Manager.

TRF Wins 7-1 Over Warroad

Righthander Tim Bottem and lefthander Ryan Drees combined on a one-hit pitching performance Thursday as Thief River Falls won a 7-1 Northwest League American Legion baseball game at Warroad.

Bottem was the starter and the winner, pitching the first four innings. Dress pitched a not-hit, no-run ball over the final three frames as Thief River Falls evened its league record at 1-1. Warroad, a 3-0 winner at East Grand Forks earlier in the week, lost for the first time in three starts.

Only offense Warroad could muster off Thief River Falls' pitching came in the fourth when Ward Ortmann walked and was replaced on the bases by Brad Nash on a fielder's choice. Nash stole second and scored on a two-out single by Dion Hebel, the game's losing pitcher.

Meanwhile, Thief River Falls struck for a three-run first inning as Tim Nyland drew a game-opening walk and Bob Huot singled. Bottem followed with a two-run double, moved up on a one-out single by Al Ness and scored on a suqeeze bunt laid down by Brian Kemnitz.

Bottem had his second double of the game leading off the third and scored on a two-out single by Kemnitz. Two Warroad errors allowed Kemnitz to score.

Bottem continued his offensive production even after he was shifted from the mound to second base when he walked to lead off the fifth, stole second and scored on a triple by Kerry Wollin.

Final Thief River Falls run crossed the plate in the sixth when three walks loaded the bases and Bottem scored Gary Cornell with a sacrifice fly.

A seventh inning Popplers rally fell a run short Friday in a 7-6 loss to Schmidts-Coke in the Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league.

Schmidts-Coke spotted Popplers an early 3-1 lead after two innings before scoring five runs in the middle innings for the win.

After the two teams had traded first inning runs, Popplers picked up a pair of runs in the second on a walk to Keith Charbonneau, Brian Peterson's bunt single, a sacrifice bunt and Tim Nyland's two-run single to right.

Schmidts-Coke took a 4-3 lead in the fourth on a walk, three singles and an error. Popplers tied the contest in the fifth before Paul Walker's long home run over the center field fence with a man aboard in the bottom of the inning upped the margin to 6-4. Greg Harder's two-bagger and a Nick Drees sacrifice fly finished the scoring in the sixth for the winners.

Popplers provided some thrills in the top of the seventh when Charbonneau plated a couple of runs with a bases-loaded single to left before pitcher Mark DuChamp got the final out on the fly ball to right field.

Forestry Offices

Department of Natural Resources has announced that it will keep seven of its area forestry offices open on Saturdays until Labor Day as a service to the public.

DNR Forestry Director Ray Hitchcock said the Saturday office hours will be "on an experimental basis to determine its effectiveness and benefit to the public."

Saturday hours will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Offices to be open are located in Bemidji, Park Rapids, Brainerd, Moose Lake, Cambridge, Hibbing and Orr.

Information will be available on forest campgrounds and other recreation facilities, assistance programs for private forest owners, outdoor burning permits, regulations and cutting permits for fuelwood and other timber.

"If the Saturday office hours appear to answer the needs of a considerable number of persons," said Hitchcock, "we may continue and expand the service in the future."

Construction Projects

Several major construction projects have been announced by the Department of Natural Resources. Some have already been completed and others are currently underway.

At the Badoura tree nursery near Park Rapids, a modern seed extractor oven and a new building to house it has been completed at a cost of $260,000. The new extractor is modeled after a design used by the U.S. Forest Service in Colorado and is three times faster than the old process.

Other new facilities at the nursery included construction of 14 new seed beds costing $92,000, a cold storage room for seedlings costing $37,700, and five new irrigation wells costing $94,355.

A major project has been completed at the DNR's other tree nursery, the General Andrews at Willow River, involving installation of a new steam boiler at a cost of $46,000. The boiler will utilize wood pellets, replacing a fuel oil fired boiler that will be used only as a "back-up" unit.

Estimated annual savings in fuel costs will amount to $5,500.

A new boiler is also being designed for the French River fish hatchery near Duluth that will use wood pellets. Estimated cost of the new unit is $85,000 to $100,000, but the anticipated annual saving in fuel costs is $20,000 to $30,000, depending upon fuel prices.

Installation of a new pipe to carry water from Lake Superior into the hatchery has been completed at a cost of approximately $500,000. The project involved laying 1,650 feet of 20-inch diameter pipe from the hatchery out to a depth of 65 feet.

New line replaces an old 12-inch diameter pipe and has a flow capacity of 1,700 gallons per minute. Two new pumps were also installed.

Officials said all the projects were built under bids to private contractors.

National Wildlife Federation News Release

Sixty million Americans feed wild birds, and almost everything they need to know about what seeds birds like is in the National Wildlife Federation's new booklet, "Wild Bird Feeding Preferences."

When birds are offered a commercial seed mix, some types of seeds disappear faster than others — because different birds prefer different kinds of foods.

"Wild Bird Feeding Preferences," by Dr. Aelred Geis and Donald Hyde Jr., tells you that the purple finch's favorite seed is the oil sunflower. You will also discover that the titmouse likes peanut kernels, and the house sparrow prefers white proso millet. In all, the preferred foods of over two dozen birds — including the cardinal, chickadee and scrub jay — are listed.

It rates seeds according to their appeal to 13 wild birds, listing 16 commonly used seeds that range from black-striped sunflower and golden millet, to fine cracked corn and wheat. U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service urban wildlife research program conducted the research on which this publication is based.

Booklet's cover drawing, by noted wildlife instructor Bob Hines, shows these 13 birds in their normal feeding positions, with the American goldfinch on an elevated feeder eating sunflower seeds, and the brown-headed cowbird on a feeding table.

Geis' earlier publication, "Relative Attractiveness of Different Foods at Wild Bird Feeders," was published three years ago by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and was the all-time most requested publication in its series.

"Wild Bird Feeding Preferences" is available in single copies or in bulk, at the following prices; Single copy, $1; 2-25 copies, 60 cents a copy; 26-50 copies, 45 cents a copy; 51-999 copies, 35 cents a copy; and more than 1,000 copies, 25 cents a copy. Write to: Wild Bird Feeding Preferences, Dept. 157, National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th St., NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Landsat 4 is able, from a distance of 440 miles above the earth, to monitor areas as small as ¼ acre (about the size of a city lot). It can find not only the critical areas for wildlife, but tell biologists the types of plants growing in and around the areas. For example: Though an area may have the capacity to hold water, it might not be able to support the proper food and cover to benefit the ducks, geese and swans.

Annual Duck Stamp Competition Renewed

America's formost wildlife art competition — the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's annual duck stamp contest — opens for entries on July 1.

This year's art judging, to be held November 8-9, will select the design for the 1984-85 migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp. That stamp will be issued on the 50th anniversary of the federal hunting stamp program and will camp half a century of public support for the nation's waterfowl conservation effort. Duck stamp was first issued in 1934.

During the past 50 years, over 3.5 million acres have been acquired as national wildlife refuge system lands or waterfowl production areas with more than $400 million in revenue ($256 million in direct duck stamp receipts and $144 million from accelerated wetlands acquisition loan funds).

Duck stamp was the brainchild of noted political cartoonist and conservationist J. N. "Ding" Darling, later chief of one of the Fish and Wildlife Service's predecessor agencies, the Bureau of Biological Survey. The colorful stamp is the means by which waterfowl hunters show payment of their annual migratory bird hunting tax.

Duck stamp is required of all migratory waterfowl hunters 16 years of age and older. The program is the longest-running, annually-issued series of stamps in U.S. revenue stamp history; nearly two million of the $7.50 stamps are sold every year, yielding $15 million annually for the acquisition of prime waterfowl habitat. Between 1934 and 1949, the design for each year's stamp — featuring a depiction of a duck, goose, or swan — was commissioned by the federal government. Since 1949 the designs have been selected by a contest that has emerged as the wildlife art world's premier annual event.

"This year's contest carries added significance, since the winning design will appear on the 50th anniversary stamp, which will go on sale in mid-1984," says Fish and Wildlife Service Director Robert Jantzen. "Beyond the prestige that this contest carries is the importance of the duck stamp in providing the financial base for waterfowl conservation. Of course, the real tribute, after 50 years, should go to the American sportsmen who pay the bill every hunting season."

Entries for the 1983 judging, open to all citizens and residents of the United States, can be sent in any time on or after July 1, but must be received or postmarked no later than midnight, October 1. November 8-9 judging will be held at the Department of the Interior auditorium.

Fish and Wildlife Service has also announced the following selected rules, among others, for this year's contest:

+ All entries must be accompanied by a non-refundable $20 entry fee.

+ Dominant feature of each entry must be a live, non-extinct North American migratory duck, goose or swan of the scientific family Anatidae. The following five species are ineligible as entries for this year's contest, having been selected as winning designs during duck stamp contests over the past five years: Green-winged teal, mallard, ruddy duck, canvasback and pintail.

Copies of the complete rules and regulations for the 1983 duck stamp contest and the reproduction rights agreement are available from the Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp Contest, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240. Entries must be submitted to the same address.

Farm Legislation Summary Given

At the mid-point in the four-year 1981 farm bill, a number of changes are being contemplated in U.S. farm programs. This report will bring those interested up-to-date on a number of these proposals which could be implemented in the coming summer months, according to Congressman Arlan Stangeland. He was provided the following special report.

Payment-in-Kind: The PIK program, which will give federally-owned surplus commodities to farmers who reduce their planted acreage, is underway. By discouraging overproduction and reducing the surplus, PIK hopefully will stabilize and strengthen commodity prices. This will reduce taxpayer expenditures for deficiency payments and surplus storage.

At this time, the PIK program is just set for this year, but I believe it will be necessary for Congress to extend PIK through the 1984 growing season.

To encourage farmers to enroll in PIK this year, I joined other farm-state Congressmen in pushing for IRS reforms that would not treat PIK payments as income for farmers until they sold their entitlements on the market. This was signed into law and expanded PIK enrollment.

Dairy Changes: Last year, federal purchases of surplus dairy products exceeded $2.3 billion. Everyone wants to reduce that figure, but it must be done in a sensible way that will both control overproduction and keep dairy farmers in business.

I supported a bill which would have paid farmers $10 for every hundredweight of milk which they did not produce below a recent production base. This would have been funded by giving a lower support price to those dairymen who exceeded their past production base.

This was approved by the House dairy subcommittee, but the full agriculture committee picked another bill. It would offer the same $10 "paid diversion", but it would be funded by reducing the support price for all dairy farmers, not just the overproducers.

I opposed this because it forced dairymen who were reducing production to pay for their own "paid diversion." The bill approved by the full committee, H.R. 1875, is expected to come to the House floor sometime in mid-July.

Freezing target prices: An important compromise that helped the 1981 farm bill to pass by a 205-203 margin was the guarantee that target prices for wheat and feed grains would be raised by set amounts in each year of the four-year program.

This spring, Agriculture Secretary John Block asked Congress to freeze target prices at 1983 levels for the last two years of the program. He said that inflation has been dropped from 20.5 per cent to under four per cent, and the PIK program would bolster market prices, so the safety net of target prices and deficiency payments would not have to be raised.

I opposed this plan because he could not guarantee that inflation would remain low and a one-year PIK program would not cover the two-year needs of farmers.

Reducing Federal Surpluses: I recently endorsed a bill (H.R. 1590) which would instruct the secretary of agriculture to distribute "processed" surplus commodities to institutions which feed the American poor and our school children. This is a common-sense approach that can help meet the nutritional needs of students, our elderly and America's impoverished. It would also decrease taxpayers' expenditures for storing the surplus commodities and reduce the downward pressure on commodity prices created by the government-owned surplus stocks.

A similar bill is being offered by Senator Bob Dole (R-KS) in the Senate. Congressional action is expected on these bills in the next few weeks.

Trading Dairy Goods For Stategic Materials: I recently co-sponsored a bill (H.R. 3295) which will instruct the agriculture secretary to trade not less than 15 per cent of the federal dairy surplus for strategic materials which the U.S. must import each year.

The situation is that many of the materials which we must have are located in countries which have a desperate need for dairy products. Last year we traded surplus dairy goods for bauxite from Jamaca, but red-tape made that a very difficult proposition.

This bill would allow the agriculture secretary to release CCC-held dairy stocks to private traders who would arrange deals with mineral-rich nations. In return for slightly more milk than the price of these materials, they would deliver these resources to the U.S.

This would reduce the cost of storing U.S. dairy commodities and would improve our national economic security.

Grain Elevator Failures: One of the most frustrating and ruinous situations our farmers can face is when they have stored grain in a commercial elevator which goes bankrupt. They can be wiped out while waiting for a judge to determine who owns the grain in the elevator.

The Senate has passed legislation that would guarantee these farmers, a first priority in their commodities, and would place a time limit on the judges' deliberations. It took similar action four times in the last Congress, but the House has failed to act. I have thrown my full support behind two bills (H.R. 1031 and H.R. 1800) that would solve this problem, expediting settlements for farmers with "hostage" commodities in failed elevators.

These farmers would be placed in the "first tier" of creditors. Judges would be instructed to release their grain within 120 days. Warehouse receipts and scale tickets would be all that was necessary as evidence of ownership of stored commodities.

In order to get faster Congressional action, the basic provisions in H.R. 1031 have been included in a general consumer debtor bill (H.R. 1800) which is expected to see House action in the immediate future.

AREA
DAU ESTATE

VIKING CEMETERY is a quiet, restful area just east of county road 38 in Section 20 of Viking township, two miles west and two miles north of Viking. Most of the graves in the cemetery are located on land originally donated for cemetery purposes by Mathias Tostrup following the death of his first wife, Marie. New area of the cemetery and space for expansion has been provided by the Dau family and the Venus Dau estate (note sign in foreground). This photo is taken looking toward the north. A unique cooperative arrangement between the township and city of Viking provides maintenance for the cemetery.

Viking Cemetery Rises From Wish Of Pioneer

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

"The fall came and Maria continued to fail. By September she was confined to her bed. They both knew the end was near. Maria told Mathias, 'Promise me you will continue with the plans we have made. Time will heal everything. God must have a plan.'

"On October 12, 1886, Maria died at the age of twenty-two. She was buried near the north line of their homestead close to the Indian trail. Mathias then gave a piece of his land to the township for a cemetery. His only request was that no one be charged for a burial site."

These two paragraphs from a biography of Mathias Tostrup written by Arne Samuelson of Thief River Falls and formerly of the Viking community provide a background for the origins of the Viking cemetery — a unique cooperative effort built on necessity, trust and resourcefulness. Samuelson's book is entitled simply "Mathias", and is a basic biography — perhaps with a few historic liberties taken — of one of the early settlers of the Viking area.

In his introduction to the book, Samuelson notes that it is dedicated to the memory of early settlers, especially the Tostrups. "While some is fiction, it is mostly true, and it depicts the life of the early pioneers," he wrote.

Mathias Tostrup was married in Norway in the spring of 1882 to Maria, the stepdaughter of his sister, Anne Johnsen. They sailed for America the day after their wedding, destined for Warren, where a former friend had gone. The crossing of the ocean took three weeks and they traveled by train to Warren.

Mathias and his friend Pete trekked east through boggy country until they reached a ridge along which the Pembina trail ran. Mathias liked the lay of the land and decided to settle there, although no others had yet moved that far east. Later Maria joined him, although a cabin was only partially built. Their life was lonely without neighbors and getting supplies required a walk to Warren.

Mathias was often gone from their cabin for days or weeks at a time, working to earn money for their needs or cutting wood, hunting or trapping. After his wife's death, he continued on the farmstead alone, corresponding later with a young woman he had known in Norway. In 1897 he proposed marriage to her, and in 1898 Bertha Didricksen came to America to become his bride. She was 36 years old at that time and Mathias was 52.

In the spring of 1920 the Tostrups sold their farm to the county for use as a gravel pit, sold their property at auction and moved to Viking. Mathias died in 1928 at the age of 82 and Bertha (known as Beret) died in 1957 at the age of 95. Samuelson's book recalls many of the experiences of the pioneer family.

The Tostrup legacy, however, is the Viking cemetery. It has been used by the township since the 1880's and by the city of Viking since its founding in the early 1900's. Maintenance had been on a haphazard basis over the years, but a cooperative agreement between the township and city was continued. And it has been effective despite a lack of formality and fanfare.

True to the Tostrup wish, there has never been a charge made for a burial lot. Never has there been a refusal to have someone buried there. Families of people interred pay for the costs of grave opening and closing but no charge is made for cemetery maintenance. Donations are often received and are appreciated, of course, but when more money is needed the city or township finds a way to provide it. The cemetery has

THIS IMPRESSIVE MARKER has been erected at the Viking cemetery as a memorial to the Mathias Torstrup family. Mathias donated the land for the cemetery located about four miles northwest of Viking following his first wife's death in 1886. One condition of the donation was that no one would ever have to pay a fee for a cemetery plot. The practice has been continued ever since with the township and city of Viking cooperating to provide needed funds for cemetery upkeep. A line at the center of this stone notes "Donor of This Cemetery Tract".

Carnegie Library Proposal Is Heard By City Council

Thief River Falls city council heard an architect's proposal for purchase and renovation of the old Carnegie Library building, approved signing of a joint powers agreement in opposition to unsafe types of hazardous waste disposal sites being located in the area, and noted the status of their petition to the civil aeronautics board asking reconsideration of its selection for a replacement air carrier.

Proposal on the old library building was presented by Gerald Mundt, an architect from Golden Valley, whose firm specializes in renovation of existing buildings. Mundt presented a rather formal proposal, which included site plans, proposed benefits to the city, requests to be made of the city, and a schedule of development; although he noted that plans were still in a concept stage.

Recent approval of the building for placement in the national register of historic sites was an important aspect of Mundt's proposal, since he noted that renovation of such buildings provides tax incentives for investors. Mundt said he felt he would have no problem finding investors to back his proposal, with a 25 per cent tax credit available.

Primary use of the building as proposed by Mundt would be as office space for professional people, although he indicated a "flexible" portion of the plan included operation of a combination bar and delicatessen, occupying approximately 1,050 square feet in the basement area. Mundt noted that a key area of his plan was the addition of a one-story addition of approximately 4,450 square feet to the east of the existing building. Style of the addition would match the existing building as closely as possible, and exterior of the original building would be restored to approximately its original condition. He noted that windows would be replaced with thermopane windows which would be made to look like the originals, and the interior of the building would be insulated to modern standards.

Leasable areas in the project were estimated at 3,806 square feet in the existing building and 4,020 square feet in the new addition. Mundt noted that he had not conducted any type of a marketing survey to determine the need for additional office space in Thief River Falls, but stated that he was acting on a "gut feeling" and an opinion that the city was "on the rebound." He noted that a market survey would be conducted before he went ahead with the plan.

Ways which he suggested the city would be benefited by having the project developed included:

(1) Private owners would be paying property taxes on the building and property which, based on comparable office buildings, he estimated would be $22,000 per year;

(2) City outlays for maintenance and upkeep, estimated at $2,000 per year, would cease;

(3) Money spent locally for materials and salaries for construction of the project were estimated at $200,000 for labor and $150,000 for materials, plus sales tax of

Update For Job Development Is Set On Tuesday

To provide an update on new direction for Jobs Incorporated and the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce, a combined membership meeting has been scheduled for Tuesday evening at the Best Western inn. Dinner at 6:30 p.m. will follow a social hour.

The chamber of commerce is advertising for an administrative assistant to help fill in when chamber executive vice president Jerry Sandstrom takes over the position of director of job development. A classified advertisement seeking applicants for the position is published in today's issue of the Times.

The job development concept has been accepted by the Thief River Falls city council, board of education for School District 564 and the Pennington county board of commissioners. All have voted first year funding for the program which is intended to increase employment opportunities in Thief River Falls.

The centralized job development committee which formulated the plan was organized by Stan Upham, president of the chamber of commerce, and included representatives from the city, county, school district, chamber, Jobs Inc., hospital, farm community and local residents.

The chamber of commerce has agreed to enter into a contract with Jobs Incorporated whereby 75 to 90 per cent of the chamber executive vice president's time would be devoted to job development, including use of

Deb Matero Is Assistant 'U'M Professor

Deborah A. Matero, Pennington county extension agent, home economics and family living, has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor in the University of Minnesota's agricultural extension service. The promotion becomes effective July 1, 1983, according to Norman Brown, director of the agricultural extension service.

Matero, who has been with the Minnesota extension service for five years, holds a B.S. degree in vocational home economics education.

Responsible for leadership in homemaker and youth programs, she was cited for "effective teaching of timely, useful subjects and for developing good networking relationships with other community organizations and agencies such as Northland community college, Northwest regional library, American association of university women and Inter-County nursing service." She has also contributed to programs on energy and environmental issues.

"This promotion does not change the responsibilities, assignment or future contributions Matero is making to the extension program in Pennington county. Rather, it is a recognition of her achievements and professional growth as a faculty member of the University of Minnesota," Brown said.

Class Of '33 Reunion Is Held After Fifty Years

Lincoln high school's graduating class of 1933 held their first reunion in fifty years last weekend. Of the original 114 members of the class, 54 registered for the banquet held Saturday night at the Elks Club, with spouses and guests bringing the total attendance to 86.

Events actually began on Friday afternoon with an informal gathering at the Elks Club. On Saturday afternoon classmates gathered on the steps of Lincoln high school prior to being conducted on a bus tour of the city, with Randall Noper acting as tour guide and Art Larson as bus driver. On Sunday afternoon over 60 classmates and friends attended an open house at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Randall Noper. (Mrs. Noper's late brother Oron Brandon was a member of the class.)

Decorations for the banquet at the Elks Club on Saturday evening included welcoming banners, a large paper mural with the words to the school song, and tables decorated with vases of tulips, the class flower. Coral candles also decorated the head table. Honored guests included former teachers: Ruth Legvold and Blanche Larson of Thief River Falls; basketball coach Roger Dooley of Minneapolis; and Mr. and Mrs. Randall Noper.

Following dinner, a program was given with Kenneth Pope, Gillette, WY., as master of ceremonies. Other participating class members included Woodrow Craik who welcomed the guests; Ed Korstad, Braham, who gave an invocation; and Lydia Lockrem Hanson, Maple Grove, and Eleanor Harris Lucas, Detroit Lakes, who sang. Eleanor also led the group in a sing-along. Angeline Havel Schindler, Barnesville, accompanied on the piano. Main speaker for

Class Of 1943 Plans Reunion And Gathering

Graduates of the Lincoln high school class of 1943 will have their 40th class reunion on Friday and Saturday. The class had 113 students and 16 are deceased.

Members of the reunion committee are Dolores (Ryan) Carlson, JoAnn (Holmes) Protz, Vivian (Engelstad) Carlson and Carmen (Green) Larson.

Friends of the 1943 class are invited to join in the festivities at the Elks club rooms after 9 p.m. on Saturday, June 25.

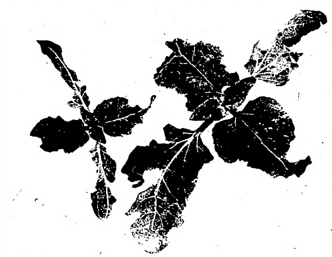
Beetle Damage To Sunflowers Isn't Severe

Sunflower beetle damage is evident in nearly all sunflower fields throughout the area but very few fields have reached the infestation level that warrants chemical control at this time, according to Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension director.

The seedling plant with two or more pairs of true leaves can withstand severe defoliation without sustaining economic losses of yield. Only in cases where the population of beetles reaches one or more per plant and there is damage evident in the terminal bud is spraying recommended at this stage, Courneya said.

There is some likelihood that control will be required when the eggs laid by these adult beetles hatch and enter the larval or feeding stage. With the wide distribution of adults present this year, it is possible that larvae counts will be high, the agent indicated.

The eggs normally hatch in one week and larvae feeding becomes evident several days after egg hatch. Spraying now will not destroy the eggs so a second application would very likely be required. University of Minnesota crop pest management agent, Carlyle Holen, has indicated that close examination of the egg deposits indicates low viability which could result in lower than expected larvae counts.



LEAF DAMAGE to area sunflowers as the result of sunflower beetles is evident in nearly all fields but usually not severe enough to warrant chemical control at this point, according to Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension agent. The plant on the left is an example of approximately 50 per cent leaf loss while the plant at right is approximately 25 per cent defoliated. Spraying is not recommended unless the infestation is one or more adult beetles per plant and defoliation is at the level of the plant at the left. Neither of the above plants shows damage to the terminal bud — the center portion of the plant which continues to provide foliage during growth and produces the eventual sunflower head. Plants bear watching, however, as larvae hatch and begin feeding.

Rev. Galland Elected To AFLC Office

Rev. Leslie Galland, Thief River Falls, was reelected vice president of the Association of Free Lutheran congregations (AFLC) at its 21st annual conference, June 15 to 19 at Osceola, WI. This will be his second one-year term.

Chosen as secretary was Rev. Bruce Dalager, Grand Forks, ND, for one year. He replaces Rev. Hubert DeBoer, Colfax, WI. Rev. Richard Snipstead, Minneapolis, is in the middle of his second three-year term as the church's president.

Approximately 385 delegates to the conference heard that the AFLC now has 138 congregations, the newest one being Mount Sion at Kasson. World missions are conducted in Brazil, Mexico and India. Permission is currently being sought to open work in Paraguay where a missionary family is now living.

Delegates asked a facilities committee to report to the 1984 conference an exact needs and costs for a new building at the two-year Bible school operated in Plymouth. The building would house classrooms, library and offices in the school which began in 1966. Also to be studied are the needs and costs for housing of students at the church's seminary also located on the same campus.

In home mission work the delegates were told that new work over the past year was started in Arlington, WA, Canton, SD, and Devils Lake, ND. Also, a congregation was organized in Tucson, AZ, Living Faith Lutheran. And for the first time in the church's 21-year history there will be an AFLC congregation in Canada, at Lake Alma, Saskatchewan.

In other conference and corporation elections Rev. Donald Greven, Kenyon, was re-elected to the co-ordinating committee, Rev. Michael Brandt, Amery, WI, to the board of trustees of the schools and Rev. Einar Unseth, Bismarck, ND to the world missions committee. Elected for the first time to the board of trustees was Arne Berge, Binford, ND. Returned to the home missions committee after a year's absence was Mr. Joel Rogenes, Ely, and re-elected to the stewardship board was Rev. E.J. Langness, Faith, SD and to the commission on Evangelism lay-pastor Verle Dean was re-elected.

Association retreat center, where the conference was held, was dedicated in a ceremony on Sunday morning by Rev. Snipstead. The ARC, a former U.S. air force radar base, was purchased several years ago.

Cemetery At Viking Honors Pioneer's Wish

had up to a dozen burials a year.

Virgil Hjelle of Viking is treasurer of the cemetery association — but there really isn't any cemetery association. There are no meetings, no officers, no minute books and no constitution or bylaws. Hjelle has had the treasurer's checkbook for about the last 15 or 16 years — since it was given to him by Arthur Anderson, a family friend who died of leukemia.

Duane Krohn keeps the book which records the burials and lot locations. He took over the task of recording from Arne Samuelson when Samuelson moved to Thief River Falls. It is the only record of the cemetery, and the word "unknown" is written on a number of the grave sites. One such site is occupied by the remains of a man who came to Mathias Tostrup's door badly injured and was believed to have fallen from the train which passed a short distance to the south. The man died while being taken to Viking for medical attention, carried no identification and was never identified.

Not all of the graves in the cemetery are marked. Krohn notes that existing graves have been encountered while digging new ones, necessitating a new start elsewhere, and that there are several sites in the cemetery where "we believe it is better not to dig".

Axel Gustafson, now 90 and a resident of the community for more than 60 years, recalls when neighbors in the area got together to "fix up" the cemetery. Graves had become sunken and the ground was uneven. Horses and horse-drawn equipment was used to level the area. That effort was made about 50 years ago. Gustafson has continued to assist in putting flags on graves of veterans for Memorial day.

Now a riding lawn mower has been purchased to help with upkeep of the cemetery. Families of interested and concerned residents continue to provide the labor necessary. In all the years the cemetery has existed, no one can recall a dispute over its operation or management. The system works, and one wonders of Mathias Tostrup wouldn't have been proud of it. It is a continuance of the pioneering spirit of cooperation and giving help when it is needed that built the community.

Hjelle notes that contributions for cemetery upkeep are welcomed from anyone and that families of people buried in the Viking cemetery have provided much of the funds needed for maintenance. The book entitled "Mathias" is available from Arne Samuelson at 405 Kneale av. S. in Thief River Falls.

One question remains unanswered. If Mathias Tostrup donated the land for a cemetery after burying his first wife there in 1886, why does the cemetery record book show the burial of Hilma Beckman there three years earlier in 1883? It is known the Beckmans farmed in the area and Hilma was born in 1878 and died in 1883. But no one seems to know if the land had been generally used as a cemetery prior to Mathias' designation in 1886.

Korpi Holstein Is State's Top Milk Producer

A six-year-old grade Holstein cow in the Larry Korpi dairy herd at Middle River has repeated as the highest producing cow in Minnesota. The placement is based on pounds of milk produced during a 305-day lactation — the standard used by the Minnesota Dairy Herd Improvement association.

When the 305-day period ended in 1983, the Korpi cow had produced 36,108 pounds of milk. Despite a comparatively low butterfat percentage, the animal also had a record of 973 pounds of butterfat. In winning the state title in 1982, the cow produced 33,897 pounds of milk and 860 pounds of butterfat in 305 days.

In becoming the state's highest milk producing cow, the Korpi animal had to perform better than 231,350 other cows in 4,428 officially tested DHIA herds in Minnesota. Average milk production per cow in the state is 14,764 pounds and average butterfat production is 549 pounds.

Because the Korpi cow aborted what would have been its fifth calf last July, it continued in the milking string for a 507-day total lactation and during that time produced 43,355 pounds of milk and 1,154 pounds of butterfat.

After producing 23,124 pounds of milk and 601 pounds of butterfat in her first lactation and 26,500 pounds of milk and 646 pounds of butterfat in the second, the cow has now recorded a production total of 119,629 pounds of milk and 3,080 pounds of butterfat during its official 305-day tests. Actual total milk producting is 130,603 pounds — the equivalent of nearly three tanker truck loads. The one cow's production to date would provide a family with a gallon of milk a day for more than 43 years.

The Korpi herd of 30 milk cows also placed fifth in the state in herd average milk production with 23,235 pounds and 50th in butterfat production with 746 pounds. A daughter of the Korpi's top producer is now in her first lactation and is producing 92 pounds of milk a day — a better average than the first year production of the top producing cow.

Energy Division Predicts Gas, Fuel Oil Use

New short-term forecast by the energy division of the Minnesota department of energy, planning and development indicates that Minnesota motor gasoline use will be down slightly in the last three quarters of 1983. It also indicates that distillate (fuel oil and diesel) demand will be down, primarily due to the Payment in Kind (PIK) farm program.

Forecast shows that for the summer months, (the peak gasoline consumption period) gasoline demand will be down 3.3 per cent. For the year as a whole, gasoline demand is forecast to be down 1.5 per cent.

These drops indicate that the effect of continued market penetration of higher miles-per-gallon cars is outweighing the effect of lower gasoline prices.

Two forecasts were performed for distillate demand for the last three quarters of 1983. The initial forecast showed that there would be basically no change in 1983 demand from 1982 demand. The forecast projected an eight per cent increase in summer distillate consumption due to growing diesel use for trucks, cars and agriculture. The continuing decline in the use of fuel oil for home heating resulted in a slight (1.1 per cent) decline being projected for the winter heating months. However, the decline in heating oil use is projected to be much less steep than it has been the past few years.

Concern that the effects of the PIK program on agricultural demand for diesel were not reflected in the initial forecast led to an adjustment of the forecast.

For the forecast period, distillate demand may decline as much as 3.7 per cent, a significant change from the original forecast, and attributable to the PIK program.

Adjusted forecast had the most dramatic effect in the third quarter (July-September), reducing the previously projected eight per cent increase in demand to a one per cent change in demand.

Minnesota Alliance for Science, a group formed to improve learning in science and mathematics, will begin its work on Thursday at 10 a.m. in the lecture hall of Coffman Union on the University of Minnesota campus.

Governor Rudy Perpich will deliver the opening address to alliance steering committee members, team members and other invited guests. The teams will present their recommendations by the end of August and continue their work toward long term improvement in learning mathematics and science.

The Minnesota Alliance for Science is funded initially by the Bush foundation and co-hosted by the center for educational development and the institute of technology at the University of Minnesota.

Private-Owned Wetlands Lose Exempt Status

More than half of Minnesota's 800,000 acres of privately-owned wetlands are no longer exempt from the property tax as a result of the law change by the 1983 state legislature, the Minnesota department of revenue said recently.

Up to now, virtually all types of wetlands in the state have been exempt from the property tax. Purpose of the exemption has been to provide an incentive for wetlands owners not to drain their lands. State policy has been to try to keep wetlands playing their natural role of retaining floodwaters, recharging groundwaters and providing habitat for wildlife.
